

tion that I should at once advance upon the rioters in the square; my motive for proceeding along the buildings on the north side of the square was twofold: I expected that the troops would cause the dispersion of all persons inclined to be riotous;—I also wished that the troops should have a wall in their rear when they were forming;—it was impossible to say whether the rioters would attack us or retire before us. I therefore chose the spot opposite Dr. Arnold's house for forming them, as it commanded St. James Street in its front, through which I expected to be able to cause the rioters to remove, as it was the way they appeared to have come—I had perceived that the mob had received a vast accession of strength, and that it would be desirable to advance the party into the square; that support should be given to it, I therefore sent, with the sanction of the magistrate, Dr. Robertson, an order for a company from the Champs de Mars to advance for this purpose;—and that the rest of the regiment should follow, if any firing was heard. The firing I earnestly wished to avert, and intended to advance upon the mob without doing it, if it should be possible to avoid it, and cause the mob otherwise to be quiet and disperse. While the party was moving to the front of Dr. Arnold's house, many stones had been thrown in the square and against houses and shops. The troops having formed, and moved through the Place d'Armes and down St. James Street, every thing being done to prevent the constables from crowding in their front. On arriving in St. James Street, showers of stones were thrown by the mob who were before us, and I attempted by pressing on to induce them to disperse without having recourse to fire arms, if not rendered impossible by the discharge of stones, some of which were large, and I should suppose might weigh between two and three pounds, some of them appearing to have been taken from the materials of a building which was being constructed in their rear; near the Bank I halted the troops for some minutes, still with a view to give an opportunity to the mob to disperse without firing, and at that time, with this view, I called out loudly that it was intended to fire—I fancied I perceived an inclination in the mob to break up at this moment, but was disappointed, for they approached, and the showers of stones increased—I now began to despair of the possibility of quelling them without firing, but determined to give every chance, I again advanced to the party, thinking it better to make a last attempt to disperse them under a shower of stones than to make a sacrifice of human life. The mob, who never it retired or advanced, managed to maintain about the same distance, and kept in a body acting with great system in keeping up the shower of stones, as those in front kept near enough the troops to do them injury, and when they retired or advanced ran through each other like light troops skirmishing; at length apparently emboldened by the forbearance of the troops, they renewed the attack or discharge of stones to an extent, that most in a few minutes have levelled at least half of the party with the ground, and which must have been succeeded by the remainder being totally overpowered; at this moment I saw that firing was inevitable, and being called upon by a magistrate on the spot to do so, I again advanced in front of the troops and waving a stick which I had in my hand, called out in the loudest tone of voice, that the troops were going to fire; after a few seconds seeing that stones were still showered upon us, I ordered the troops to begin firing, man by man, that I might stop them the moment that I could see it was the effect of causing the mob to disperse. I was surprised that the mob did not instantly run, which seemed to me so extraordinary, that I attributed it to some cause with which I was unacquainted, they, however, very soon moved in the most sudden and precipitate manner. I instantly ordered the men to cease firing, which was immediately done.

According to our latest advices from the Mother Country, which are to the 17th November, we learn that the French Army had actually crossed the Frontiers into Holland. The future events which this movement may produce on the Continent is a subject of intense speculation, and will continue to engage the attention of Europe until the measures and designs of the Northern Powers are fully developed.

ACCIDENT.—At Bel River on the 29th ulto, Charles Hartgrove 17 years of age, lately from Fredericton, being in the woods where some persons were falling trees, was struck by one of the branches before he had sufficient time to extricate himself or observe the tree falling towards him. He lay insensible after the accident and was taken to a house in the neighbourhood and a Surgeon sent for. On the arrival of Dr. Harding, which was some hours afterwards, he found a portion of the skull fractured and depressed from the rest of the bone and the partial loss of the opposite side. The bone was immediately elevated and a number of portions removed, and the boy is now sensible and likely to recover. The fracture seems to have been produced by a knot in the branch.—Com.

CORONERS INQUEST.—A Coroners inquest was held on Tuesday evening the 8th inst. by Wm. Taylor, Esquire, on view of the body of Dennis Mara, who came to his death by falling into a well on the premises of Mr. G. W. Hart, on the corner of King's and Camperdown streets.—Verdict.—Accidental Death.

FIRE.—About five o'clock, last evening, the upper part of the dwelling house in Queen-street, was occupied by W. H. Street, Esq. was discovered to be on fire. The alarm being given, a great number of persons immediately repaired to the place, but for some time little or no exertion appeared to be making to extinguish the flames which were rapidly spreading, and threatening destruction to the surrounding neighbourhood. We have seldom seen so much indifference to the consequences as was manifested by numbers on the occasion—at a time too when the flames had made their way through the roof, the wind fresh from the Northward, and the evening cold. At length the engines were supplied with water and set to work, and fortunately the Carleton engine, arrived in a scow, from the opposite side of the Harbour, and by affording a constant supply of water to some of the other engines, was, in a great measure, the means of preventing the fire from spreading to the adjoining buildings, which only a few moments before it seemed impossible to preserve.

The roof and upper stories of the building were destroyed by the fire, and the lower part was unnecessarily much out, in the exertions made to save every thing that could be removed. Nearly the whole of the furniture, we believe, was secured, but in the hurry of removal, must have received injury. The fire is supposed to have originated from a stove pipe. The House and furniture were insured in the New-Brunswick Fire Insurance Office.

