KING'S COLLEGE ENCÆNIA.

The annual Festival of King's College was celebrated on Thursday, June 26; the Sermon before the University having been preached on the Sunday preceding by the Archdeacon, and the Examinations of the College and Collegiate School having taken place in the customary order. The Chief Justice, in his capacity of Chancellor, presided in Convocation, which was attended by the Lord Bishop of Fredericton, as President, the Master of the Rolls, the President of the Legislative Council, and the whole Academical body. The Principal delivered the Commemorative Oration. The Essay which had obtained the Douglas Gold Medal was read by Mr. George Goodridge Roberts. The following Students were admitted to Degrees:—

Edward B. Fisher, A.B., Bachelor in Civil Law.

Joseph R. Hea, A.B., Master of Arts.

Hugh M. Johnston,

Henry B. Nichols,

Thomas W. Street,

} Bachelors of Arts.

The Chancellor announced as the subject for the Douglas Medal for the ensuing year—

THE LITERARY AND SCIENTIFIC CHARACTERISTICS OF THE
19TH CENTURY COMPARED WITH THOSE OF THE AUGUSTAN
AGE.

He then addressed some remarks to the Convocation and the Undergraduates. He thanked the Reverend Principal for the Encænial Oration—in which even those who might differ from the views of the Reverend Gentleman, must acknowledge those views had been brought forward in a graceful manner, and which must have given pleasure to all who could appreciate the tasteful and appropriate use of the English Language. He expressed his satisfaction with the Essay which had gained for Mr. Roberts the Douglas Medal, in which he thought a subject somewhat difficult, had been treated by him in a manner very creditable to his research and discrimination.

He then urged on the Undergraduates the desirableness of attention to the mode of delivery, as well as the matter to be delivered, in all cases of public speaking, as a means by which the attention of the audience might be secured, and without which, however sound the views or correct the language, the main object of all public speaking, namely, to convince or persuade, could not generally be attained.

Although there was no positive instruction given in this useful accomplishment, yet all who attended the College had constant opportunities of hearing those who might be taken as good models. He need only particularly refer to the two chief dignitaries of the Church, and the Reverend Principal of the College. He thought if those whose future destiny might be the Pulpit, the Bar, or the Senate, would act on these suggestions, in after years he might deserve the thanks of themselves and their hearers.

He had much pleasure in stating that the report of the Principal and Professors was satisfactory as to general good conduct and proficiency during the Academical year now closed, and as to the latter, he could himself bear testimony to the Examination of the previous day, and was authorized to add that of his Lordship the Bishop, whose opinion in such matters was of much greater weight. He was willing to infer from this, that they appreciated the great advantages afforded by such an Institution, in which many were constantly labouring for their benefit. He trusted that those who had finished their Collegiate course, would ever hold in grateful remembrance the Institution which had done so much for them; and that those who would return, after spending some time in rational enjoyment in their homes and among their friends, would apply themselves with renewed vigour, and terminate each succeeding year of their Academical career as satisfactorily as that which was now closed.
