

A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

The Herald wishes all its readers a Happy New Year. It hopes that 1894 may be a bright page in their lives; that they may be spared sorrow and suffering; that peace and plenty may be theirs; and that the wise Providence may guide them to the right in all things.

DEATH OF DR. ARCHER.

The death occurred at St. John this morning of Dr. Andrew Archer, a gentleman for many years resident in Fredericton, and widely known, especially in literary circles. The deceased was a Scotchman by birth, but came to Fredericton when a young man, practising his profession of dentistry for some time. He soon drifted into literary work, however, and connected himself with the press. He wrote a valuable text book on Canadian history, and was the editor of the Farmer from 1879 until 1888. Since that time he has mostly resided in St. John, and if we mistake not, has done considerable work for the Telegraph. Dr. Archer was a well educated gentleman, and although peculiar in some respects and always eccentric, he had many warm friends in this city who will sincerely regret to hear of his death.

TROUBLE IN THE TORY CAMP.

On several occasions the Dominion government have shown their utter disregard for the St. John tory members—indeed have trampled on the neck of Hazen, McLeod and Chesley, but the greatest indignity heaped upon these gentlemen and their constituents, is about to follow an order from Sir Hibbert Tupper, who no doubt is acting with the full knowledge and consent of the cabinet. Some time ago Tupper sent down word from Ottawa requiring that ferry steamers, tugs, etc., should have certified masters. The law was obsolete for ten years, so far as St. John was concerned, but when the orders came down the officers of the ferries procured the necessary papers. Now the Dominion government has notified the city that it will see collection of the penalties incurred in the period before the officers obtained certificates. Fred. E. Barker has been instructed by the department of justice to take proceedings against the city owner of the ferries, boats, and, unless satisfactory arrangements can be made for the penalties, proceedings will be commenced for their recovery. The common council has been notified. C. R. Croker, inspector of bulls, also notified the corporation that the ferry boats will have to carry life boats and life preservers in accordance with the steamboat inspection act. The boats only ply across the harbor. The Sun, the conservative organ, attacks Sir Hibbert Tupper. It says: "The would have supposed the minister of marine had already gone far enough in his absurd and impracticable course in this matter. This law might be sufficiently alive to support prosecution, but the sense of justice in the community is of much more value. The government will do itself great injury and injustice by these strange interpretations." Concluding the Sun says: "There are statesmen who meet great emergencies manfully and successfully, only to be strangled by a hair. Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who ought to be best known by the services which he has undoubtedly rendered, seems determined to win fame by finicky enforcement of obsolete regulations. St. John returns three conservatives, but Sir Hibbert Tupper pays no heed to them."

All of which goes to show that the tories are a very unhappy family. They are united only on one point—securing the spoils of office. Up to date, the St. John members show no sign of kicking against Tupper and the government. They will submit to anything rather than give up some personal ambition which the government has the power to satisfy. Mr. Hazen wants a position in the cabinet, Mr. McLeod would like to be chief justice, and Mr. Chesley has some other axe to grind, so the government knows his ground.

INHABITED NOW.

Everybody who has read that thrilling piece of fiction, Robinson Crusoe (and who has not) will be interested in knowing that the island of Juan Fernandez, Crusoe's home, is at the present time inhabited. Two valleys, winding down different directions, join a short distance back from the shore, and here now stands a little village of small huts scattered round a long, low, one-storied building, with a veranda running its whole length. In this house lives the man who rents the island from the Chilean government, and the village is made up of a few German and Chilean families. The tiny town is called San Juan Bautista, and the crater-like arm of the sea on which it is situated, and where Alexander Selkirk (Robinson Crusoe) first landed, is now called Cumberland Bay. The island is rented for about £200 a year. The rent is partly paid in dried fish. Catching and drying the many varieties of fish, and raising cattle and vegetables, which occupy the contented settlers, and much of their little income is obtained from the cattle and vegetables sold to passing vessels. The cattle need no care, and the vegetables almost grow wild. Turnips and radishes, first shown here by Selkirk himself, now grow rank and wild in the valleys like weeds. There is also a race of wild dogs, which completely overrun the island, depending for existence mainly upon seals. They are the descendants of a breed of dogs left by the Spaniards. At the back of the little town, in the first high cliff, is a row of caves of remarkable appearance hewn into the sandstone. An unusual path leads to them, and a short climb brings one to their dark mouths. About forty years ago the Chilean government thought that a good way to rid of its worst criminals would be to transport them to the island of Juan Fernandez. Here, under the direction of Chilean soldiers, these poor wretches were made to dig caves to live in. In 1854 they were taken back again, however, and the caves have since been slowly crumbling away.

