MR. EATON'S EQUINE WONDER. The Massachusetts Trotter's Hobby is his Phenomenal Horse. Every horse breeder and fancier in this country, or any other country for that matter, who has great wealth but at some time or other been possessed of a hobby, Pierre Lorillard, Robert Bonner, and in fact many others might be mentioned who have at some time in their lives desired to possess the finest horse in the world. Some of these gentlemen have achieved reputations for owning the fastest trotter or the speediest runner or a horse of particularly fine strain. It has fallen to the lot of Mr. Charles H. Eaton of Lexington Stock Farms, Lexington Mass., to become possessed of the finest horse in the world. This animal, which has been a delight to the eyes of horsemen throughout nearly all the States in the Union, is the most beautiful specimen of the equine race ever known. He is a speedy runner, a thorough saddle horse and is bred from the finest stock. Linnus, otherwise known as the Oregon Wonder, was foaled in Marion, Ore., in June, 1884. His mother, known as Oregon Beauty, was the property of the Rutheford brothers of that place. She was a dark sorrel color and her name and tail were of phenomenal growth. She was exhibited in a museum on Coney Island three years ago, but five days after her arrival there from the West, lightning struck her and she was instantly killed. Her skin beautifully stuffed and mounted, is now in St. Louis, having been purchased for $6,000 by a museum manager there. Linnus is her only son. He is now almost 7 years of age and is as perfect a horse as it is possible to conceive. A dark chestnut-colored coat as glossy as velvet and with a creamy white mane and tail, he is a strikingly pretty animal to view. But it is in the luxuriance of his mane and tail that his greatest claims to beauty lie. The mane measures 9 feet 10 inches in length and the tail 12 feet 6 inches. So heavy are they that when spread out on a screen before him the horse is almost completely hidden from sight. Mr. Eaton first heard of Linnus through a brother who emigrated from Massachusetts to Oregon 20 years ago. About three years since his brother sent a photograph of the stallion, and so striking a picture was it that Mr. Eaton determined at once to purchase him if money could get him. Accordingly another brother, who was interested in the Lexington stock farms, was sent to Marion and after much bargaining Linnus was purchased for the sum of $30,000. On the trip to the East an attack was made on the car in which the horse was quartered and an attempt was made by a band of Mexican horse thieves to capture the animal and hold him for a large ransom. In the struggle Mr. Eaton's brother was slightly wounded and the robbers were shot. Reaching Lexington, the horse was placed in Mr. Eaton's stable, and was then exhibited to thousands of admiring people. Manager Huber of the Palace Museum in New York City, and for two weeks past he has been the leading attraction at that resort. That he is a bona-fide freak of nature, and just as represented in his pictures, thousands can testify. He attracts great crowds of patrons, and will continue to do so for weeks to come.
