FOR LOVE IS STRONG AS DEATH.
FROM "THE RELIQUARY," BY BERNARD AND LUCY BARTON.

They err who deem love's brightest hour,
In blooming youth is known;
In purest, tenderest, holiest power In latter life is shown;
When passions, chastened and subdued,
To riper years are given;
And earth and earthly things are viewed In light that breaks from heaven.

It is not in the flush of youth,
Or days of cloudless mirth, We feel the tenderness and truth Of love's devoted worth; Life then is like a tranquil stream, Which flows in sunshine bright, And objects mirror'd in it seem To share its sparkling light.

'Tis when the howling winds arise,
And life is like the ocean, Whose mountain-billows brave the skies, Lash'd by the storm's commotion;
When lightning cleaves the murky cloud, And thunder peals around us,
'Tis then we feel our spirits bowed,
By loneliness around us.

Oh! then, as to the seaman's sight The beacon's trembling ray Surpasses far the lustre bright Of Summer's cloudless day, Even such to tried and wounded hearts In manhood's darker years, The gentle light true love imparts Mid sorrows, cares, and fears.

Its beams on minds of joy bereft Their fresh'ning brightness fling, And show that life has something left To which their hopes may cling;
It steals upon the sick at heart,
The desolate in soul,
To bid their doubts and fears depart,
And point a brighter goal.

If such be love's triumphant power, O'er spirits touched by time, Oh! who shall doubt its purest hour Of happiness sublime?
In youth 'tis like the meteor's gleam, Which dazzles and sweeps by,
In after-life its splendours seem Lurk'd with eternity!

THE PIRATE'S SONG.

BY MISS LONDON.

From the Drawing Room Scrap-Book for 1837.

To the mast nail our flag! 'tis dark as the grave,
Or the death which it bears while it sweeps O'er the war;
Let our deck clear for action, our guns be prepared;
Be the boarding-axe sharpened the scimitar bared;
Set the canisters ready, and then bring to me,
For the last of my duties, the powder-room key;
It shall never be lowered, the black flag we bear;
If the sea be denied us, we sweep though the air.

Unshared have we left our last victory's prey;
It is mine to divide it, and yours to obey;
There are shawls that might suit a sultana's white neck,
And pearls that are fair as the arms they will deck;
There are flasks which, unseal them, the air will disclose; Diamanta's far summers, the home of the rose, I claim not a portion; I ask but as mine—'Tis to drink to our victory—one cup of fed wine.

Some fight, 'tis for riches; some fight, 'tis for fame;
The first I despise, and the last is a name.
I fight, 'tis for vengeance! I love to see flow, At the stroke of my sabre, the life of my foe;
I strike for the memory of long-vanished years;
I only shed blood where another shed tears.
I come, as the lightning comes red from above, O'er the race that I loathe, to the battle I love.

FROM THE NEW YORK MIRROR.

SUNDAY-EVENING READING.

RECOVERY FROM SICKNESS.—A period of recovery from sickness should be a season of praise. If we have misery in prospect, it fills us with pain; but we can look back upon a season of great trial with pleasure. The miseries we remember are gone by; in retrospect they are softened and are harmless.
But we had died had it not been for the hand of God. We had never risen from that bed, we never had enjoyed returning health. The physician would have mistaken our case, or would have used the wrong means, or would have found his specifics to be the deadliest poisons. And we had forfeited our lives, and could look for nothing but ruin as our desert. And where had we been if the hand of God had not been under us? To what world had we fled while some friend was closing our eyes; how employed, on the day of our funeral solemnities? "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name." The life that God has made His care should be devoted to Him. And we have all an interest in this particular. If we have never known the attacks of disease, it was God who purified the air we breathed, and warded off the pestilence that walk-eth in darkness. And if otherwise, if life has met with some interruption, and we have been called occasionally to the sick bed, it was God who healed us.

In either case we are wholly the Lord's. Whether we feel our obligations or not, will not alter the case.
God is good, and deserves our service, whether we think or feel, or are thoughtless and stupid. There is not one, among all the readers, that does not love and serve the Lord, who can escape the charge of being a wicked and slothful servant. God has made you what you are, and given you all you have. You live by his permission, and feed on his bounty. In these circumstances, to withhold your love and your service is impious. None can be wise, and refuse to present their bodies and souls to Him as a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God.

FRIENDSHIP.—Friendship has always been deemed essential to the happiness of human beings, and indeed to their very honour; for it would be thought as disgraceful as it is disconsolate to have no friend. No peculiarity of condition, nor elevation of rank, sets a man above the attraction and utility of friendship.
Kings have laid aside their royalties to indulge in it; and Alexander would have found a conquered world a kind of desert, without an Ephesian. But it is needless to enlarge on the excellency and value of this blessing. Who is not ready to acknowledge that friendship is the delight of youth; the pillar of age; the bloom of prosperity; the charm of solitude; the solace of adversity: the best benefactor and comforter in this vale of tears. But the question is, where is a friend to be found? It will be allowed that many who wear the name are unworthy of the title; and that even those who are sincere in profession, may be chargeable with infirmities. Yet even human friendship is not an Utopian good. He who says, all men are liars, says it in his haste, or from a heart that judges of others by itself. They who complain most, are commonly the most to be complained of; for there is real friendship to be found on earth. In others we may have the reality and even the eminency of friendship, but in Christ we have the perfection, the divinity of it.

