Picturesque Old French Buildings Seen in Quebec

THE MATAPEDIA VALLEY

A Winter Garb Cannot Conceal the Beauty of the Scenery

(The Transcript)

Ottawa, Ont. Jan. 24.—From Moncton to Montreal on the maritime express is a trip that the average person will not soon forget. In mid-winter one naturally sees less of the magnificent scenery along the Intercolonial than in summer, when tourists from various parts of the continent avail themselves of the opportunity of viewing some of the finest scenery in Canada. But even at this time of the year the snow-clad hills and valleys along the Intercolonial are not without special interest.

As the "maritime" glides out of Moncton, leaving the glimmering lights of west end in the rear, and Berry's Mills, is passed there is a straight-away course of half a hundred miles over the plains northward. The "maritime" leaving Moncton, has a fine opportunity to make excellent time on this part of the northern division. With a good locomotive out of the Moncton yard, and plenty of steam up, the run from Moncton to Newcastle occupies comparatively little time.

Since the Ocean Limited was cancelled—as Transcript readers are aware—it is necessary for passengers on the maritime to travel through the northern part of New Brunswick and the famous Matapedia valley during the night or early morning. The scenery however is of a type familiar to a New Brunswicker until the train begins winding its way about the huge hills in the eastern part of Quebec. Most of the passengers are enjoying themselves in "dream-land" until train is well on towards the St. Lawrence river; or with two Pullman cars on the maritime a comfortable repose takes precedence even over a glimpse of the rugged bluffs along the Matapedia.

As the light of day appears on the horizon the passenger awakens to find himself in a country quite different in appearance to that separated from him by the mountainous stretches of Gaspé peninsula. Fine up-land farms appear but the buildings—and also the way in which the farms are divided seem altogether different from those of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

To the average Canadian the panoramas at once suggests Quebec. The farms are cut up in long strips, and are usually at right angles to the Intercolonial. The French Canadians have divided the properties in this way among their sons and grandsons. Their farms are "sliced" off, so to speak, instead of being measured in squares or oblongs from half a mile to a mile wide.

The buildings, too,—as I have said—are different from the farm houses of New Brunswick. They are chiefly wooden, and appear to have been built many years ago. Many of these structures in Quebec have stood the ravages of the weather for two or three generations. The residences are constructed on prin'pals that existed in France a century or more ago. They are plain wooden buildings. In most of them a conspicuous feature is that the windows instead of rising, when opened, are swung back like doors, following the old French style. The rafters of the roofs, seemingly curve inward instead of forming a direct line from the eaves to the peak.

The Joy of Eating

is common to all humanity until the organs go wrong—then Joy is turned to sorrow and food does the body little or no good. If you would return to the ability to enjoy food use

Beecham's Pills

Sold Everywhere. In boxes 25 cents.

Yet, with their farm houses and buildings somewhat antiquated, the French-Canadians along the Intercolonial are evidently prosperous and happy. If they have large, modern built and equipped farm-houses painted and furnished to suit the tastes of the modern house-wife; and if the French Canadian farmers have not commodious stables, barns and storehouses fitted up with wind-mills and other labor-saving devices, there is one fact suggested to the onlooker—they are a happy, law-abiding people. Happiness is the key-note of their lives. They live in communities, and they are apparently content to live quietly within sight of the homesteads on which they were reared, and to enjoy at all times the sociability of their neighbors. Their farms, in fact, are divided with this object in view. The buildings are invariably grouped together in each community instead of being scattered with a half mile or mile intervening between each which is usually the case in New Brunswick.

In nearly every village or collection of farm houses one sees the church. Usually the churches are massive stone structures. They give evidence of having brought forth the best skill in masonry and persistent efforts in having the church the edifice of the land. In many of the Quebec villages there is nothing very elaborate about their buildings except the churches which are always handsome and well cared for. Whatever they attain in the arts of modern life, there is every evidence of unity and devotion among the French Canadian farmers.

The principal town on the Intercolonial, between Campbellton and Levis, is River du Loup. This is an important terminal point on the I. C. R. It contains many stone buildings. The town has a pretty appearance. At this time of the year one of the first things to attract a Montonian is the large toboggans which bear a striking contrast to the pungs of New Brunswick. These large black painted toboggans are usually two-seated and richly equipped with fur robes. They are common all through Upper Canada while in New Brunswick they would be looked upon as a rarity.

