The case was again adjourned till Wednesday next.

GOOD SHOWING.—For the month of July there has been manufactured and shipped from the busy little town of Marysville, lumber, laths, brick, cotton, and waste, amounting in value to $110,200. This is not a bad showing for Marysville, consisting of only two thousand people. It shows what pluck and energy of one man can do.

CEMETERY IMPROVEMENT. — The holders of burial lots in the Gibson protestant cemetery are about taking steps to place that silent city of the dead in an improved condition. The court then adjourned until to-day.

He quickly procured his gun and at the first shot his bearship breathed no more. The neighbors in that vicinity wish to convey their thanks to Mr. Goodine in ridding the place of this wholesale destroyer of their valuable sheep.

THE CITY ORNAMENT.—The lifeless carcass of a dog has for the past two days graced Queen street, opposite the officers' square, in full view of the public. If the city authorities intend the defunct dog for an ornament we feel sure, from the number of strangers who stop to view the spectacle, their efforts are successful. A subscription had better be started to aid in its removal, or the air in that vicinity will not be pleasant to inhale.

FOUND AT GRAND FALLS. — The Woodstock Press says: A singular relic was found at Grand Falls by Mr. Lawson of the St. John savings bank. The specimen is a cannon ball about 2½ inches in diameter, found in one of the small wells directly opposite the end of the government breakwater. It is a mere matter of conjecture how and when it came there; it was very near the verge of the precipice above the cataract.

Home Talent to the Front.

The Social base ball club, of Halifax, a team composed of purely home talent, twice easily defeated Fredericton's imported team. The score on Thursday 9 to 6; Friday 11 to 5 in favor of Halifax. The Socials are after the scalps of the St. John, Shamrocks, and Monctons, and it is the earnest hope of every thorough New Brunswicker and Nova Scotian, that they will get them, too. The above shows conclusively what our boys can do if they have only half a chance.

"Slim Jim" in a New Role.

J. E. Nolan, or "Slim Jim" as he was better known in this city, the expert pea and shell manipulator, has turned up on the borders of Quebec in a new role.

An individual representing himself to be Edmund Flynn, a merchant of high standing at Perce, Gaspe Co., P. Q., has been endeavoring to get ahead of wholesale grocers and others. It turns out that the imposter is an ex-commercial traveller of Quebec, named J. E. Nolan. His plan of operation was to order goods from merchants not personally acquainted with Mr. Flynn, and who depended upon the agency books for information. The goods were ordered to be sent to Charlo station, from which place the purchaser said his schooner would convey them across the bay to Perce. The fact is that the goods were intended to be disposed of along the I. C. R. A quantity of goods were actually shipped from St. John, Halifax and other places to Bathurst and there delivered by the agent to Nolan, who assured the agent that his name was Edmund Flynn. The goods were then taken and disposed of by Nolan through the country districts, it is said.

To the Provincial Lunatic Asylum.

The many friends of James Hayes, an aged and respected resident of St. Mary's, will hear with regret of the unfortunate circumstances that have fallen upon his household. His eldest son, Frank, for some time past, has not been in very good health, and on Monday it was deemed necessary to remove him to the lunatic asylum. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes have the sympathy of the entire community.

John C. Manzer, a well to do and highly esteemed resident of Victoria county, has been taken to the asylum for treatment. Mr. Manzer lately sold his farm to Col. Jago for a good price, but the complete change in his life caused by his removal from his old home unsettled his mind. His many friends hope to see him soon fully restored. He is a gentleman of the highest standing and universally respected.

An elderly Frenchman named Portras was taken to the asylum from Madawaska county on Friday. He was a troublesome though not violent lunatic.

An Old Land Mark Gone.

The residence of Major O'Mally, Kingsclear, about three miles above this city, formerly the McLaughlan property, was totally destroyed by fire Wednesday afternoon, between three and four o'clock. The fire is supposed to have originated from a spark from the summer kitchen chimney alighting on the roof and was not discovered until the whole roof was in flames. Major O'Malley, himself, was on the rear of his farm haying, and there was no one at home but the ladies of the house, and before any help arrived the whole structure was in flames, and not only the building but all its contents were burned. None of the furniture, not even the clothing of the family, was saved, everything went — the dwelling, outbuildings, contents and all. The wind, fortunately, carried the sparks in an opposite direction from the barns, which alone saved them. The loss on the building, furniture and plate is estimated at $6,000. The house was insured for $2,400 and the furniture for $1,100.

