

And in the name of hundreds of devoted and laborious Teachers, whose position and remuneration will be far more satisfactory than heretofore, I thank you.

"In the interest of our youth, who are provided with as good a share of natural endowments as any other in the world, I ask you to do all in your power, in your respective spheres, to give effect to the measure; and most sincerely do I hope that under its operations we may soon see, in every part of the Province, children of all denominations of christians gathered into the same Schools, sitting on the same forms, bravely competing for the same prizes, and forming youthful friendships to be continued in after years when the real life-work is entered upon, and when all denominations are inevitably gathered into the World's Great School, and side by side competing for its rewards.

"No Statesman will ever be found who could successfully resolve this great School into its Denominational elements for carrying on the business of the world; the mutual relations of commerce and industry constitutes the centripetal force which necessitates the coherence, and therefore you have acted wisely and well in providing that all, who are growing up to take their part in such an inseparable Union, shall be educated for it side by side in early life.

"Again I thank you for your diligent attention to the public business; and I feel assured, that in your respective walks of life, you will not fail to inculcate those principles of loyalty to our Sovereign and our country which have hitherto been so warmly cherished by the People of New Brunswick."
