Nervous Women

Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Uterine Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected

A MEDICINE THAT CURES

Can we dispute the well-known fact that Canadian women are nervous?

How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly;" or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.

The relation of the nerves and generative organs in women is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability. Spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps. Pain in the ovaries and between the shoulders. Loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia. A tendency to cry at the least provocation. All this points to nervous prostration.

Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Lelah Stowell, of 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Your medicine is indeed a Godsend to suffering women, and I only wish that they all knew what it can do for them and there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony. I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, extreme nervousness and excruciating headaches, but a few bottles of your Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy and I do not know what sickness is, and I have enjoyed the best of health now for over four years. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has sent sunshine into thousands of homes and hearts."

Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick and weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

WILD EXPENDITURE

SIX THOUSAND WOMEN IN NEW YORK

Said to spend $40,000,000 a year on Dress

"Six thousand New York women spend a total of over £8,000,000 a year on dress,"

So says Mr. Cleveland Moffett in an article in a recent number of success,

And that leaves Chicago, Boston, Phiiadelphia, and the rest of American cities otu of consideration.

Mr. Moffet's remarkable statement has called forth some indignant protests from New York women, but he still sticks to his guns.

In order to re-verify his facts Mr Moffett has been over to America again. He now maintains that if he erred at all he has done so on the side of under statement.

For instance, he originally said that New York women spend up to £1,200 on a sable coat, fondly imagining that this was a high price. Now however, he finds that it is only a moderate one—very low indeed for a coat of fine sable. At a leading New York furrier's he told an American Messenger representative, "a short coat of rather light skins moderate quality," was priced at £2,000. Mr Moffet humbly inquiring what a good coat would cost, this magnate of fashion replied that the real imperial sable, "very dark, with silver lights playing through the soft fur," comes to £110 a skin, or £2 a square inch. A moderately long sable coat, say thirty inches, would come to £6-600 and a coat reaching to the ankles to £8.800.

"And you sell coats at such prices? was the amazed question.

"We sell this kind of sable as fast as we can get it."

And Mr Moffett, who has been attacked for stating £8,000 "as the maximum yearly sum that a few New York women spend on dress, including everything" thinks himself more than justified now that he finds that merely a fur coat, boa and muff may come to nearly £10,000

Again, he made the statement that a New York woman would spend up to £160 to £200 on a special ball or dinner dress

"Well," says Mr. Moffet, I have from an expert the details of a certain wedding dress on which the lace alone, Devonshire Honiton, cost £300, and a friend of mine saw at Mme Rouff's in Canhes, a 'robe" of embroidered linen handspun, and hand woven with threads so fine that they had to be handled in a dark cellar lest they snap in dry sunlight; over this was a solid mass of hand embroidery patterned by a prix de Rome artist, with inserts of point d'aiguille lace and this robe alone sold for forty thousand francs before the dressmaker began her work."

This same arbitress of fashion Mme Rouff, considered £600 delivered in New York for an American bride's trousseau lingerie (no household linen, of course) was mean to a degree—a trousseau only fit for a schoolgirl.

A BELLE'S BILL

Mr Moffet set forth the following summary of items of expenditure submitted to and contabulated over by a number of New York dressmakers and milliners on Fifth avenue.

Estimate of the amount spent on dress per year by many rich American women.

Furs and accessories	£1,000
Dinner gowns	1,000
Ball and opera gowns	1,000
Opera cloaks evening and carriage wraps	500
Afternoon visiting and luncheon toilettes	600
Morning gowns, shirt-waists and informal frocks	600
Automobile furs and costumes	400
Negliges	160
Liegerie	300
Hats and veils	240
Riding habits, boots, gloves, etc.	150
Shoes and slippers £160. hosiery £100	260
Fans, laces, small jewels etc.	500
Gloves, £90; cleaner's bill, £200 handkerchiefs, 120	410
Annual total	7,120

Mr Moffett is not pleased with American women for what he calls their preposterous extravagance in the matter of dress. He says that fashion can regulate benevolence as well as the width of the sleeves, and suggests that they should set aside a percentage of their dress allowance for their less fortunate sisters. Ten per cent, on dress would mean £800,000 a year from rich New York women alone—£800,600 a year for the poor. And, he adds, the rich women feel it.

Patrick who Murdered Rice has to go to the Chair

Albany N. Y., June 12—The court of appeals has by a divided court, voting 4 to 3, sustained the lower courts in adjudging Albert T Patrick, the New York lawyer, guilty of murder, first degree, in causing the death of William March Rice, an aged millionaire, formerly a resident of Texas. On April 7, 1902 Patrick was convicted on an indictment charging him with the murder of Rice by chloroform and mercury, administered by him during his sickness on Sept 23, 1900. The case reached the Court of Appeals on March 24 of this year, when David B Hill, who appeared for the appellant, based his argument for a reversal mainly on the contention that the condition of Rice's body, revealed by the post-mortem examination, might have been caused by fluids used in embalming. The prevailing opinion is by Judge Oray, with whom coneur Judges Bartlett, Haight and Werner. There is a disenting opinion by Judge O'Brien, Chief Judge Cullen and Judge Vann concurring. Chief Judge Cullen filling also a memorandum.

The acqused was a New York lawyer and has succeeded in postponing the ultimate decision of his fate for over three years by a display of acumen and resouraefulness that has existed the wonder of the members of the bar and the public at large.