A VILLAGE WITHOUT ROADS.

A Description of McAdam Junction.

McAdam Junction, N. B., is on the line of the New Brunswick railway, recently acquired by the Canadian Pacific, and is six miles from the boundary line of New Brunswick and Maine. There are about three hundred inhabitants, and, strange to say there is not a single highway road leading into or running through the place. As a result there is but one horse in the place, which is regarded as almost a curiosity by the inhabitants. In the old days of stage coaching there was a road running from Vanceboro, Maine, to Quebec, but this has long since been so abandoned and neglected that it has become useless to the villagers of McAdam, near which place traces of it can still be found. The houses in McAdam are built close along each side of the railway, and communication between them is only possible by crossing or walking along the tracks. If a man buys a barrel of flour at the village store he loads it on a hand car and thus it is transported to the door of his house.

The country surrounding this place is exceedingly rocky and the people within a radius of fifteen miles are either lumbermen or section hands, who, when they "come to town" use this same hand-car as a means of transportation if their visit is not timed in accordance with the trains running over the road. Sunday is a gala day in this respect, and many are the hand-car parties going and returning from fishing, shooting or bathing in the adjacent lakes and woods. Even the minister who preaches is forced to use this means of transportation. The missionary who visits McAdam also supplies Vanceboro, holding a service at the latter place in the morning. In the afternoon the good people of the former place harness up this unique steed and "pump" six miles for the reverend gentleman and cover a like distance on the return trip. In this connection.

A RATHER AMUSING ANECDOTE

might be told. The regular minister being absent for one Sunday, a very dignified, solemn, learned and aged Presbyterian divine was chosen to temporarily fill the vacancy. He was, moreover, a strict Sabbatarian. On the arrival of the handcar from McAdam, it was with difficulty he could be persuaded to embark on what he considered a rather sinful and unotherdox trip. However, on being assured that a horse and carriage were out of the question altogether, and that this strange mode of travel was the only one possible, he settled his hat firmly on his head and stepped on to the car. Any one who is acquainted with the make-up of a hand-car knows that in order to have a place on it, it is necessary to grasp the handles by which it is propelled. This, however, was a revelation to the city-bred pastor, who expressed considerable disgust when he found he had to work his passage. Matters went smoothly for the first hundred yards. After that there was a heavy down grade, and the occupants of the car determining to let the parson see what their steed could do, allowed it to run down without applying the brake. Of course the faster the car went the faster the handles, connected with the wheels, went up and down, and as the minister had hold of these, the workings of his elbows were, to say the least, more vigorous than graceful. To cap this, when the car entered the St. Croix covered bridge the rush of the wind carried off the old man's hat. This was soon followed by his wig, which blew off into the river and was lost. McAdam was finally reached without further mishap, but the villagers got no sermon that evening, so much did the divine mourn his loss. It was afterwards learned that at the next meeting of the synod it was recommended by this gentleman that the mission be abandoned to a young and vigorous Baptist who was seeking to win a foothold.

Recent Deaths.

Dr. and Mrs. McLearn have the sympathy of their umerousn friends in the death of their infant child, which occurred at Killarney on Wednesday.

Daniel Casey, for many years roadmaster, and an old and highly respected citizen, passed into rest on Friday afternoon. He has been in poor health for some time. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. P. McManus.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Harry White will hear with much regret and profound sympathy of the death of their infant child, which occurred this Saturday morning. The little one having rallied over the serious injuries received at the unfortunate accident of the fire, passed away from the effects of the heated term.

Miss Grannen, who resided with her nephew on the Royal road, and said to have been over 100 years of age, was laid away to rest in the Gibson Catholic cemetery on Sunday last. This is the second body buried in this cemetery since it was consecrated, only a few days ago, and before work on its preparation has been near half done. Another city of the dead will, in a very short time, erect its monuments as a lasting memory of those within its limits.

Visit of the Metropolitan.

