THE BLACK CALF BORN

OLD LEGEND AFFECTING FERRERS FAMILY IS FULFILLED.

Noted White Cattle of Chartley—It 1372 Disaster Followed the Appearance of Black Offspring and Will Now Be Repeated—The Estate Is for Sale and Will Probably Pass From the Ferrers Family Forever.

The name of Ferrers is among the very oldest in English records, and this, if for no other reason, gives exceptional interest to the approaching sale of the Staffordshire estate of Chartley, which has now for centuries descended with the blood of the Ferrers family.

At the Conquest William helped himself bountifully to the acres of Staffordshire, as of the other counties, but divided the considerable residue among five of his prime lords of whom Henry de Ferrers was one. Moors and fertile valleys, hills and deer forests were included in the Ferrers estates, which reached at one time from Tatbury on the Dove to Newcastle in the Potteries. Chartley, in the first allotment, went to the Earl of Chester, who, with that potent and brave viceroy Roger de Montgomery, pretty well shared between them all the northern half of the Welsh borders, but early in Plantagenet times it was joined to the lands of the Ferrers, then ennobled as Earls of Derby. Chartley Castle was already built, and its new lords began to make history. They did this seriously to their cost by supporting Simon de Montfort in his rebellion, which led to the imposition by Henry III. of the stupendous fine of £50,000 on the then head of the family. The fine was a gift to the King's son Edmund, and in spite of supplication for mercy and the patriotic donation from the Earl to the King of "a gold vase set with precious stones," payment was enforced. The most Prince Edmund did was to release the Earl from "the higher tower of Wallingford," where he was imprisoned, and set him on a black palfrey to carry him back to the poor brace of manors which alone remained to him after the liquidation of his enormous penalty.

By and by male heirs failed the family, and a Devereux possessed Chartley through his wife. The Devereux were made Earls of Essex which brings us to that fascinating madcap Robert, who so fatally abused his power with Queen Elizabeth. In his time Mary Queen of Scots suffered at Chartley one of many spells of imprisonment in English houses, and, as report tells us, "made a bed" there; that is to say, embroidered a bed-cover. She was not confined in the castle, which was then as now a mere ruin on a mound, but in the mansion house near to it; and a depressing sojourn it must have been for her, if one may assume that the present thicket of sombre yews, firs, and hollies about the building is an inheritance in kind from the sixteenth century. Save for its memories, the house is not interesting. Just a solid, sober, mellowed old English home such as our fox-hunting ancestors were content to sleep and drink in after their outside pleasuring. But behind it stretch the hundreds of acres of rolling moor which still stands for the "mighty large parks" of Leland's day—the burrow of many a rabbit and the haunt of the decayed remnant of that herd of white cattle which have for centuries made Chartley as famous as Chillingham in the north. Little need be said about the later fortunes and misfortunes of the family. By marriage Chartley passed to the Shirleys, who were oppressed by Cromwell as Royalists, and later rewarded by Charles II. with the revival of the Ferrers barony. The Earl Ferrers of Queen Anne's time had fifteen sons and twelve daughters, which tended to impoverishment. His grandson, the notorious Laurence Earl Ferrers, of the Newgate Calendar, left a sad blot on the name in that murder of his steward (at Stanton, in Leicestershire) which brought him to Tyburn in 1760, attired in white satin and silver, and riding in a landau drawn by six horses. Horace Walpole's description of the execution is one of the best things in his "Letters:" and it is worth remembering that here for the first time in England a sinking platform was used, devised by the family that their kinsman might not swing off from a cart like a plebeian culprit." The drop of eighteen inches given by this device was not enough, however, and four minutes elapsed before the death.

Of the wild cattle of Chartley scarcely more than a dozen survive, and these, to be seen, must be approached (especially for photographic purposes) somewhat carefully under guidance of the Chartley gamekeeper. Inbreeding seems to have played havoc with them, and it is to combat the effects of their sterility that the bold step has been taken of introducing a black bull into the pure white herd. Later, of course, the color will be fined back to the original white, but that will be a work of time. Meanwhile one wonders what the mediaeval lords of Chartley would say if they could see the black calves now encouraged on the estate, for such a birth in the herd was considered an omen of the darkest kind, importing immediate death or disaster in the family. The legend began to be respected in 1322, after the battle of Burton Bridge between Edward II. and his revolted barons with a Ferrers among them. A black calf being born that year at Chartley and the second downfall of the house ensuing this was imputed to the black quadruped (which was instantly killed) rather than to the Earl's impolitic patriotism. The few superstitious souls who remain in Chartley's thinly-peopled neighborhood may be trusted to make the most of the present Earl's Ferrers' contempt for the legend. Black calves have been deliberately bred from the white cattle and the Chartley estates are to pass, probably forever, from the Ferrers family at public auction.

IF I CAN LIVE.

If I can live
To make some pale face brighter, and to give
A second luster to some tear-dimmed eye,
Or e'en impart
One throb of comfort to an aching heart,
Or cheer some wayworn soul in passing by;

If I can lend
A strong hand to the fallen, or defend
The right against a single envious strain,
My life, though bare,
Perhaps of much that seemeth dear and fair
To us on earth, will not have been in vain.

The purest joy,
Most near to heaven, far from earth's alloy,
Is bidding clouds give way to sun and shine,
And 'twill be well
If on that day of days the angels tell
Of me: "She did her best for one of thine."

—Helen Hunt Jackson.

An Expert Opinion.

The contention among business men that a college degree does not necessarily fit a young man for a successful career has had support from an unexpected source.

