Dr. Hea's Lecture.

Dr. Hea delivered an excellent address before the Mechanics' Institute on Monday on Colleges in general, and the N. B. University in particular. As the night was very inclement but few had the privilege of hearing it, which is much to be lamented. Our Institution requires only to be known to be patronized. Evidently such a man as Dr. Hea is well calculated to bring it into notice. Though he does not quite come up to our beau-ideal of the College President, still he seems a thoroughly practical man, understanding his duties, and determined to fulfil them. We have no hesitation in saying that at present at least he is a "man for the times."

He began by an allusion to his ill luck in addressing so many empty benches—had hoped to have seen a large attendance. He did not come before them as an orator or with some elegantly written, beautifully adorned essay. He had given rhetoric up when he took degrees at College; would now as a plain man, speak plainly to them on a practical subject.

He would not tire them by a lengthy exposition of the benefits of a thorough education. They were well known in so intelligent a city as Saint John. But in the course of his experience he had known many persons who had denied the benefits of College training. They clamored for an "English" education. He would like very much to know what was this English education. Did it include the sciences and the mathematics? He doubted whether, if so, a man could acquire this 'English' education without some knowledge of those languages whence so large a proportion of English words had been derived. Was it merely the arts of reading, writing, and casting up accounts. One might boast of his plume acquired with such knowledge only, but he would tell such a man that times had greatly changed in fifty years, and that were he to begin life at the present time his boasted fortune would not be so easily acquired. We live in a fast age and young New Brunswick is not satisfied with being told what has been done but asks what the age requires.

He would not speak of the absolute necessity of thorough scholarship to men in the "learned" professions. This was patent to every one. Men now-a-days were not inclined to entrust their lives to empirics or their causes, to be managed by ignorant lawyers, or mistake in ministers' "brazen impudence and vapid self-sufficiency for the true gems of mental adornment." But he would impress upon their minds the importance of college training to all, in every class and of every degree.

The teachers of a College or University should be men of first rate attainments. It was absurd to suppose that a ninth rate man would do for a College Professor, or that cheap institutions of learning were profitable. A good University always has been, and always will be, a costly institution.

Much had been said with regard to the location of a College. Some maintained that it should be in a city, on account of the superior facilities for obtaining students, and the greater access to many means of improvement there afforded. Others again preferred a country town, from its greater salubrity, its freedom from distraction, and the absence of incentives to dissipation. He was inclined to the latter opinion. With regard to religious instruction, sectarianism should be avoided. All religions should be on an equal footing, yet our common Christianity should be treated with respect.

With regard to the discipline of a University, too much strictness is unwise. It is better that young men be controlled by their own judgment than by a code of petty police regulations; yet, when necessary, severe discipline should be exercised.

The aim of a University should be, not so much to impart knowledge as to send forth men with well disciplined minds—useful, earnest, patriotic men.

As to the studies pursued in Colleges, many changes had taken place. Formerly it was objected to them that they taught only Latin, Greek and Mathematics; but attention is now paid, and very properly, to the Natural Sciences, to Ethics, Political Economy and Metaphysics.

These remarks were applied to the present condition and future prospects of the New Brunswick University. Its Teachers were men well adapted for the stations they occupied. As to its location, Fredericton was preferable to St. John, being better suited to the formation of studious habits—besides a noble building, and extensive grounds were already furnished.—In this University, while attention was given to religious instruction, sectarianism was avoided. As to its government, the laws were mild, and in the Senate no division had as yet taken place on any one question. The studies pursued were in harmony with the requirements of the age; and the Library, Museum, and philosophic apparatus were in excellent condition, and continually improving. A.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.

An event has occurred here which has caused considerable excitement amongst the friends of the straight forward Senator from Ohio, Mr. Wade.

Since the delivery of his frank and powerful speech in the Senate. Mr. Wade has been the object of unsparing denunciation on the part of the South, and there have been fears that he might be attacked by some ardent Fire Eater from that region.

A circumstance has just occurred which gives color to that suspicion. A person hailing from Mississippi called several times at Senator Wade's house yesterday.

He dropped a pistol, and his conduct was otherwise so suspicious, the friends of Mr. Wade think that precautions are necessary, especially as threats of assassination have been made.

Capt. Harstine has been detached from the U. S. brig Dolphin, at his own request.

The reason he assigns is that he is a South Carolinian by birth and as his vessel may be ordered against Charleston he prefers to abandon active service rather than fight against his native State.

Some of the Naval officers justify and commend this conduct upon the part of Harstine.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Resolutions were introduced into the Legislature, to-day, recommending that, after the admission of Kansas with its present Constitution, that there be a division of the remaining territory into two States, to be admitted into the Union as soon as they shall have adopted constitutions. Capt Mowlen was the only person found on board, and from him we obtained the following particulars:—Experienced a succession of heavy N. E. gales since leaving St. John, and on the 27th inst., the ship sprung aleak, which gained so rapidly as to compel the captain to bear away for Boston, and during the thick weather last night went ashore, as stated above. The sea is making a complete breach over her. At 4 A. M., the crew left the ship in boats, but a heavy surf preventing their landing, they pulled out to sea, and have not since been heard from.