We trust from the confusion and want of system which were apparent at the fire, our City authorities will see the necessity of immediately adopting and enforcing some better regulations than at present exist, for extinguishing fires within this City. At present, we have not time to point out the many defects in the present system, or the want of system; but as it is a subject in which all are more or less interested, we shall take care that it be not overlooked.—St. John Courier.

The Nova Scotian in noticing the circumstance of the Fire in the ALBION MIXES remarks:—

"There is little doubt that the whole has been the work of incendiarism. Whether or not sufficient evidence can be obtained to convict them remains to be proved, but we should hope that such miscreants would not be allowed to escape the punishment deserved by their superlative rascality. Richard Smith, Esq. accompanied by the Solicitor General, (who goes up as an officer of government to take part in the enquiry) left town for Port on Sunday morning.

"The consequences of this piece of mischief will be—first, the gratification of a malicious spirit, or a partial dislike to the evils of monopoly—and secondly, to throw several hundred persons out of employment, put the wages of an enormous expense, and risk the certain injury, and possible destruction, of the most extensive coal field in the country. We are not sufficiently acquainted with the subject to state, what are the steps to be taken in order to subdue the flames—to stop the pits with water, however, as we believe, the last resort. This, from their proximity to the East River, could be easily done; but for a variety of reasons, (not the least of which would be a consequent mineral fermentation to a vast extent will, if possible, be avoided. We look anxiously for some further intelligence."

We are distressed to learn, by the Calypso Packet, the death of Lord James Ramsey, eldest son of the Earl of Dalhousie—the Earl of Dalhousie had been severely attacked by apoplexy, and, at the date of the last accounts, was extremely ill.—Hal Gazette.

PRIVATERRING.—There is a report afloat, connected with the Holland and Belgium business, that excites a good deal of attention and interest. It is said and believed that the Dutch Charge has instructions of authority to issue Letters of Marque against English and French commerce to vessels sailing from American ports on the news of the first hostile proceedings by the combined powers—the capturing of a ship, or the firing of a gun. The commissions will probably be eagerly sought for, and Baltimore clippers, fitted out with Dutch crews, may be got ready for sea in a very short time. Such a measure as this could hardly have been counted on by the Convention of London, but is so natural and feasible that the probability of its adoption is evident, and may have given rise to the report. It appeared first in the Albion, a weekly paper of the highest standing, the editor stating that he has it on sufficient authority to warrant his laying it before the public. It is difficult to conceive a course more likely than the arming of these privateers to bring on a serious war.—New York Standard.

THE DEMOLISHED CHAPELS IN JAMAICA.—The British Government having directed that the missionary chapels in Jamaica, which were torn down by the population immediately after the servile insurrections, under the impression that the doctrines preached in them led to the rebellion, should be rebuilt at the expense of the Colonists, the Governor of that Island on the 20th of Nov., sent a message to the Legislature, to that effect. The following was their reply:—

May it please your Excellency.

The House have taken into their serious consideration your Excellency's second Message of the 20th inst., and have to express there extreme regret that lawless violence should have subjected private property to destruction; but the dreadful calamity which has recently befallen the Island, has caused such extension of suffering to individuals, as to be beyond the power of the House to relieve, as the House have not the means to afford compensation to all who have been the victims of insubordination. It would be an act of injustice to select a few, and indemnify them, while others equally entitled to the most favourable consideration of the House, remain without any relief. The House therefore deem it necessary to leave the proprietors of the chapels and buildings devoted to religious purposes, which have been destroyed, to their remedy at law, against the parties who committed the outrages.

The Message was agreed to nem. con. and sent to his Excellency by a Committee.

PORTUGAL.—Capt. Nowell, who left St. Uves 25th Nov. has furnished us with the following information, which was given him in manuscript by a mercantile house, of that place.

General Excellency [a French officer of great reputation] was daily expected to take the immediate command of Don Pedro's army, in order to begin operations. A sortie was made on the 14th Nov. in which the Miguelites, on the side of Villa Nova, lost 600 men, killed, wounded and prisoners, and had some batteries destroyed.

The Miguelites had succeeded in forming on the South side of Oporto, a battery, commanding the bar, which annoys greatly vessels going in and out. Pedro intends to make another sortie, with a greater force, for the purpose of destroying those batteries. Spain has changed her system toward this country; it is presumed that Pedro will ultimately succeed. Miguel is at Braga, his force is considerable, but very badly commanded, and in want of every thing.

Several attacks had been previously made against Oporto, which have always been repulsed with great loss, and no other regular attack will be attempted.

Don Pedro has made Count de Villa Flor Duke of Terceira, with an allowance of 250,000 crowns out of the national property.—Boston Courier.

FRIGATE CONSTELLATION.—The New York Gazette says: "We have perused a letter to a gentleman in this city, dated on board the Constellation, Oct. 16th from which we make the following extract: 'We sailed from Smyrna on the 27th Aug. and on the 31st, while off the Island of Candia experienced a heavy gale which lasted 36 hours. After the gale had abated we shaped our course to Napoli de Romania, from thence to Athens, during which time we experienced considerable severe weather; after which we returned and arrived at Valparaiso on the 9th of Oct. where we understand that news was in circulation, that our vessel had been lost in a gale, and fearing that this report might reach you, I have written to inform you that it is false.'"

In imitation of his Divine Master, the early life of this Philanthropist was spent in administering to the spiritual and temporal relief of others. His distinguished talents as an Orator and Divine, and superior skill in Surgery, were to well known to need eulogy; but, for nearly twenty years past he was compelled by paralysis to retire from public life.