THE NARROW RIDGE.

The narrow ridge where Selkirk watched, is now called "The Saddle," because at either end of it a big rocky hummock rises like a pomel. On one of these is now a large tablet with inscriptions commemorating Alexander Selkirk's long and lonely stay on the island. It was placed there in 1868 by the officers of the British ship "Topaz." A small excursion steamer now runs from Valparaiso to Juan Fernandez island. The round trip is made in six days, and three of these may be spent on the island in fishing and visiting those lonely but beautiful spots which, nearly 200 years ago, were the haunts of Robinson Crusoe.

SUFFERING IN AUSTRALIA.

Australia seems to be rivaling the United States in the amount of destitution existing among the people. The country passed through a very severe financial crisis last summer, and is now feeling its full effect. There are tens of thousands of people absolutely without means to obtain a night's shelter, sleeping in the streets and squares of the great cities and wherever covered spots can be found around the public buildings, scantily clad and able to beg little more than enough food to barely sustain their miserable lives. Through this sad story of distress is old and familiar in the colonies, the marked increase in the extent of the poverty has of late forced the press to give to the matter publicity such as has hitherto been avoided as much as possible. But travellers arriving at Vancouver by the Australian steamers tell of distressing sights beyond even those mentioned in the newspapers.

OUR FISH EXHIBIT THE BEST.

The department of marine and fisheries at Ottawa, have received word from Chicago, that three awards have been granted to the department for its exhibit at the World's fair, the jurors pronouncing the Canadian government's fishery exhibit the best in the entire building. J. W. Collins, chief of the department of fish and fisheries at Chicago exhibition, has written Mr. Lark, the Canadian commissioner, at the close of their official intercourse, expressing his hearty appreciation of the part taken by Canada in making the fishery department at the fair successful. He continues: "I am sure that the great collections sent here by your country, and so fittingly installed, must result materially to the advantage of those of your citizens who are engaged in commercial fishing, fish culture, or otherwise interested in fish or fisheries. In no other direction perhaps, has Canada occasion for greater pride than she can feel in connection with the representations made of her fishing interests."

The parties who are urging Mayor Beckwith to hold a public meeting to present his civic record, should consult G. E. Fenety. That gentleman called such a gathering, armed himself with a bundle of information for the taxpayers and had an attendance of one—the city hall janitor.

THE LATE GOVERNOR BOYD'S WILL.

At St. John, letters testamentary of the will of Governor Boyd have been granted to Mrs. Boyd and Robert Cruikshank. The estate is valued at $25,000 real and $5,250 personal property, besides $400 real estate in Kings county. The document is in Mr. Boyd's own handwriting and is very short and to the point. It bears the date of Jan. 1, 1883. It bequeaths to Mrs. Boyd, for her own use, all the real and personal property of every kind, wherever situated, of which Mrs. Boyd died possessed, subject to the following conditions: That she should pay all his personal indebtedness, and should give $100 each to Catherine Simon and Esther Stout, faithful servants in the household, also $100 to Patrick McDevitt (since deceased) who worked for Messrs. Daniel & Boyd; that the sum of $1000 be divided share and share alike among the children of Robert Cruikshank and a like sum among the children of St. Clair Jones of Weymouth, Nova Scotia, and that $1000 should be paid to Harold Boyd Schofield. These are the only bequests, and the reason that nothing is left to charity is explained by the following clause in the will: "Other bequests I intended for friends and public institutions in this city, I have to omit, as my property has been so largely lessened by those who returned me evil for good, and but for those said doings I would have been able to live a happier life, and to have given largely to many persons and objects that I had in view."

HE'S ALL RIGHT.—David W. Armstrong, the Meadville, Mass., man who advertised in a Moncton paper last summer for a wife, appears to have corresponded with a number of people in addition to the Albert county lady whom he jilted. He appears to have been able to live a happier life, and to have given largely to many persons and objects that I had in view.

IT IS SAID THAT DURING HIS BUSINESS CAREER THE FIRM OF DANIEL & BOYD LOST MORE THAN $1,000,000 BY FAILURES AMONG ITS WHOLESALE CUSTOMERS.

PRIZE WINNERS FOR PUZZLES IN DECEMBER ISSUE OF THE HALL HUMMER ARE AS FOLLOWS:

Correct answers were received from 23 others. Prize winners can secure their prizes by calling at Oak Hall, Fredericton.

SELF MURDERED.

