MILITIA GENERAL ORDERS.

HEAD QUARTERS, FREDERICTON, 22nd Sept. 1864.

No. 36.

COMPLAINTS have reached His Excellency the Commander in Chief, from various quarters, to the effect that different Volunteer Companies in the Province are armed with different weapons. His Excellency is desirous of distinctly stating that this is not the case. Every Volunteer Company in the Province is armed with the long Enfield Rifle. The short Enfield Rifle, used by many Volunteer Companies at home, is not issued, and never has been issued by Her Majesty's Government to this Province. It is obviously impossible that all Companies should be armed with Rifles of exactly the same date, unless at a much greater expense than the slender means at the disposal of His Excellency would warrant; and some Companies have newer Rifles than others, some also have Rifles with rather shorter stocks than others. Those with the longer stocks are supposed to be best adapted for tall men—those with short stocks to short men; but the barrel is one and the same in all.

His Excellency strongly recommends all Volunteers intending to compete at Mount Fordham to fire with the weapon to which they have already become accustomed; but as, when it can be accomplished, he is anxious to obviate any grounds of dissatisfaction, however slight, His Excellency has been pleased to direct that a sufficient number of new short-stocked Rifles should be provided to enable such competitors as, notwithstanding this explanation and caution, may still desire to use them, to exchange their own Rifles for them during the firing for the Prince of Wales' Cup.