The Chatham Advance of the 7th inst., says: The most reverend the metropolitan of Canada, arrived in Chatham on Tuesday evening last by the Canada Eastern railway from Fredericton. His lordship will (D. V.) be present at the morning service in S. Paul's church and at the evening service in St. Mary's chapel on Sunday next. On Tuesday, the 12th inst., the metropolitan will proceed by steamer to Bay du Vin, where he will administer the rite of confirmation in the church of St. John the Evangelist on the evening of the same day. On the following day his lordship will consecrate the new church at "the village" and return to Chatham by steamer on the same day. It is the bishop's intention to proceed to Moncton at the end of next week, and be present at the services in St. George's church on Sunday, the 17th inst. The venerable prelate who is now in his 86th year, is heartily welcomed to the Miramichi.

Kent Election.

The voting in the Kent election, as officially declared by the sheriff on Monday last, was as follows:

	Jardine.	Legere.	McInerney.

Wellington	55	214	219
St. Mary's	43	153	109
St. Paul	15	94	25
Harcourt	50	48	38
Weldford,	268	28	106

St. Louis	15	228	57
Acadieville	12	109	29
Carleton	36	27	128
Totals,	679	1398	980

Mr. Legere's majority is, therefore, 418 over Mr. McInerney and 719 over Mr. Jardine, the latter, under the law forfeiting his deposit. All the candidates were avowed conservatives, Mr. McInerney having given in his adhesion to that party a short time before the election.

WORSE THAN HANGING.

Kemmler's Horrible Death by Electricity.

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Kemmler was executed by electricity at 6.48 this morning. His nerve was something wonderful. He never faltered. He directed the adjustment of himself in the chair and counselled the warden to moderation in order to secure perfect safety. The shock was given at 6.43.30 and was continued about 18 seconds. Two minutes after the current was cut off there was evidence of respiratiou. As soon as possible the current was returned; then cut off

AND AGAIN RESPIRATION WAS EVIDENT.

After a few moments saliva came from the mouth, the chest heaved and there was a wheezing in the throat. The shock was again put to the prisoner, who, the doctors remarked, was unconscious from the moment of the first shock. After a short time smoke appeared at the back — the flesh was burning. The spectacle was most trying. The man, the doctors said, suffered no pain, however. The warden says the voltage at the first shock was 1,800, which ran down to a point not named. After the third contact of four minutes Kemmler was declared dead. The warden's certificate of death was signed by all present, and the party broke up at 7.30, to meet at 8.15, when the body would be ready for an autopsy.

WHEN THE MASK WAS TAKEN OFF

Kemmler's face, his eyes were found half open, and his expression, while not natural, was placid and was not of a ghastly appearance.

Kemmler was brought into the execution room at 6.38 a. m. by Warden Durston, followed by Dr. Houghton and Chaplain Yates. He was dressed in a new suit and was by far the coolest man of the party. He sat down composedly in a chair beside the execution chair and was introduced to those present by the warden, who then announced that he had warned the convicted man that he must die, and asked Kemmler if he had anything to say. Kemmler spoke up without hesitation, as though he had prepared his remarks, and said: "Well, I wish everyone good luck in this world, and I think I am and the papers has been saying lots of stuff that is not so. That is all I have to say." At the conclusion of this speech Kemmler removed his coat, calmly arranged his necktie and sat down in the electric chair as quietly as sitting down to dinner. The straps were adjusted around his body, arms fastened down and feet placed close to the legs of the chair. While this was being done, Kemmler repeatedly cautioned the warden "not to hurry and to be sure everything was all right." It was not through fear that Kemmler thus spoke, but rather through a certain pride in the exactness of the experiment. The head piece was clamped in place and the leather harness adjusted to his head and face. During this time Kemmler maintained the same unruffled demeanor and about the adjustment of the various parts of the electrical chair. The door leading into the room where the switches were arranged was partly open, a man standing in the door. Beyond him were two other men. Which of these was to touch the lever and make a connexion with the chair was not known, and, warden Durston says, never will be known. Everything was now in readiness, and at a signal from the warden, at 6.43.30, the electric current was turned on. There was a sudden convulsion of the form in the chair, a spasm went over it from head to foot, but it was confined by straps and springs that held it firmly, so that no limb or other portion of the body stirred more than the small fraction of an inch from its resting place. The twitching that the muscles of the face underwent gave for a moment an expression of pain, but which were free to move at will, and no sound came forth to suggest that consciousness lasted more than an infinitely small fraction of a second.

