

SCOTLAND YET

The Lowland Scots Regiments. Edited by Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart. Edinburgh: Maclehose & Sons, 21s. net.

In these days when every one is a student of war it may be said that out of the wreckage of our old beliefs and accepted faiths has emerged one solid truth—that in defence of a good cause the bravery of one man, or one regiment, or one army is only equalled by the bravery of another. The war has brought with it few compensations but it has established as never before the splendour of the ordinary man. It has ceased to be possible to distinguish and select, and left instead only the faculty for wonder. It was because any other attitude should be discouraged that certain words in Sir Herbert Maxwell's eminently learned and instructive introduction to his new book struck one as retrogressive and unwelcome. It is his complaint that the Highland regiments are more pleasing to the public eye than his own gallant Lowlanders. That may or may not be true—it depends so greatly on the kind of satisfaction inspired and the importance that should be attached to it. Without desiring to reflect in any way upon our incomparable killed regiments I would hazard that the tourist to Edinburgh Castle—another delicate point with the Editor—would surrender a sight of the whole Highland Brigade for a march past of Dancing Dervishes accompanied by camels.

But Sir Herbert Maxwell goes farther. He would take the breeks off the Lowlander and thrust him into a kilt, apparently forgetting that the Lowlander had suffered very greatly in the past from gentlemen wearing kilts, and has no desire to change his attire. Moreover, he happens to be proud of his race and its traditions.

For, as the reader fully realizes, Sir Herbert Maxwell is referring to regiments as distinguished, as proud, and of older history than any in Scotland. This volume, ably edited in separate regimental chapters by various former officers of the corps, relates the leading features in their foundation and battle honors. The Royal Scots, for instance, Major Haldane reminds us in his competent chapter, inherited "the traditions and honors of several ancient bodies of Scottish troops which acquired in the service of France, Sweden and other states a renown for valor, endurance, and all other military virtues that has rarely been equalled and never surpassed." It presents in itself an epitome of the history of Western Europe from the fifteenth century onwards.

No regiment in the British Army is higher in popular respect and admiration than the Scots Guards, the famous corps that met and defeated the crack infantry of Louis Napoleon and the Kaiser, and once again at Festubert as at Flodden fell to the last man. The tradition of these Lowland Regiments is very precious to them, and it is not without significance to recall that in 1914 the Colonel of the Royal Scots Fusiliers halted the battalion on the road to Mons, and reminded the men of the gallant deeds of their predecessors upon that field in the year 1708. Nor in these days when British infantry has been called upon to withstand the overwhelming crash of innumerable odds should it be forgotten that long years ago the Army fought to a standstill and the King's Own Scottish Borderers—the undaunted K. O. S. B's—were in 1759 one of "the famous six British regiments which received and repulsed charge after charge of sixty squadrons of the best cavalry of France, routed two brigades of French infantry, and swept away a body of Saxon foot—all this under a heavy cross fire of artillery." Well might Prince Ferdinand, upon visiting the spot some years later, say, "It was here the British infantry gained immortal glory."

It would appear to one, however, after reading the moving chronicles of the Lowland regiments, that the Cameronians embody in their past and in the present the spirit of the Covenant which was and is so inherently Scottish. Mr. Andrew Ross, in his well-informed chapter on the history of the regiment, notes that "an interesting custom is still observed in the Cameronian Regiment derived from the troublesome times when the persecuted Covenanters had to observe precautions against being surprised by the forces of the Government when attending a hill preaching or conventicle. Whenever the regiment is in camp or billets the men parade for divine service with their rifles, and usually five rounds of ball cartridge. A picket is sent out and sentries are posted, and not until the officer in charge of the picket reports 'All Clear' does the officer commanding the parade inform the clergyman that he may proceed with the service."

Symbolism such as that is the true, imperishable tradition of the Lowlands, a trust of steadfast courage and faith in the face of overwhelming disaster, which, beguiled by an undefeated ancestry, is marching through the night of war to meet its destiny.

MISS FORGAN, NOW IN PARIS, ENGAGED TO AIR FIGHTER

Announcement was made yesterday in this city and in Chicago of the engagement of Miss Ethel Forgan and Mr. W. Vernon Booth, Jr., members of prominent families of Illinois, who have many friends in New York. Miss Forgan is a daughter of Mr. David R. Forgan, president of the National City Bank, of Chicago, and Mrs. Forgan. Mr. Booth is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Vernon Booth, who now are living at No. 14 East Sixtieth street.

The announcement was made in Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Forgan and in this city by Mr. and Mrs. Booth, after a cable message from Paris had informed them that their families were to be allied through the war romance of their children. Miss Forgan went to France early in the winter to work in the Y. M. C. A. canteens, and is at present in Paris. Previously she had been an organizer of relief work in Chicago. Her sister is Mrs.

Hempstead Freeman, of Chicago, and Messrs. David R. Forgan, Jr., and James Russell Forgan, are brothers.

Mr. Booth has been serving for nearly a year in the Lafayette Escadrille in France, and is a Corporal in that noted body of air fighters. He was graduated from Harvard in 1913. Mrs. Livingston Platt, of this city, is his sister. —New York Herald, April 26.

* * * Mr. W. Vernon Booth has been a visitor at the Algonquin for three or four summers.

CHAPLAIN'S SERVICE Y. M. C. A.

The social, educational and religious work amongst the Overseas troops is carried on under the two establishments of the Chaplains' Service and the Y. M. C. A.

In the Chaplains' Service there are 275 of whom 140 are in France. Of these, 17 have received the Military Cross, one the D. S. O., and seven have been made Companions of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. This service is ably commanded by Col. Almond, C. M. G. formerly of Montreal, who has been very successful in blending together the different denominations and who has raised the whole service to a high state of efficiency.

The other Establishment, the Y. M. C. A. is under the efficient control of Colonel Birks, and has huts in all the training camps in England, and tents in France right up near to the support lines.

These two establishments dovetail into one another in the carrying on of all their work. Most of the religious training, naturally, is done by the Chaplains. The work of education which is being organized in the Khaki University has been very largely originated and directed by College Professors in the Chaplains' Service. On the other hand, the Y. M. C. A. supplies the institutions; organizes to a large extent the entertainment of the camp; provides its cinema films, lectures and concerts; and affords, through its canteens an opportunity for the men to secure some of the comforts of life.

Everywhere the chaplain and the Y. M. C. A. Secretary work hand in hand. As therefore, their objects are in common, it has been agreed that there should be two appeals to the people of Canada, but that all the social, religious and educational demands of the army should be merged in the campaign carried on under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A.

Stranger (trying to be friendly)—"How is your health?" Mr. Chronic (gruffly)—"How do I know? I haven't had any for five years." —Puck.
