from the rear of the House through the garden and made their escape to some of the neighbouring dwellings. The assailants pressed the evacuation of the house with such haste, that it is said they laid violent hands on the Lady Superior to hasten her move-The distress and terror of the scene were heightened by the solicitude of the nuns for one of their number, who is confined to her bed by a disease from which she is not expected to recover. The assailants forced open the doors and windows of the convent, carried most of the furniture, aand other musical instruments, into the yard, and then destroyed it. At about half-past 12 o'clock they set fire to the building, in the second story, and in a short time it was

Several fire companies from this city, from Charlestown, and from Cambridge, repaired to the scene on the first alarm, and when they ascertained the cause of the alarm a of about a year. part of them returned home. A number of the fire companies however, were presen during the conflagration, and the effectual appear to have been overruled by the great number of persons assembled, many of them evidently from a distance, for the apparent

The fire was deliberately communicated to the Chapel, to the Bishop's Lodge, the Stables, and the Old Nunnerv distance from the others. It is asserted also that the cemetery was opened and its contents taken out and exposed to view. The light, when the mob dispersed. Of the pecuniary value of the property thus destroy ed, we cannot give any accurate estimate. It is supposed to have cost from 50 to 100,000 dollars. It is stated that there was insurance against fire at the American Office, on the nunnery for $12,000, and on the furniture ing the property against outrages of this kind.

Having thus described as accurately as we are able this act of lawless violence, well find it difficult to account for the excitement any facts which can serve as an apology for him; but if public sympathy can tend to any remission or reduction further than the ger; caraway seeds; celeratis; bees' honey the act, or any palliation of its enormities. We will, however, relate the circumstances they will possess this source of consulation

In one of the papers of Friday last it was stated that great excitement prevailed in Charlestown, in consequence of the mysterious disappearance of a young lady at the nunnery; and the following was given as an accurate account of the circumstances, as far as the editor could ascertain them .-That the young lady had been sent to the nunnery to complete her education, and became so pleased with the place and its inmates, as to be induced to take the black veil; that she subsequently became dissatisfied, and made her escape from the institution, but was afterwards persuaded to return, being told that if she would continue but three weeks longer, she would be hoof that period, her friends called for her but she was not to be found. This statement was copied into another paper of the following day, accompanied with a declaration, given on the authority of Bishop Fenwick, that it was unfounded. It was added that the Bishop would prohably lay before the public the facts of the case on Monday; in the mean time the editor stated that the excitement was occasioned by the language of a sister of the convent, who was an invalid, and had been for some time deprived of her reason by brain fever. The same paper of Monday observed, that considerable excite. are enjoined to be, and continue vigilant in the ditor expected to have been able to lay ne-diately obey the order and directions of any fore the public the facts of the case, on the Committee of the Board, It is Ordered, that BLACKWOOD'S Edinburgh Maauthority of the Bishop, but has since learn-gevery such Delinquent shall for every first need that he, understanding that a gentleman glect or refusal forfeit and pay a penalty of of Charlestown residing near the convent, forty shillings; and for every subsequent ofand who was not a Catholic, having intelifence a penalty of five pounds. rested himself in the matter, and being satisfied that none of the rumours which occasioned the excitement were true, proposed G.