One of the finest sections of Quebec province, east of Levis is St. Anne's. The passenger may peer through a car window for five or six miles across meadow-land that, in the distance, appears to be completely covered with wooden fences. Here and there huge bluffs rise abruptly from the level farm lands.

The scenery around Quebec has been described so often, and portrayed so familiarly from school book to railway time-table, it is scarcely necessary to elaborate on this historic spot. Every Transcript reader has either seen this citadel or its picture. Any one who has seen its picture would recognize the original I had not seen it for six years, but there stood the grim old fortress as familiar as if it had been yesterday. There is individuality about Quebec quite different to other Canadian cities. It is familiar, and yet possesses a peculiar fascination that holds the attention. Whether the onlooker is interested merely in the gray rock towering above him,—or travels back in fancy to the time when the great English, French and Indian warriors held sway over this ancient spot—there is something about Quebec that lingers in the memory.

From Levis westward there is comparatively little scenery for a long distance, as the railway traverses a new section of country. In approaching Montreal, however, one of the finest and oldest agricultural sections of the continent may be viewed from the train. It differs greatly from the Eastern and middle sections of Quebec. The farms are large and well cultivated. The men who operate these farms are in it as a business and apparently carry on their work on scientific principles.

The scenery in this portion of Quebec makes one speak the name of Canada with pride. It is calculated to awaken in the mind of the easterner a conception of a broad and resourceful country, that contains every natural requirement to make it the finest in the world.

Ross Government Badly Defeated

LATEST RETURNS

Give Mr Whitney a Majority of Forty Two in New House

Toronto, Jan. 26.—The election yesterday resulted in the overthrow of the Ross administration by the enormous majority of forty eight. The new Legislature will consist of according to present returns, seventy-three Conservatives and twenty-five Liberals.

Four members of the Ross cabinet were defeated. The four were Hon. Dryden, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. F. R. Latchford, Attorney General, and formerly Commissioner of Public Works before the present re-construction Hon. J. M. Gibson, minister without portfolio, and formerly Attorney General; and Hon. F. E. Evan-turel.

Mr. J. P. Whitney was elected in Dundas by five hundred majority. In West Middlesex, Hon. G. W. Ross was elected by about thirty majority.

Toronto elected four Conservatives and Hamilton two, London also returned a Conservative. Brockville and Kingston each returned a Liberal. Ottawa, which was one of the surprises of the election, elected two Liberals and with Gleggery constituted the Liberal gains. The Conservatives gained twenty-eight seats and lost but three. The Liberal gains were three and their losses twenty-eight.

Toronto, Ont., January 27. The latest returns regarding the Ontario elections give Mr. Whitney a majority of 42. One seat is still disputed.—This is Port Arthur and Rainy River, which the Conservatives claim for Preston by 150, but which the Liberals say has elected Kennedy by 50 majority. The defeat of Hon. W. A. Charlton in South Norfolk is confirmed, the majority against him being 5. Currie, Liberal, is elected in Prince Edward, by the narrow majority of 3, while in Monk, Hon. R. Harcourt's majority is down to 20, which however, is probably elected by a small majority. In West Huron, the Liberals claim the election of Cameron, Liberal, by 4 while the Conservatives declare the result a tie. The popular majority of the Conservatives in the province is estimated as in the neighborhood of 30,000.

The three seats which have changed to the Liberal column since yesterday are Essex South, Huron East and Oxford North.

As the shadow of night falls the maritime glides over the long Victoria bridge and slowly moves up to Windsor station. The passenger suddenly realizes that he is in another atmosphere quite different to anything in the East. He is in Montreal—the cosmopolitan city—the metropolis of Canada.

Colt Stakes for 1905

The president and secretary and others of the Digby Driving Park Club contemplate offering colt stakes to be raced for in September, 1905, on their track. The inducement should be sufficient to enable them to make it a grand success as they propose to put in a stake for three-year-olds for $300.00 and one for two-year-olds for $200.00. The stakes will be open to the maritime provinces. They propose to make them early closing events. Nominations to
