THE SHIPWRECKED MARINERS.

The following melancholy relation was given by Captain Pollard, an American seaman, to Messrs. Tyreman and Bennet, after a second shipwreck in the South Sea; and when he was returning to his native land without his vessel. The narrative relates to his first disaster of that kind. My first shipwreck was in the open sea, on the twentieth of November, 1820, near the equator, about 118° W. long. The vessel a South Sea whaler, was called the Essex. On that day, as we were on the look-out for sperm whales, and had actually struck two, which the boats' crews were following to secure, I perceived a large one, it might be eighty or ninety feet long, rushing with great swiftness through the water, right towards the ship. We hoped that she would turn aside, and dive under, when she perceived such a bulk in her way. But no! the animal came in full force against our stern-port. Had any quarter less firm been struck, the vessel must have been burst; as it was, every plank and timber trembled, throughout her whole bulk. The whale, as though hurt by a sudden and unexpected concussion, shook its enormous head, and sheered off to so considerable a distance, that for some time we had lost sight of her from the starboard quarter; of which we were very glad, hoping that the worst was over. Nearly an hour afterwards we saw the same fish—we had no doubt of this, from her size, and the direction in which she came—making again towards us. We were at once aware of our danger, but escape was impossible. She dashed her head this time against the ship's side, and so broke it in, that the vessel filled rapidly, and soon became water-logged. At the second shock, expecting her to go down, we lowered out three boats with the utmost expedition; and all hands, twenty in the whole, got in them; seven, and seven, and six. In a little while as she did not sink, we ventured on board again; and, by scuttling the deck were enabled to get some biscuit, beef, water, rum, two sextants, a quadrant and three compasses. These together with some rigging, a few muskets, powder, &c., we brought away; and dividing the stores among our three small crews, rigged the boats as well as we could; there being a compass for each one, but neither sextant nor quadrant for the third. Then instead of pushing away for some port, so amazed and bewildered were we, that we continued sitting in our places, gazing upon the ship, as though she had been an object of the tenderest affection. Our eyes could not leave her, till at the end of many hours, she gave a slight reel, then down she sank. No words can tell our feelings. We looked at each other; we looked at the place where she had so lately been afloat; we did not cease to look, till the terrible conviction of our abandoned and perilous situation roused us to exertion, if deliverance were yet possible. We now consulted about the course which it might be best to take: westward, to India; eastward, to South America; or south-westward, to the Society Isles. We knew that we were at no great distance from Tahiti, but were so ignorant of the state and temper of the inhabitants, that we feared we should be devoured by cannibals, if we cast ourselves on their mercy. It was determined, therefore, to make for South America, which we computed to be more than two thousand miles distant. Accordingly we steered eastward, and though for several days harassed with squalls, we contrived to keep together, was not long before we found that one of the boats had started a plank; which was no wonder; for whale boats are all clinker built, and very slight; being made of half-inch plank only, before planing. To remedy this alarming defect, we all turned to, and, having emptied the damaged boat into the two others, we raised her side as well as we could, and succeeded in restoring the plank at the bottom. Through this accident, some of our biscuit had become injured by the salt water. This was equally divided among the several boats' crews. Food and water, meanwhile, with our utmost economy, rapidly failed. Our strength was exhausted, not by abstinence only, but by the labours which we were obliged to employ to keep our little vessels afloat, amidst the storms which repeatedly assailed us. One night we were parted in rough weather; but though the next day we fell in with one of our companion boats, we never saw or heard any more of the other which probably perished at sea, being without either sextant or quadrant. When we were reduced to the last pinch and out of every thing, having been more than three weeks abroad, we were cheered with the sight of a low, uninhabited island, which we reached in hope, but were bitterly disappointed. There were some barren bushes, and many rocks, on this forlorn spot! The only provisions that we could procure were a few birds and their eggs. This supply was soon reduced; the sea fowls appeared to have been frightened away, and their nests were left empty after we had once or twice plundered them. What distressed us most was, the utter want of fresh water. We could not find a drop any where, till, at the extreme verge of ebb-tide, a small spring was discovered in the sand; but even that was too scanty to afford us sufficient to quench our thirst before it was covered by the waves at their turn. There being no prospect but that of starvation here, we determined to put to sea again. Three of our comrades, however, chose to remain: and we pledged ourselves to send a vessel to bring them off, if we ourselves should ever escape to a Christian port.] With a very small morsel of biscuit for each, and a little water, we again ventured out on the wide ocean. In the course of a few days our provisions were consumed. Two men died.—We had no other alternative than to live upon their remains. These we roasted to dryness by means of fires kindled on the ballast-sand at the bottom of the boats. When this supply was spent, what could we do? We looked at each other with horrid thoughts in our minds, but we held our tongues. I am sure that we loved each other as brothers all the time; and yet our looks told plainly what must be done. We cast lots, and the fatal one fell on my poor cabin boy. I started forward instantly, and cried out, "my lad, my lad, if you don't like your lot, I'll shoot the first man that touches you." The poor emaciated boy hesitated a moment or two; then, quietly laying his head down upon the gunnel of the boat, he said "I like it as well as any other." He was soon despatched, and nothing of him left. I think then another man died of himself; and him, too, we ate. But I can tell you no more: my head is on fire at the recollection, I hardly know what I say. I forgot to say that we parted company with the second boat before now. After some more days of horror, and despair, when some were lying down at the bottom of the boat, not able to rise, and scarcely one of us could move a limb, a vessel hove in sight. We were taken on board, and treated with extreme kindness. The second lost boat was picked up at sea, and the survivors saved. A ship afterwards sailed in search of our companions on the desolate island, and brought them away. Captain Pollard closed his dreary narrative with saying, in a tone of despondency never to be forgotten by him that heard it, "After a time I found my way to the United States, to which I belonged, and got another ship. That, too, I have lost by a second wreck off the Sandwich Islands; and now I am utterly ruined. No owner will ever trust me with a whaler again: for all will say I am an unlucky man."
