Access to God Every Where.

They who seek the throne of grace,
Find that throne in every place;
If we live a life of prayer,
God is present every where.

In our sickness or our health,
In our want or in our wealth,
If we look to God in prayer,
God is present every where.

When our earthly comforts fail,
When the foes of life prevail,
'Tis the time for earnest prayer;—
God is present every where.

Then, my soul, in every strait
To thy Father come and wait;
He will answer every prayer
God is present every where.

The Fireside.

Life in Earnest.

A most impressive revival of religion was in progress in their native place, and Mary Allston and Alice Rosedale were made subjects of renewing grace. Alice, whose mind had ever been subject to serious impressions, was first aroused to a sense of the guilt of her conduct in so long resisting the influence of the Spirit, and she felt that it would be perfectly just if God should cast her off for ever. She became aware that her heart was not in the state to be capable of entering with pleasure into the employments of the redeemer in heaven, and yet she feared exceedingly that state of hopeless remorse and agony of which her present feelings seemed only a slight foretaste.

Her distress incapacitated her for her ordinary occupations. At school she could only weep, and at noon she endured the taunts of her wicked schoolmates, who sneeringly proclaimed that Alice Rosedale had turned saint, with hardly a perception of their wanton cruelty; so much was her mind engrossed with the all important subject. Mary, for her comfort, tried to repeat the cheering promises of the Gospel, but they fell upon unheeding ears, for she was convinced they could not be intended for her. She returned home, and entered her mother's chamber with so heavy a step and so bad a countenance that Mrs. Rosedale was seriously alarmed. Throwing herself upon a low ottoman at her mother's feet, she exclaimed, "Oh mother I am lost! What shall I do to be saved?" The answer of Scripture rushed to the mother's lips, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." "But can he, will he receive a poor sinner like me?" "Alice," said her mother, "do you believe me when I tell you that I love you?" "Yes I doubt you when you assure me with your own lips?" replied the daughter. "Then why do you doubt the very words of Him, who is infinite Truth, 'I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance,' and 'Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out?'"

Thus saying, Mrs. Rosedale arose and left the room, closing the door after her, and in a retired place not far distant she knelt in earnest supplication for her beloved child.

Left alone, Alice arose and paced the floor with great agitation. "O had I regarded the things that belong to my peace," she exclaimed, "I should long ago have been at rest, but now my unbelieving heart will not submit. There is now but one thing that I can do, as my last hope, I'll go to Jesus."

Thus saying, she sank upon her knees, and the prayer that flowed from her heart, although consisting only of incoherent petitions for, mercy was heard and answered. There was an entire surrender of the will—the whole being to Christ. Then first she saw the wondrous plan of salvation in its true light, and an almost extatic joy took possession of her heart.

"Her tongue broke out in unknown strains
And sung redeeming love."

There was joy in Mrs. Rosedale's heart that night, such as the world can neither give nor take away. At a late hour Alice left her mother's room, and retired to her own apartment. The sweetness of acceptance with God so irradiated her whole soul that everything seemed changed. It was long before she could yield to slumber, and when she awoke the sun was shining brightly into her room. She arose and threw up the casement, and there lay the landscape with which she had always been familiar, bathed in the golden light of a bright June morning. She had thought it beautiful before, but then, in the light of her newly awakened soul, as its glories burst upon her view, she exclaimed, "O Lord our God, how excellent is thy name in all the earth! The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine. Let the heavens rejoice and let the earth to be glad; let the sea roar and the fulness thereof. Let the field be joyful, and all that is therein; then shall all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord. O come let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker. For he is our God, and we are the people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand. Praise ye him, all his angels; praise ye him, all his hosts. Praise ye him, sun and moon; praise ye him, all ye stars of light. Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons and all deeps; fire and hail; snow and vapour; stormy wind fulfilling his word; mountains and all hills; fruitful trees, and all cedars; beasts and all cattle; creeping things and flying fowl; kings of the earth and all people; princes and all judges of the earth; both young men and maidens; old men and children. Let them praise the name of the Lord; for his name alone is excellent; his glory is above the earth and heaven."

