

His Excellency's particular desire, that the Non-Commissioned Officers of each Company should, as speedily as possible, qualify themselves for the instruction of the Force to which they belong, so as to enable him to dispense with the costly, though, at the outset, indispensable, services of Drill Instructors from the regular Army.

His Excellency has applied for a large number of Enfield Rifles, and it is his intention before issuing these, to recall all those now in use, with a view to their being placed in a state of thorough repair and re-issued, in order that no cause of complaint may arise on account of the arms held by different Companies not being in equally serviceable and good condition.

It is scarcely necessary to point out that the Companies in whose charge Rifles at present are, will be held responsible for them, and will have to make good any damage they may have suffered from carelessness or neglect.

His Excellency hopes that, out of the sum yearly voted for Militia purposes, it may be found practicable to appropriate a portion towards the erection of drill-rooms and armories in different localities. Till this has been accomplished, it is to be desired that no obstacles should be thrown in the way of obtaining for this purpose the temporary use of available public buildings, where such exist.

It is His Excellency's desire, in the discharge of his duties as Commander in Chief, so to act as shall best promote the efficiency and well being of the Militia Force, and he is anxious that the members of that Force should be assured of the cordiality with which any suggestion emanating from them will be welcomed by him, and of the attentive consideration which it will receive at his hands.