THE LIFE OF MAN.—Men may live in a crowd, but they must die alone.— Friends and ministers only can accompany us to the entrance of the pass.
None of them can speak from experience, and tell us what it is to die. And it is a way we have not gone ourselves heretofore. But the Christian here, though alone, is not alone. "Yea," says David, "though we walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff, they comfort me."
"Death is a melancholy day To those that have no God."

But how must it be softened and cheered to those that have! O to have a God, the God of all grace, at hand, a very, present help in trouble; laying underneath his everlasting arms; shedding around the light of his countenance; communicating the joy of his salvation; and insuring the glory to be revealed—in ways beyond all our present experience and thought! "O my God, what time I am afraid, I will trust in thee. Thou hast holden me by my right hand. Thou shalt guide me with thy counsel, and afterward receive me to glory. Whom have I in heaven beside thee, and there is none upon earth I desire beside thee. My flesh and my heart faileth, but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion forever."

THE WORD OF LIFE.—It is recorded of one good man, who is known to have made uncommon researches after truth, that he studied his Bible every day upon his knees. And of every good man it must be true, from the nature of the case, that he studies the word of God with his eye directed toward heaven for divine teaching. Between truth, and a humble and prayerful spirit, there is that indissoluble connection, that will justify the inference, that where the one is, there we may with great probability look for the other.

WISDOM OF GOD.—Men pursue their own inclinations, and do what they please, while God directs all their energies into the same channel, and renders them subservient to the interests of that blessed kingdom which he has established in this world. Not a muscle, a word, a passion, or a thought, exists for any other purpose; or worm or sparrow perishes but with this design.

JUSTIFICATION OF OUR CONDUCT.— Every man should be able to justify himself in the business he pursues, and when he cannot, by good and substantial arguments, should abandon it. It is a fearful thing to persevere in any course that conscience disapproves.— There can be in such a case, neither peace with ourselves nor fellowship with God. Darkness, deep and ominous, must shroud our path till it is illumined by the law of the Lord.

FROM NOAH'S NEW YORK EVENING STAR.

APPRENTICES.—The Mechanic Arts.— We are all wrong in underrating the value of the mechanical operations—we are all wrong in making all our sons Doctors, Lawyers, Divines, and Merchants. Some branches of the family should be Mechanics; and if, when they are out of their time, we can give them some money to commence business with, we at once set them on the road to independence—to solid independence, weight, and influence.— Employment, labour—healthy, refreshing, constant labour, is the grand secret to keep boys correct and moral, to keep them out of vice in every shape, to make good sons and good citizens of them.

We have often wondered that so few sons of gentlemen of fortune offer as apprentices to some mechanical pursuit, for example to the Printing business—a business which is light and agreeable, and combines so many advantages. It may be asked what are the benefits of this branch of the mechanic arts. The sons of persons in easy circumstances who can board and lodge them without cost until they are out of their time—who will superintend their comforts and morals, and feel an interest in their advancement, may realize the following advantages:

1st. They learn a business which ranks high in the cultivation of the human mind—a business by which they at once become familiar with the moral and political condition of the country, the advancement of the mechanic arts, the progress of internal improvements; a business which made Doctor Franklin the great man he is by the whole world allowed to have been.

2d. The printing business includes a knowledge of proof reading—some acquaintance with the art of paper making—and, in a newspaper office, where a boy is intelligent, quick, and ambitious to excel, he becomes familiar with editorial pursuits, and when out of his time becomes proprietor of a city or country paper—and if prudent, temperate, and industrious, may become a conspicuous politician, and may fill any of the high offices of the country, as we see at present in beholding Printers Senators of Congress and Members of the House of Representatives. So much for our own profession, but there are many noble mechanical pursuits which should be cultivated by young men of good family and education.

The Builder, which includes the beautiful science of architecture. The Ship Builder, a first and most respectable calling. Workers in gold, silver, copper, and other metals. Cabinet Making. In short, we could name fifty occupations—more valuable, more enduring, more healthy, more positively independent, than the range of professional callings, and the sickly and poverty stricken labour of the midnight lamp.

By this course we shall bring into the line of mechanics an intelligent, well educated, highly respectable class of American citizens, free from monopolizing combinations, unjust extortions, and disreputable associations.

JUST PUBLISHED,

A TREATISE ON INFANT BAPTISM, Shewing the Scriptural grounds and Historical evidence of that Ordinance; together with a brief exposition of the Baptismal office of the Church of England.
By the Rev. James Robertson, A. M. Missionary from the Venerable Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign parts.
For sale at Mr. Beverly's, Book Store.
Price 6s. 3d. Frederickton, Dec. 21, 1836.

"To the Members of the Church, and indeed to all who enter warmly into the con-troverted points, we should think it would be an attractive and useful volume. Its general tone is moderate and conciliatory—and whatever fault Mr. Robertson's opponents may find with his arguments, they cannot object to his style."—Novascotian.
"The work displays sound learning, and is written in an elegant style, worthy of the Divine and the scholar. To those who wish to trace the origin of the sect called Baptists, it will afford every historical information."—Times.