From this eventful period Alice commenced life in earnest. In her case the outward change was not so remarkable as it is frequently, because she had always conducted herself with great propriety, but notwithstanding this, the truth was not the less real and entire. Previously she had been studious and industrious, because she believed it would please her kind parent and friends; but from the hour of her conversation the motive was changed; she labored for the glory of God and the advancement of his kingdom on earth. At school she never commended an exercise without a silent prayer for the divine blessing, and she was astonished to find how much her mind was strengthened and refreshed, by the constant communion with the Author of all wisdom. Her natural kindness of manner gave her great power over the hearts of her companions; this talent she also directed into the same channel, and added to her affection for her friends the most earnest endeavors for their spiritual good. In this work her gentle friend, Mary, joined with her whole heart. In her case the light of truth dawned faintly in her mind, and brightened very gradually, so that she could not distinguished the precise time of the change; but she could confidently say, with the blind man, "One thing, I know, that whereas I was blind now I see."

These two young Christians stood alone in the school, and their example was so conspicuous that they were exposed to much persecution from two youths of the baser, sort, who held them up to the ridicule of the school in the intermission at noon.

This was no small trial to extremely sensitive young ladies; and in the course of the following winter it became almost intolerable from the fact they had a teacher, a college student, who sympathized with these boys. Out of school hours he was frequently heard to blaspheme the holy name, dearest to the hearts of these youthful disciples. At the close of the school, one day, as Alice and Mary were crossing the playground, they overheard one of these boys remark sneeringly to the teacher, "There go the saints, it will not do to swear before them." The teacher replied with a horrid oath, that he would "take the hypocrisy out of the contemptible Christians." Thus encouraged by one who should have suppressed such ruffian-like conduct, the rude boy seized a snowball, and hurling it with all his strength at the head of Alice, broke into a hearty laugh. The missile did not miss its aim, and striking her in the temple she fell senseless to the ground. At this instant a strong man belonging to the district, who had been a silent spectator of the whole scene from behind the fence, rushed forward, seized the fainting girl in his arms and bore her to his own house; at the same time casting a look of withering scorn upon the man, who was receiving wages for the instruction of youth in such deadly crimes. The boy whose hand had done the deed, which had seriously injured the meek and patient girl, stood as if petrified with horror. He noticed not the cries of vengeance from the excited children, he stirred not from the spot. His only thought was, "I have killed her." When a messenger came to tell them that Alice had recovered from her swoon and did not seem to be seriously injured, it did not much relieve his mind. He knew that he had hated her only because her consistent example was a continual reproach to him. His thoughts were altogether insupportable to him. In the silence of his chamber he gave way to the wildest expressions of anguish. A week later, when Alice met him, pale from the injury, but wearing a smile of almost angelic sweetness, and extending her hand to him remarked, "You did not think it would hurt me so much, Herbert," all his fortitude forsook him, and he wept like a child. It was a great struggle for that rough, badly taught boy to ask forgiveness of a girl, but he did it manfully; with the deepest sincerity and humility, and when he was assured it was freely given, and reminded to ask forgiveness of God, he exclaimed warmly, "I'll do it this very moment, O God be merciful to me a sinner."

That prayer was answered, and that rough boy, now a successful minister of the Gospel, commenced a life of prayer from that very hour.

As the winter wore away, a shade came over the brightness of the earthly friendship of Alice and Mary, for the latter, never very strong, was rapidly declining in strength, and was fully aware that she was passing away. Very precious were their communings upon the better world, yet so painful was the thought of separation to Alice that, but for her trust in God, she felt that she could not endure it.

"How can I live without you, dear Mary?" said she one day, as they sat with clasped hands in the home of the latter. "Dear Alice," replied her companion, "God will take me away that he may draw you more closely to himself." And then, in a little while you will come home too; and oh, the glory of that world, it is so dazzlingly bright, and it will be so sweet to be with Jesus, to see him face to face, that my spirit longs and faints to be there! You would not detain me, my much loved friend in this world of pain and sorrow?"

"O no! my Mary, I feel that I would be selfish in the extreme to do so; still I am weak, and you have so helped me in my Christian course that I know not how I shall stand alone."

"Jesus will be your strength, your all-sufficient aid. Trust no longer in an arm of flesh—in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength. Adieu dear Alice, I am weak and weary, but I am going home where weakness and weariness are never known. May our Saviour watch over us while we are absent from one another." Pressing a warm kiss upon the lips of her friend, Alice left the room in silence. Her emotions were too deep for utterance. It was a long farewell, for ere the sun illumined the eastern sky, the ransomed spirit of Mary Allston ascended to her heavenly home.

"For ever with the Lord!
Amen, so let it be;
Life from the dead is in that word,
'Tis immortality."

