Report of Vessels having sailed from England and Ireland with Emigrants for St. John, N. B.

Report of Vessels that sailed from Ireland with Emigrants for St. John, N. B., during May.

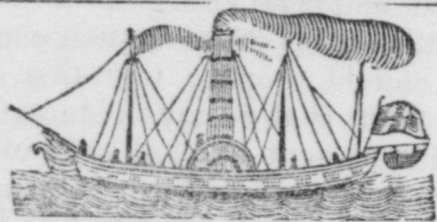

Briton, that Her Majesty and her Illustrious Consort escaped unhurt.

About five o'clock, Her Majesty, accompanied by His Royal Highness Prince Albert, proceeded in an open carriage and four, with outriders, for her accustomed drive in Hyde Park, &c., the royal equerries, as usual, accompanying the cortège on horseback. On Her Majesty's return, about a quarter past six, down Constitution Hill, within a short distance of the spot at which the former attempt at Her Majesty's assassination was made by Edward Oxford, a young man, who had previously been noticed standing with his back against the brick wall skirting the gardens of Buckingham Palace, was observed to advance towards the carriage road, along which the Royal cortège was passing, and upon the carriage containing Her Majesty and her illustrious Consort approaching the spot at which he stood, he was seen by Police constable Tanner, (A 53) to advance within three yards of the carriage, and at the same instant draw out, apparently from his waistcoat pocket, a pistol. Tanner rushed towards him, for the purpose of knocking it out of his hand, but, at the moment he seized him, the pistol went off, without as we have stated, injuring Her Majesty's person or that of Prince Albert. The instant the report was heard, a soldier of the Foot Guards, who happened to be near, ran to the assistance of the policeman, as did several other persons who came rapidly to the spot. The Royal carriage which was at the moment of the attempt proceeding at a quick pace, continued its course towards Buckingham Palace, and the prisoner was conveyed to the lodge adjoining, where he was searched by Mr. Russell, the inspector on duty, who found in his pockets a bullet and some powder, as well as the pistol, which was still warm, and affording convincing proof of its recent discharge. A cab was immediately procured, in which the prisoner was conveyed by Tanner, accompanied by the soldier, to the station-house of the A division, in Gardener's-lane. He was there questioned by Inspector Hughes as to his name, for the purpose of entering the offence in the usual manner upon the charge-sheet, when he refused to give his name or make any statement, and maintained an extreme sullenness of manner.

During the examination, however, of the persons who witnessed the transaction, it appeared that a youth who happened to be in the Park at the moment of the prisoner's apprehension, had followed him to the station house, and subsequently to the Home Office, and had recognised him to be a person of the name of Francis. On the prisoner being pressed as to whether that was not his name, he, after considerable hesitation, admitted the fact. The youth was then questioned as to his knowledge of the prisoner, when he stated that the prisoner resided at No. 105, Great Titchfield Street. Inspector Pierce, A division, was instantly despatched to the above address, which he found to be correct.

The intelligence of the desperate attempt flew like wild-fire through the metropolis, and in a very short time the Duchess of Kent, His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, Prince George of Cambridge, the Queen Dowager, the Duke of Sussex, and other members of the Royal family, as well as several of the Foreign Ambassadors, besides the Cabinet Ministers, and large numbers of Nobility, &c., hastened to the Palace for the purpose of congratulating the Queen and Prince Albert on their providential deliverance, and throughout the evening a dense concourse of persons of all classes, amongst whom we noticed a number of elegantly dressed females, surrounded the gates of the Palace.

The assassination of the reigning Monarch has always been a crime foreign from the disposition of Englishmen; and now, we should have thought, it would have been so completely so, that not a single individual could be found, between the four seas, in his right mind, who would have ever dreamed of such a thing. Let her Majesty be considered as a Sovereign, and one more deservedly popular England never knew. She came to the throne at a time which presented difficulties sufficient to baffle even a veteran in politics; but young as she was, and inexperienced, she entered on the performance of her onerous duties under the guidance of sound

THE ATTEMPT UPON THE QUEEN'S LIFE.

LONDON, June 1, 1842.

The West end of the town was thrown into the greatest consternation on Monday evening, by a report that another diabolical attempt had been made to shoot Her Majesty and Prince Albert, on returning from their usual afternoon drive. On inquiry, it was found that the report was too true. Before we give the particulars, however, we will state, what will rejoice the heart of every true
