

Government House, 11th April, 1838.
Answer of His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor, to an address presented to him on His assuming the Government of the Province, and praying for a merciful consideration of the cases of offenders convicted of High Treason.

The Lieutenant Governor has great satisfaction in receiving from so many of the Inhabitants of West Flamborough, and the adjacent Townships, their congratulations on his arrival in this Colony.

The Lieutenant Governor feels that the occasion of offering these congratulations, is not an inappropriate one for an Address praying for the extension of the Royal Prerogative of Mercy. But the Lieutenant Governor is obliged to say, that however grateful to his feelings the universal extension of mercy would be, an imperative, but very painful sense of public duty, forces him to draw a line, beyond which interference with the course of Justice, cannot properly be carried.

The crime of High Treason is one which strikes at the foundation of all civil society, and is calculated, above all others, to bring in its train the most grievous outrages which can afflict a community: it is therefore, in the wisdom of the British Legislature made to rank the highest in the degree of guilt, and as most deserving of extreme penalty.

When a resort to the use of deadly weapons is determined upon, and the lives of the innocent are in consequence sacrificed, the Lieutenant Governor feels that the Law properly attaches the guilt of blood to the fact of the first resort to arms; and that it would be in vain to endeavour to vindicate the Law, or to hope for the preservation of the public peace, were this principle not acted upon, as well as inculcated.

In the late revolt, some of the unhappy convicts were leaders of others, who, with their assent and by their command, took up deadly weapons for the execution of an unlawful purpose: the consequence has been Murder, Burning and Robbery; and the limited extent to which these crimes have been committed, is to be attributed to the mercy of Divine Providence, and the loyalty and bravery of Her Majesty's dutiful and attached subjects—not to the repentance or forbearance of the insurgents.

The Lieutenant Governor thinks it necessary that the community should understand, that the blood of the innocent must not be shed, and hope of impunity to the offender at the same time indulged. The law must be respected; and a course which would seem to question the wisdom of the Legislature in the classification of crime, and in prescribing the punishment for crime ought not to be considered as a proper exercise of the Royal Prerogative of Mercy.

The Lieutenant Governor, therefore, is most reluctantly obliged to say, in answer to the Address, that he cannot interfere with the course of Justice in all cases arising out of the late Rebellion.

As punishment is, however, intended for example, and the prevention of crime, and not to gratify resentful feelings, the Lieutenant Governor has great pleasure in assuring the Subscribers to the Address, that it will be his most anxious care to restrain the infliction of the extreme penalty of the Law within the narrowest bounds, and to temper Justice with Mercy in all cases, as far as a due regard to the ends of Justice and public security will allow.

Accounts from Toronto have been received of the execution, on the 12th, of the rebels Lount and Matthews, and from the expression used by Sir George Arthur in his answer to an address praying for a merciful consideration of the cases of the convicts for High Treason, show that His Excellency is not prepared to grant pardons indiscriminately to those who not only engaged in the late Rebellion, but by their influence seduced others from their duty; though he will weigh every case with scrupulous attention, and temper justice with mercy whenever it can be done, with a due regard to the ends of justice and the preservation of the public safety.—Quebec Gazette, April 21.

ODE.
To the Genius of Painting: Written after examining some of Mr. A. G. Hoy's portraits.

Genius sublime whose power and skill,
Leads nature captive at thy will;
And binds with soft and silken chain,
The sister graces, in thy train.

With truth descending from on high,
Her Mirror beaming back the sky;
And fancy sportive as the gale,
O'er beds of flowers—I bid thee hail!

Thou memory loves—thy cherish'd art,
Her faded powers with life supplies;
As sunbeams in the west impart,
Their glories to autumnal skies;

And when the latent treasure lies
Concealed beneath the slain of time;
We gaze upon thy transcript prize,
For ever lovely in its prime.

From shades of night thy wondrous hand,
Leads forth a voiceless fairy band;
In form so just—to life so true
The touch alone corrects the view;

Nor tranquil lake on summer's even,
Returns the gem deck'd breast of heaven,
More true, than thou in every line,
Dost shew the human face divine.

To thee the page-historic oves,
The features of the deathless brave;
Born to redress their country's woes,
Their own but ended at the grave:

Thou too, to years remote canst save,
The hated tyrants of our race—
We execrate the worthless knave,
And trace the ruffian in his face.

Pledge of the pow'r ascrib'd to thee,
These faithful duplicates I see;
By science into being won,
The essays of thy favour'd son;

And long admird shall they remain,
Thy ev'ry triumph to maintain,
And Hoy's designs the agents be,
Of pleasures which we owe to thee.

TO THE PUBLIC.
THE following is a true copy of an original document in my possession.

CHARLES LLOYD,
Principal Grammar School, Bathurst,
April 23, 1838.

Mr. CHARLES LLOYD,
Sir—The undersigned read with surprise in the Gleaner of the 10th inst. the report of the proceedings of a respectable and numerous meeting, held in this Town on the 2d of April, in reference to the affairs of Mr. Leggett, in which your conduct is severely censured.

From the ingenious manner in which those proceedings are published, we must confess, there appears to be a design to burden you, in the public estimation, with the reproach of all classes in this community, which we conceive to be most audacious and unjust.

Therefore, in justice to you, Sir, in vindication of our own opinions and character, and from a due regard for the dissemination of truth, we beg thus to assure you, that we know nothing of "a public meeting of the inhabitants of Bathurst," held in this place for the purpose alluded to; nor do the resolutions reported to have been adopted at such meeting convey our sentiments.

Had the names of the active movers in those proceedings been given to the public, as they ought to have been, we would then have deemed this letter unnecessary.

We are, Sir, your obedient servants,
(Signed)
