PERPETUAL MOTION.

THE subscriber takes great satisfaction in publishing to the inhabitants of the world, that he has found out the PERPETUAL MOTION,—if a Machine can be called the Perpetual Motion, that, by being placed in a certain position, will start of its own accord, and keep going until it wears out, gets out of repair, or is stopped otherwise, not of its own accord. The Invention is so constructed that the subscriber does not entertain a doubt that it will answer to propel Machinery to any necessary extent, without wind, water, steam, or air. It is at once simple and wonderful.

The subscriber laid in his claim to the Invention in the Patent Office at Fredericton, on the sixteenth day of last month, but did not intend to enter into a full explanation thereof until he got it in motion; in consequence, however, of indigent circumstances and lameness, he was compelled to explain it, in order to raise money to put his plans into practice. It is his intention to have the Machine in operation as soon as he possibly can make it convenient; he would therefore be much obliged to Editors of Papers to publish this notice, in order that, should any person or persons attempt to take advantage of his plans to his injury, he or they may be detected in so doing.

RICHARD M'FARLAN.

Fredericton, 22d Nov. 1837.

We, the undersigned Mechanics, having been present at an explanation given by Mr. M'Farlan, of his proposed Machine,—it seems to us that it will approach nearer to the desired object than any that has yet been exhibited to the people of British North America.