Sir William Ramsay is a scientist of great distinction in his own country. He is a member of the faculty of the University of London, where he occupies the chair of chemistry. Moreover, he has won renown as an investigator. In a recent lecture in New York he is reported to have said:

"And now let us discuss a question which has not given difficulty in America, I understand, but which has greatly retarded the advance of knowledge and research in England. I refer to examinations. I have often seen men whose circumstances or whose character or whose deliberate choice has led them to abstain from taking a degree, and who are none the less most successful investigators and who have proved most inspiriting teachers.

"On the other hand, I have perhaps more frequently come in contact with graduates whose only claim to recognition is a parrotlike ability to repeat what has been told them and a knack of gauging the idiosyncrasies of the examiner. The older I get the less I believe in the university degrees as a test of capacity."

It would seem that a man without a degree is better than a degree without a man.

A Loyal Blacksmith.

When Charles I. was dethroned the Commonwealth ordered the destruction of the quaint statue of His Majesty now standing in front of Trafalgar Square, and a blacksmith offered to make knives and small articles out of the iron if he were allowed to break it up. His request was granted, and soon after numerous medals purporting to have been struck from this iron, and bearing the King's head, were distributed to devotees of the unfortunate monarch. At the time of the Restoration the delight of the Royalists was unbounded when the blacksmith proudly made known that the statue was still preserved intact, and he dug it up from his garden, where it had lain during the troublous times. In appearance the medals he made are little iron discs about one and one-half inches in diameter, stamped with the head of Charles I., and it is needless to say, remarks London Opinion, that, owing to their unique associations, they are greatly prized by collectors who are fortunate enough to secure a specimen.—St. James' Gazette.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free. Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

GRAND ANSE

We have had a few days of winter. Snow falling on the 3rd, to a depth of six inches sleighs being in use since but appearances now are that waggons will again shortly be in use.

O. Turgeon M. P. the late candidate drove from Caraquet here Saturday forenoon and was accompanied by several sleighs from Caraquet decorated and bearing flags in Mr. Turgeons honor. A number from here and adjoining settlement also met him enroute and returned with him. The party rested a short time at J. W. Landry's where Mr Turgeon was enthusiastically congratulated on his immense majority of over twelve hundred.

Mr Turgeon seemed much elated by the enthusiasism of his friends. The party then drove to J. W. Dumas where they spent some time, then drove to the station to await the arrival of the train. Mr. Turgeon was looking fine after his severe months labor working continuously the greater part of the night driving through the country and addressing several meetings in the course of the day. Mr. Turgeon is a hustler,

Sheriff Meahan drove to Grand Anse lately. It appears he took a weak turn on the road and he had to be assisted to the hotel by a couple of men He was returning officer for the county and probably found the extra labour pretty trying. James Nixon Mizonette spent Sunday night at Robert Sullivan's, Waterloo. Whas is the a traction ?

Daniel O'Neill foreman for the Tracadie Lumber Co. left for the woods Friday. Henry Murphy also of Waterloo accompanied him.

The Misses Maud Salter and Jennie Cushing left Pokeshaw for Portland Me., Tuesday. They will be missed from social circles as they were general favorites.

No Poison in Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

From Napier New Zealand, Herald: Two years ago the Pharmacy Board of New Wales, Australia, had an analysis made of all the cough medicines in the market. Out of the entire list they found only one that they declared was entirely free from all poisons. This exception was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, made by the Chamberlain Medicine Company, Des Moines, Lowa, U. S. A. The absence of all, narcotics makes this remedy the safest and best that can be had: and it is with a feeling of security that any mother can give it to her little ones. Chamberlain's Cough remedy is especially recommended by its makers for coughs, croup and whooping cough. When taken in time it prevents pneumonia. This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

DOUGLASTOWN.

What was without doubt the most brilliant wedding of the season, took place in St Patrick's Church on Tuesday morning, Nov 8th, when Miss Alma McAuley, daughter of Mr and Mrs Jas McAuley, was married to Mr and Mrs Jas A Rooney, both of this place. As the bridal party entered the Church the wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss Annie Rooney, cousin of the bride. The bride who was given away by her father, looked handsome in a dress of cream cashmere trimmed with white satin ribbon, and carried a very nice bouquet of white roses. She wore also a large white picture hat. The brides maid, Miss Alice Synette was dressed in blue cashemere and carried a bouquet of Lillies of the Valley. The groom was assisted by his brother, Mr Sydney Rooney. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock and was performed by Rev Father Norbert.

After the marriage the bridal party drove to the home of the groom, where with the invited guests to the number of one hundred sat down to a sumptuous dinner, after which all drove to the home of the bride where the evening was spent in dancing and merry-making.

BARACHOIS

What has become of our Barachois correspondent we have not seen any notes for some time.

The principal topic of conversation here now is election, even if there is little to be said there is a great deal of talk.

There will be more of a fight in this county at the local election than there has been with the Federal.

We are sorry to hear of the accident that happened to Mr. W. Hurley our popular forester, we hear that he was badly hurt, being upset while driving, we hope he will soon recover from his injuries.

We notice Mr McMill (surveyor) of Maria in town, staying at Tapp's, we hear he is about to survey the limits of the Sherbrook Lumber Co. and the Calhoun Lumber Co.

We also hear that wedding bells will ring next week "Whoadare"

Mr. Roland Tapp and Mr John G Hassard left on Thursday by S. S. Restigouche for New York.

Mr and Mrs Ellis arrived back from P. E. Island by S. S. Campana

We are informed that the popular representative of the Events is about to go into house keeping. We wish him success.