The crime for which Patrick was convicted was the killing of William Marsh Rice in the latter's apartments, 500 Madison avenue, on Sept 23rd, 1901. Rice was a millionaire recluse, eighty-four years old. His only attendant was Charles F Jones, a valet. Patrick, in his capacity of lawyer, was opposed to Kice in litigation over Rice's wife's will. In the course of litigation Patrick learned all about Mr Rice's wealth and business affairs. He also got acquainted with Jones, the valet, and, it is alleged, induced him to enter a conspiracy to get possession of Rice's property by the double crime of forgery and murder With Jone's assistance, Patrick is said to have forged a will, a general assignment and several cheeks, by means of which he, if the documents were not questioned, would come into possession of all the Rice property after Mr Rice's death. Then, it is ascertained, Rice was chloroformed to death by Jones at Patrick's instigation. Suspicion was aroused next day when Patrick tried to raise $25,000 on one of the forged checks, which had been carelessly drawn. Patrick and Jones were both arrested. Jones confessed that he killed Rice. He had been Mr Rice's valet and almost inseparable companion. He declared that he was instigated to the crime of murder by Patrick, in order that Patrick might get the Rice millions by means of a forged will. That will was rejected by the Surrogate. Patrick was convicted of murder in the first degree, after a trial of unusual length mainly on the testimony of Jones. After Patrick was convicted and sent to Sing Sing prison under sentence of death, Jones was taken to a boarding house. He was being watched constantly by four policeman, who relieved each other in the duty of seeing that he did not commit suicide. They watched him when he ate and when he slept. They were expected to see that he lived well and kept in good health. The salaries of the policemen amount to $5,600 a year. The cost of board, clothing and the luxuries of life that Jones enjoyed were paid by the city. The expense of Jones maintenance was about $7,900 a year, counting the salaries of the men who guarded him. Later Jones was sent back to Texas.

REAL SEA SERPENT.

Alas, it is Dead at Old Orchard, Me.

NEW YORK, June 9—The Tribune prints this pecial despatch from Old Orchard, Me.:

A real sea serpent, old sea captains declare, lies dead on the beach here. For more than forty-fiv feet its sinuous body stretches along the sands. Scientists from Yale and Harvard will arrive and will attempt to classify the monster which floated in on a high tide.

The object was discovered by Fred Sidelinger, who was along the shore when he saw what he took to be a huge mass of seaweed. He approached nearer and was within a few feet of it when he was terror stricken by the sight of two mammoth eyes. Sidelinger did not pursue his investigation, but as soon as he could recover the use of his limbs he took his departure.

The old whalers, to a man, declared that the body on the sands was of no animal or fish they ever hunted. The tail and upper jaw were missing, but the lower jaw ran back fifteen feet. The tongue, more like a snakes tongue than that of an animal, was ten feet long and as big as a man's leg, being encased in a peculiar kind of bone.

Dr. Henry Reynolds, who is considered an expert in sea life, is of the opinion that the elusive sea serpent has been found. "It was without doubt over a hundred feet long when alive" he said. "It has evidently been dead for several weeks. It is not unlikely that it died somewhere in the Arctic ocean and has been buffeted about by wind and sea, collecting seaweed ever since" —Scientific Americau

COUNTESS POTOCKA.

The Woman Who Sang to Chopin as He Sank to Death.

As the great Chopin lay dying his soul was ushered out by the song of the beautiful Countess Delphine Potocka, who had been his dearest confidante and friend. The romance of their friendship, one of the sweetest in history, is related by Gustav Kobbe in the Delineator. The last tragic scene in the life of the composer has often been described and has been painted by Barrios, but it is so touching that one may well read another version of it. Mr. Kobbe writes:

"Then came what is perhaps the most touching scene that has been handed down to us from the lives of the great composers. When Delphine entered what was soon to be the death chamber Chopin's sister Louise and a few of his most intimate friends were gathered there. She took her place by Louise. When the dying man opened his eyes and saw her standing at the foot of his bed, tall, slight, draped in white, resembling a beautiful angel, and mingling her tears with those of Louise his lips moved, and those nearest him, bending over to catch his words, heard him ask that she would sing.

"Mastering her emotion by a strong effort of the will, she sang in a voice of bell-like purity the canticle to the Virgin attributed to Stradella—sang it so devoutly, so thereally, that the dying man, 'artist and lover of the beautiful to the very last,' whispered in ecstasy: 'How exquisite! Again, again!'

"Once more she sang, this time a psalm by Marcello. It was the haunted hour of twilight. The dying day draped the scene in its mysterious shadows. Those at the bedside had sunk noiselessly on their knees. Over the mournful accompaniment of sobs floated the voice of Delphine like a melody from heaven."

BEGGARS' APPEALS.

How the Professionals Base Them on the Public's Emotions.

Never do panhandlers make the mistake of appealing to the reason. The emotions of the crowd only are attacked. There is always a complete human story in the pose. What, for instance, could be more compelling of sympathy than the spectacle of the bent old graybeard patiently and despairingly as it seemed grinding a wheezy old organ which he had tied into a broken down baby carriage? The suggestiveness of that perambulator, coupled with the wails of that organ, more forlorn than mortal child ever uttered, was worth dollars a day to the old fellow. It was reprehensible art, of course, but art nevertheless. And the artist grew rich, for when investigated by the police he was found to be the owner of many houses in Hoboken.

Again, could there be anything more likely to excite compassion than the crust throwing trick? It was invented by a German beggar named Lang, whose French disciple, Lemaire, practiced it subsequently. I have seen a crust thrower operating in Sixth avenue. He was a semi-well dressed man, who walked swiftly down through the crowds of shoppers. Suddenly he uttered a hoarse cry and darted out into the roadway, where, pouncing upon a crust of bread which he had thrown there previously, he began gnawing it ravenously. He did not wait for sympathy. He walked rapidly away, but a number of women who saw the act ran after him and crowded one another for the privilege of giving him money. —Theodore Waters in Everybody's Magazine.
