On the subject of the North Eastern Boundary, the Courier and Enquirer of yesterday has the following paragraph: NORTH EASTERN BOUNDARY.—Various reports appear to be in circulation in Maine on the subject of an arrangement made in relation to the disputed territory, by which it is proposed to give that State an indemnity in lands elsewhere, or in money, for her accession to the decision made by the King of Holland. The Legislature have in consequence applied to the Governor for information, who informs them he has come to the conclusion, that to impart it at the present time, could not fail to be prejudicial to the negotiation instituted by the President with Great Britain in relation to the Northeastern boundary, and in that view, could not be consistent with the public good, but adverse to the interests of the State and of the United States. The deplorable state of Ireland is a subject of deep and unfeigned regret to every philanthropic mind.—Legislation seems not only to have lost its influence, but to have become a source of evil. The laws, in fact, are generally set at defiance, and consequently, as laws multiply, crimes multiply from the universal habit of breaking them. The remedy would, therefore, seem to be, to enforce obedience to the already existing laws rather than to enact new ones. In this view of the matter, we are glad to find that the Report of the Parliamentary Committee, a portion of which will be found in this day's paper concurs, and that very little in the way of legal enactment is recommended. The Committee state that the laws already existing are amply sufficient to ensure the tranquility of the country, if duly executed. The Irish Government, and the local authorities, we trust, throughout the Island, will listen to this salutary hint, and act accordingly. But the mere execution of the law is not all—the law should be brought to operate as much on one party as another, and the system of favouritism, so much and so often complained of, should be put an end to. The only new measure recommended by the Parliamentary Committee is to enable Magistrates and others to call at suspected houses, to ascertain if the individuals occupying them be absent during unreasonable hours. This, it is supposed, would have the effect of keeping those at home who might otherwise join the preparatory bands, which prowl about during the night committing all sorts of excesses. This measure, it must be admitted, looks like invading the private rights of a British subject, but when it is recollected that the law is recommended as a substitute for others still more objectionable, we may become, in some degree, reconciled to it. Kindness, perhaps, and generosity is, after all, the shortest road to the heart of an Irishman, and therefore, if the laws can be in any way mitigated in the severity of their application, it is not only in every point of view, most desirable, not from humanity, but from policy. We fervently hope that no British Ministry will ever depart from this view of the matter.

Among our other articles in reference to Ireland will be found an extract from Blackwood's Magazine which is well worthy of perusal. The statistical tables exhibit a progressive state of increase of trade and wealth which under all the circumstances of the political condition of the country could scarcely be expected. This proves, the great facilities the island affords for general advancement, and how happy and prosperous its people might soon become, if industry and order prevailed. The immense resources of the island however, have never been doubted, if it were but possible to put them in a proper state of development. The tory government have been accused of checking the enterprise of the people, and causing the evils that have of late years beset that unhappy country. It is really the fact, it is an anxious circumstance, because now that the Tories have ceased to govern, the evils of their misgovernment must soon cease also. Under these circumstances we have a right to expect a better state of things at no distant day. A happier and contented state of Ireland must be the fervent wish of every humane bosom, and whether it be brought about by a wily or a tory government is a point of no sort of importance. Let the thing be done, and posterity will bless and thank the authors of it, let them be wint they may.

On the 11th instant at Sackville N. B. Sarah Jane, second daughter of Rev. W. Smithson, Wesleyan Missionary—aged 3 weeks and 4 days. At her residence in Douglas, on the 19th inst., very much regretted for her charitable and amiable qualities, Miss Hannah Clarke, daughter of the late Doctor N. Clarke, aged 65 years.

At Northampton, on Sunday the 17th inst. Mrs. Maria, consort of Mr. Leonard Harding, and eldest daughter of Mr. Chas. Connell, senr. of that place. At once an instance of human frailty, and of Christian triumph, she endured an accumulation of sufferings, such as few are called to experience, and ere the "silver cord was loosed," could exult in the prospect of a glorious immortality. While, therefore, her weeping relatives mourn over her departure, and blend the recollection of her presence, with "joys departed never to return;" they are consoled by the knowledge that "patience, resignation, and faith, characterized her last moments; satisfactorily evidencing the existence of a "Good Hope;" and see, in the example of her early death, a practical iteration of the monitory words of the Saviour,—"Be ye also ready, for at such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh."—Communicated.