The body remained in this rigid position 17 seconds. There was no movement of the body beyond the first convulsion. At the expiration of 10 seconds the current was switched off. There was a slight relaxation of the body in the chair, but the straps held it so firmly that there was not a quarter of an inch variation in the position of any part of the frame. There was no question in the minds of any present that the form before them was lifeless. Preparations for the post mortem examination were being discussed when Dr. Bach suddenly noticed resting on the right arm of the chair and from which blood was dropping. Instantly the order was given to again turn on the current. The dynamo was almost at a stand still and although the engineer quickly responded to the command it was quick enough to anticipate the signs of what may or may not have been reviving consciousness. As the group of horror stricken witnesses stood helplessly by, all eyes fixed on the chair, Kemmler's lips began to drip saliva and in a moment more his chest moved and from his mouth came a heavy stertorous sound, quickening and increasing with every respiration. The wheezing sound was like a half groan which forced itself past the tightly closed lips and sounded through the still chamber with a ghastly distinctness. Some of the witnesses had to turn away from the sight, and one of them lay down faint and sick.

In 73 seconds after the order had been given for the second current the response came and the sound that had horrified the listeners about the chair was cut off sharply, as the body once more became rigid. The dynamo was run up to its highest speed, and again and again the full current of 2,000 volts was sent through the body in the chair. As the anxious group stood silently by it was seen that the body was burning and a pungent, sickening odor permeated the atmosphere. The current was again shut off and there was a relaxation of the body. Kemmler was dead.

WHAT THE DOCTORS HAVE TO SAY.

Dr. Spitzka says the scientific uncertainty of the new execution law leads him to believe that this method will not be adopted in other states, and that this will be the first and last electrical execution.

Dr. Shrady said: "The execution was brutal. It was worse than hanging although probably not so painful, but the failure to kill at the first application was barbarous."

Expert Huntley said: "No one can depict in words the apparent horrible sufferings of the man in the interval between the first and second applications of the electric current."

An examination of Kemmler's brain showed that it was hardened directly under the spot where the electric current came in contact with the skull. The blood at that spot was hardened, showing that the current had direct action on the brain.

In the autopsy on Kemmler's body the physicians found evidence of the effect of the electric current on the formation of the skull, blood and brain tissues, which satisfied them that paralysis of the brain was immediate, and all sensation instantly destroyed.

Edison, in an interview on the Kemmler execution, says in substance that the fault lies with the doctors in the method of the application of the current. Theoretically they were right in attacking the nerve centre of the body, but practically they were all at sea. Edison then proceeds to show (using as illustrations the many instances of immediate death by electric wires) that the current should have passed from one hand to another which would bring the heart into the circuit through the blood, causing instant death. "The trouble to my mind lies wholly in the application of the current to the victim's body—the working out of a doctor's theory in the force of plain demonstrations of experience."

A Sad Case.

For some years a Mr. Barrett, residing at Beaver Bank, has been suffering with consumption and has not been able to walk far. On Friday afternoon he took a walk to the barn situated some distance from the house and while there he took a weak turn. No person being near at hand he took a piece of paper and feebly wrote to his friends that he felt he was dying. He also wrote asking that he be buried by the Rev. Mr. Ellis at Sackville on the coming Saturday morning, and made other requests in reference to himself. He was missed from the house, and upon some members of the family going to the barn they found his lifeless body. In his hand he held the paper upon which he had written his last requests. — Halifax Herald.

The Moncton Scott Act Case.

On application of C. A. Steeves, judge Palmer on Tuesday granted a rule nisi, to set aside the judgment in the Armstrong Scott act case, the rule returnable next term. His honor, however, gave it as his opinion that the conviction was sound and should be sustained. Armstrong, it will be remembered, was convicted of counselling, aiding and abetting Stephen Ryan, of Moncton, to commit a violation of the Scott act by purchasing liquor from his bar-room, and was convicted and fined $50 in sitting magistrate Smith's court, an account of which was published in last week's HERALD.

Madawaska's Cyclone.

About 4.30 Monday afternoon a heavy thunder and hail storm, accompanied by a cyclone, did considerable damage in the parish of St. Ann's, Madawaska county. The cyclone covered a territory of about two miles in width, travelling from east to west, blowing down 31 buildings, as far as heard from, and affecting the line of telegraph leading into Edmundston. No deaths are as yet reported, but one boy by the name of Mushrall was badly injured. The damage to crops was very heavy, the hail in some instances cutting them level with the ground.

All dry good buyers would be wise to attend Dever Bros. sale on Thursday the 14th instant.
