England consumes thirty ounces of tobacco per annum a head.

Over 76,000 men are engaged in the fishing industry in Canada last year.

Harrisburg, Pa., is to look after its police force from now on. If a policeman is found intoxicated there he is to be at once dismissed from the force.

The Chateau Frontenac—says the Toronto Star—had a slight blaze the other day. The cause, no doubt, was the local enthusiasm over the Quebec tercentenary.

The report of Dr. Grenfell's experiences in Labrador shows either that the days of heroism are not passed, or that some tremendous liar is writing for the Newfoundland newspapers.

Another automobile has just turned a somersault and killed its occupants. If the auto continues to exercise such fine judgment in choosing its victims there will soon be nothing to complain of.

The burning of the bride's playthings is part of the wedding ceremony in Japan. The bride lights a torch, which she hands to the bridegroom who with it lights a fire in which the toys are destroyed.

Two hundred Chinese boys are to be sent over every year to be educated in American colleges. They will take the usual course, no doubt, and graduate with first class honors in draw poker and baseball slang.

The statement of the doctors that all empires is founded on babies is well calculated to jar the complacency of certain bald-headed gentlemen, who rather thought they were the foundation of all human institutions.

Large quantities of crude oil are said to have been discovered floating down one of the rivers of Alaska. No one knows where it comes from, but a German party is now hot on its trail, and hopes to discover an important oil field.

If the Conservatives think that the country will approve their course in blocking the supplies necessary for the public business in an attempt to prevent a judicial revision of lists compiled by their own partisans, they are poor judges of public opinion.

The Chief of Police in Pittsburg has asked the council there to pass an ordinance which will allow him to lock up automobiles which have broken the speed limit. He thinks that if a man's machine is taken away from him for a couple of months he will pay more attention to the laws when he gets it back.

Herbert, youngest son of L. Tillokon, Coaticook, P. Q., went fishing one day last week and when he returned purchased some chocolates and put them in his pocket where there were some small hooks. One of the hooks became embedded in a chocolate and the lad swallowed both, but so far without ill-effects.

There has been an epidemic of suicides in St. Petersburg that has lasted for three months. The average number of deaths has been eighty-five a month and the high record for a single day was reached this week, when no less than eighteen persons did away with themselves. Many of the cases are due to destitution, but despondency has been the prevailing cause.

BRITAIN'S GREATEST QUESTION

A most interesting debate upon preferential trade took place the other day in the House of Lords. Lord Cromer gave an exposition of the imperial side of free trade, and contended that instead of no preference, no empire' the truth lies with the dictum, 'no free trade, no empire' He analyzed searchingly the new Australian tariff and the absurdities to which 'scientific' taxation leads; exposed the almost incredible sordidness and folly which are present when a tariff is under construction; and hoped that it would be long before this science or pseudo-science would be introduced into the United Kingdom. It is a system, he warningly declared, admirably adapted to accomplish two things—the encouragement of corruption among minor officials, and the placing of temptation before members to individual interests. As to how some of the colonies regard preferential trade, Lord Cromer quoted a speech made by Mr. H. J. Logan, member of Parliament for Cumberland in the Dominion House of Commons, to the effect that Canada was not going to sacrifice her industries for the benefit of Great Britain; and also the dictum of Sir William Lyne, 'If I can 'make the tariff prohibitive, I shall be 'glad. Importers are parasites on the 'trade of the Commonwealth.' Lord Milner, who has travelled far from his early ideals and his political and economic sympathies with John Morley and W. T. Stead, made a militant protectionist speech, in which he declared 'the idea that the adoption of pro-'tection by a country is going to re-'duce its export trade is exploded by 'the facts all around us. Highly pro-'tected countries are continually in-increasing 'their exports they must the Spectator comments. it is obvious that if highly protected countries are ncreasing their exports they must either be paid in goods—in which case protection does not in fact protect, but only raises the cost of things to the home consumer, or, as it has been expressed, 'cause a waste of 'energy by throwing sand into the machinery. either that, or the protectionist countries are managing to sell without taking anything in exchange.

The only escape from this dilemma as our contemporary says, and as the 'Witness' has often said before, is that they are taking gold for goods. 'But 'since we cannot eat or wear or sleep 'on gold, gold is only a ticket for goods 'which we must at once present to be 'never seem to remember that you can-'not sell without buying, though no 'doubt you may insist on not taking 'the full benefit of an exchange, and 'thus upon wasting some of your subsistence.' Lord St. (Sir Michael Hicks-Beach) in a speech described as one of great power, reminded the House of Lords of what had happened at the Mid-Devon election. The price of wheat and consequently of bread had increased owing to the deficient harvests and purely natural causes. The electors were disappointed, however, because they had been told that the triumph of the present government would secure them cheap food. Therefore, they promptly voted against the government But suppose the tariff reformers had won in 1906, and parliament had imposed on wheat a duty of two shillings a quarter? Precisely the same thing would have happened in the winter of 1907 as did happen, and in that case every speaker of the Liberal party throughout the country would naturally have denounced the government for having artificially advanced the prices in addition to the natural, unavoidd advance What would have been the effect Lord St Aldwyn asked the Unionists of the Upper House, of the country being told that the duty imposed for the benefit of the colonies had increased the cost of the stapel life of the poor? Would 'that have tended to increase the feel-'ing of kindliness and goodwill in this 'country towards our colonial brothers?' These are two questions that the home and imperial perfectional traders anxious for power and popularity might well stop to consider.—Witness.

The luckiest fisherman seldom tells the biggest story.

Even the cleverest man is liable to err when forming an estimate of himself.

The man who has no time to consider others usually finds time to consider himself.

Grown people are much like children; tell them they can't and they are determined to try.

The Conservatives of Gaspe are awakening to the fact that it is necessary to [illegible] down there.

A Chicago girl yesterday broke the record by covering 7 feet 3 1-4 inches in a standing jump. We wonder who cried 'There's a mouse.'

The fact that the Department of Railways last year expended no less a sum than $443,467 out of revenue for new rolling stock is sufficient answer to the Conservative argument that the government is allowing the equipment of the Intercolonial to deteriorate.
