Committals at the New Gaol .- There are at. present, 151 persons confined in this prison, upon various charges connected with the late melancholy events, 67 of whom have been fully committed, principally for the capital offences of riot and incendiarism. The prisoners are of the very iewest character, and we should not suppose that two in every ten could either read or write.

BRISTOL, NOVEMBER 14. Notwithstanding the amount of military force now in this city, we have every night proofs of its disorganized state, and the shamful neglect of the Corporate Authorities in suffering a place of so great importance and concontaining so great a population, to be placed in so delenceless a condition with reference to any thing like the protection of a Civil power. Every evening after nightfall the most dangerous characters prowl about, and except in the most public thoroughfares, the passengers are not secure from attack. A very daring attempt at incendiarism was made late on Saturday night, or early on Sunday morning, by some rulfians, who had gained access to the extensive premises of a Mr. Wild, in Radeliff street occupied in the wine and spirit business. A woman fortunately made a timely discovery of their horrible design.

A ministry not pledged to a full and efficient reform could not hold office a week ;- they would instantly be driven out of power by the force of public opinion, or by another description of force equally efficient, though not quite so agreeable.

London, Nov. 16 - The report of a change in the Administration has again prevailed the day; but we heve not been able to trace it to any authentic source.

The near approach of the Session, the silence of ministers with respect to the question, on the fate of which their continuance in power must depend, and the constant appeals made both to the Government and the people by those Journals which are most violent in calling for reform, have all conspired to countenance the opinion that ministers have met with difficulties which admit of no alternative but resignation. That the Boroughmongers should take advantage of those circumstances to circulate such a report is probable-they feel they are in a desperate situation, and have no objection to try a desperate remedy. But the transfer of the rumour from the East to the West end of the town firr it has spent but one day in each quarter] is a proof that there is not much stability in its foundation.

To judge from the present appearances we should say that few things can be more improbable than the resignation of Earl Grey and his THE Rector, Church Wardens and Vestry of undertake.