It was long ere Alice regained her wonted composure, but in this affliction she richly experienced the truth of the promise, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Soon after the death of her friend, Alice, who had previously inquired earnestly into the doctrines and creed of the church which she had attended from infancy, felt that it was her duty to profess her faith before the world. Some of the doctrines of the church were indeed mysterious to her, but as she closely compared them with Scripture, she found that they had the sanction of a "Thus saith the Lord," and that was enough. Should she doubt because some things were dark to her human vision? How then should she receive many mysterious but acknowledged truths of human science?

She felt it a duty to obey the command of the Saviour, "Do this in remembrance of me," and she thought it a great privilege to be numbered with the children of God.

It was a solemn season to her when she stood up in the place of prayer and took the vows of God upon her, and it was her most earnest desire to consecrate all her powers and resources without reserve unto the Lord.—Alice Rosedale

Animal Mummies.

The ancient Egyptians did not confine the embalming propensity to their kings, princes, friends, and relations alone; they embalmed almost every animal, both tame and wild. When the domestic puss was ill, or presented a larger family than her circumstances warranted her to preserve in life, instead of tying a stone around the sick animal's neck, and throwing her into the Nile, or drowning the ugliest of her kittens, they sent for the embalmer, (who, we may conjecture, also held the office of cat's meat man to the citizen's of ancient Thebes,) and in course of time puss was returned, properly prepared, in the form of a mummy, ready to be put up in the ranks of her feline ancestors, who had already added to the shelf containing

"Five hundred pussy-cats all of a row."

I have now before me the embalmed body of an old tom-cat, who, centuries ago, caterwauled on the housetops of Thebes, or caught mice and lizards in her nocturnal ramblings around the Pyramids. Poor puss, you must have been a fine cat in your day; your bright yellow coat must have been gently stroked by the hand of your fond mistress, whose form may now, for aught we know to the contrary, be figuring as a curiosity in the British Museum. I think you must have died in pain, or else why close one eye and leave the other open, never to shut again? Why hang out your tongue by the side of your mouth? and why that lump in your back like the remains of an injury or blow? I wonder if you ever had any legs; there are none now; and if you had, why did your embalmer cut them off, with your tail? and what could he have done with them when they were cut off? Why did he take out your intestines? Query, were there any fiddlestring makers in those days? and why did he leave your liver and stomach alone in your spicesmelling carcass?

Mummies also have been discovered of the lion, wolf, dog, jackal fox, hyena, bear, ichneumon shrew-mouse, deer, goat, ram, sheep, lamb, bull, hippopotamus, and monkey. Among birds, the vulture, eagle, falcon, hawk, owl, and ibis (found particularly at Hermopolis,) goose, and swallow. Of the amphibia, crocodile, toad, lizard, etc.; insects, principally the scarabæus; and lastly, vegetables, especially the lotus, and of all things in the world, the onion.—[England Magazine.

Sir—Please insert the enclosed letter in your valuable paper, for the benefit of those who are troubled with sea-sickness when on the water.
Yours, &c.,
FELLOWS & Co.

MESSRS. FELLOWS & CO.,
GENTLEMEN,—I had occasion to cross the Atlantic, and I am subject to sea sickness. I found a ready cure in using your Dyspepsia Bitters. There was a young lady on board the Steamer who was very sick, and the Doctor tried every thing that he could think of, all to no purpose. When I got in conversation with him, I said I had a bottle of Medicine that would cure her. He administered it to her, and it had the desired effects. I would recommend all who are troubled with sea-sickness, to take some of the above medicine with them. I have also used the Dyspepsia Bitters for Biliousness, with good results. Yours, &c.,
J. G. JOHNSTON.

(818) CROWN LAND OFFICE, Dec. 3, 1861

THE undermentioned Lots of Crown Lands will be offered for sale by Public Auction on Tuesday, the seventh day of January next, at noon, by the respective Deputies, at their Offices, agreeably to the Regulations of 22nd April 1861, and no sale on credit will be made to any person who is indebted to the Crown for previous purchases.
(Not to interfere with the right to cut Timber or other Lumber under Licences applied for previous to the application for the purchase of the Land.)
(Lots described in the advertisement as for "Actual Settlement" are subject to all the conditions of the Labour Act.)
(No person is allowed to hold more than one hundred acres payable by instalments.)
(In all cases of competition, the purchaser must immediately pay the purchase money, or else the Land will be again forthwith offered for sale at the upset price excluding bids from the defaulter.)
(Upset price on "Reserved Tracts" sixty-five cents per acre, other Tracts sixty cents per acre, except where otherwise mentioned.)
(If Lots marked "improved" be purchased by any person other than the applicant, the improvements must be paid for at the time of sale.)
