Suffered For A Number of Years From Dyspepsia.

That is what Mrs. Mary Parks, Cooper, Ont., says, and there are thousands of others who can say the same thing.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

cured her, and will cure anyone and everyone troubled with Dyspepsia. Mrs. Parks writes as follows:—

"I suffered for a number of years from Dyspepsia, and tried many remedies, but without any relief until, on the advice of a friend, I started to use Burdock Blood Bitters. After using one bottle I was pleased to find that I was relieved of the dreadful pains I suffered. I give all praise to B.B.B. for the benefit I have received, and I hope all sufferers from Dyspepsia will try this wonderful remedy. If they do I am sure that they will have the same experience that I have had."

Your College

Was the making of my boy," said one of St. John's leading business men to us this week. "He was taking no interest in his studies. I placed him in your college, and before a week had passed he was sitting up till midnight at his work. He is now treasurer of a company with a capital of $500,000 and has a salary of $200 per month."

This is what we like to hear. This is what we endeavor to fit our students for.

NAN PATTERSON FREE

Thousands Cheer Show Girl on Leaving Prison

PAPERS SCORED

District Attorney Jerome Declared that Justice had Miscarried

New York, May 12.—Nan Patterson free today on her own recognizance, and New York had its fill of sortid sentimentality. From the Tombs she came as chipper and gay as she ever was when she danced into the limelight as one of the Florodora sextette girls.
She gave no sign that she had nothing to live for, which, according to her testimony, was her state of mind on the day that Caesar Young, the bookmaker, mention of the dead man's name came to her lips as she told how happy she was to be free, of her prospects for the immediate future, of the delight of peing in the open air and seeing the crowds in the busy streets, of meeting her friends after her stay of eleven months in the city prison.

On the contrary she laughed and cavorted like a school girl at recess, sat in all kinds of poses as the camera fiends took pictures of her, and altogether seemed more like a person enjoying a long-delayed picnic than a woman with a scarred past over whom a murder closed had long hung.

It was with great reluctance that District Attorney Jerome made the motion to Recorder Goff for the young woman's dismissal. As a matter of fact he did not determine upon his course until a half hour before the court convened. In his speech to the recorder the discharge of the prisoner seemed to be a matter of minor importance.
What Jerome devoted himself to the most was the flaying of the died of a bullet wound while riding with her in a hansom cab. No sensational newspapers which he said had contributed to a miscarriage of justice, and the defence of Mr Rand, who conducted the prosecution. Rand he euloged and the newspapers he scored, and, with this through, he said that it would be useless to try the prisoner again and asked that she be allowed to go.

Then the girl was brought in, as listless as ever, her heavy face and large pouting lips brightened somewhat in the expectation of her release. The old recorder said a kindly word, told her that the experience she went through should be a lesson to her, and then bade her go free. As he finished the girl's appearance changed. She was radiant, if indeed she could ever become radiant. The lawyers who have surrounded her all through her trials, rather because of the advertising than the moneyed fee, fell all over themselves in their efforts to congratulate her. They flanked her on either side as she practically dragged them through the crowded court room to the door outside of which her aged father stood. Old man Patterson had arrived too late to see the last scene of his daughter's ordeal and had to wait in the corridor.

To those who have followed this case from a serious point of view the sight of the father's joy at seeing his daughter a free woman was the brightest feature of the day's proceedings. He tottered towards her as the court door swung open, great tears streaming down his face, his speech falling him. She kissed him repeatedly, and then dragged him and the lawyers, who kept within camera range, through the crowded corridor and down the stairs trying to leap three steps at a time.
The reserves from three police stations were on hand to handle the crowd that waited outside and they were needed. The president of the United States could not have drawn a bigger crowd in that section of the town than Nan Patterson did. The curiosity seekers shouted and surged, while the "coppers" drew their clubs and threatened to annihilate them by the dozens. The route of the cab into which the chorus girl was finally rushed was lined with more of the howling sort and the building on Park Row in which her lawyers have offices was thronged from ground floor to roof five minutes after she reached there.
Once in her lawyer's office she immediately began to pose for pictures. All sorts of questions were asked of her, and out of her answers were woven great long special statements. Yes, she had had many offers to go on the stage, but she really did not know. She was too happy to talk about that now. Perhaps she had not time to remember that the members of the two big theatrical societies had decided to go on strike at any theatre where she might be billed to appear.
When the woman reappeared she found Park Row clogged as it is only on a presidential election night, or as it was at the time of the Sullivan-Corbett fight in New Orleans. The police again made a way for her cab, and she went to the St. Paul Hotel, which she had not seen since she left it on the morning of June 4th last to meet Caesar Young and take the fatal cab drive with him. At the hotel she received all sorts of flowers and communications of congratulations. It was said that she would take the midnight train for Washington.
She was joined late in the afternoon by her sister Julia Smith, set free from the Tombs after the conspiracy charge against her, growing out of the case, had been dismissed. The family gathering was further illuminated a few hours after that by the arrival of J. Morgan Smith. The conspiracy indictment against him had been dismissed but he had been fined $250 for contempt of court. Nan Patterson, it is said paid the fine.
Looking over it all the observer could not help bringing to mind a case over in New Jersey. They are going to kill a woman across the North River in a few days--if something does not intervene--because she slew another woman who stole her husband. The New Jersey woman is past the middle age, is not fair to look upon and has hard and bony hands

Apples in central China are soft, lack flavor and have no keeping qualities.

Stables in Japan.
In Japan horses are backed into their stalls; then the door is closed at the head, which has a grain and hay rack conveniently constructed, to which the animal is secured.

The Maxim Gun.
Sir Hiram Maxim is said to have first thought of the Maxim gun by resting a far on the shoulder at the firing of an old rifle. It seemed a pity that the kick should be wasted. Therefore he put the recoil to work in automatic loading and firing at the rate of 1,000 shots a minute.

A Preaching Tub.
A Chinese carpenter at Ransung who had been employed to construct a pulpit for a new Anglican church sent in the bill for the work in the following form: "To one preaching tub, 50 rupees."

Sun and Germs.
It was a Japanese man of science, Kitasso, who first demonstrated that most of the germs of consumption and other diseases found in dust are harmless, a single hour of sunshine sufficing to kill them. Were it not for this agency of the sun the globe would soon be depopulated.