Mrs. Thomas Gass and Rev. Cyrus H. Rice Seek Death With a Pistol. St. John was startled Tuesday morning when the news spread that Mrs. Thomas Gass, of that city, had the previous night, at her home with her step father, Chas. G. Turnbull, coolly put a bullet through her own heart, killing herself instantly. It would seem that the suicide was deliberately planned, and must have been accomplished about midnight Monday. Mrs. Gass was in excellent spirits all day Monday, entertained some friends to late dinner, and had callers in the evening. The first information that she was dead, was gained when the servant went to call her in the morning. Her bedroom adjoined the parlor, and as the servant stepped into the latter, she was surprised to see the light burning on the table. A glance about the room showed her something was wrong. An instant later she noticed Mrs. Gass.

LYING DEAD ON THE SOFA.

No thoughts of a tragedy entered the girl's head. She rushed out and gave the alarm, and pretty soon Ernest Turnbull and several neighbors arrived. Dr. P. R. Inches, the family physician, and Coroner Hetherington were also summoned. They reached the house in a very short time. Up to the time of their arrival the neighbors who had gathered had not discovered that death was self-inflicted. They thought heart disease was the cause. The sight that met the doctor's gaze was a tragic one. Mrs. Gass was lying on a sofa drawn up in front of the fire dressed in a loose night robe. Her head was tilted back on the pillow with the eyes and mouth partly open. The face, though pale and ghastly looking, did not show any signs of pain. A small stain of blood was seen on the white dress on the left side almost over the heart. A darker stain also attracted the attention of the doctors and they saw at a glance that it was a powder mark. Lifting the dress the bullet hole was seen beneath, and its position just below the heart, and the calm, peaceful countenance convinced the doctors that death had never been inflicted instantaneously. The right hand of the deceased hung over the sofa, almost touching the floor. It was raised, and about the thumb and fore finger further powder marks were seen. The position of Mrs. Gass on the sofa and the powder marks on her dress and hands, convinced the physicians that the case WAS ONE OF SUICIDE and not of murder. They looked around and soon found the weapon with which Mrs. Gass ended her life. It was lying on the rug beside the sofa and not a foot from her right hand. It was a large "out pocket self-cocker" of .38 or 40 calibre. Only one of the five chambers was empty. Many things about the room indicated that Mrs. Gass had prepared for death. Her clothes were neatly folded up and hung over a chair. The revolver was a new one and had never been fired before. In no other direction perhaps, has Canada occasion for greater pride than she can feel in connection with the representations made of her fishing interests."

THE POSITION OF MRS. GASS ON THE SOFA AND THE POWDER MARKS ON HER DRESS AND HANDS, CONVINCED THE PHYSICIANS THAT THE CASE WAS ONE OF SUICIDE.

Mrs. Gass was nearly 30 years of age, and was married in 1884. Her father was a member of the dry goods firm of Staples, Hampton & Whitley. Her husband, Thomas Gass, was left a large sum of money, but ran through with it and then seemed unable to settle down and make a living for his wife and children. He left St. John a little over a year ago, and has since been residing in Boston. He recently wrote his wife a letter stating that he was in very poor circumstances, and this is thought to have preyed on her mind.

THE INQUEST.

Coroner Hetherington held an inquest on the body of the deceased. R. Keltie Jones, the last person to converse with Mrs. Gass, testified: "On Christmas night about 9 o'clock I went to call on Mrs. Gass to wish her the compliments of the season. On entering I found Mrs. Gass there, and Mrs. Gass was unusually bright. We three carried a conversation until a few minutes to 10 o'clock when Miss Sharpe's brother called for her. Those two left about five minutes after 10 o'clock. Shortly after that, Mrs. Gass from being very bright became very despondent, and stated that she had been acting but wished to speak as she felt. She then talked about the children and her husband, mentioning them with terms of endearment, and stating that Christmas was always a very trying time to her. Twice during the time which we were talking, which was an hour and a half, she gave a sudden gasp and said that she had a stitch in her heart and said it caught her breath and hurt her. This finished the evidence, the jury retired, and after an absence of half an hour returned a verdict that the deceased came to her death by a bullet discharged from a pistol operated by her own hand. Gass came to St. John Tuesday for the funeral. He says that the relations between him and his wife were not of an unpleasant character. She was a woman of highly nervous temperament and subject to fits of despondency.

METHODIST MINISTER SUICIDES.

A sad tragedy yesterday at the residence of Hon. Senator Lewin, Lancaster, St. John, resulted in the death, by his own hands, of Rev. Cyrus H. Rice, a prominent young minister of the Methodist church. Mr. Rice, arrived from Grand Manan, where he has been laboring since June. When he arrived he complained of feeling unwell and has ever since been confined to his room. Dr. McLaren prescribed for him, but on Thursday it was noticed he was very nervous. Shortly before noon on the afternoon yesterday, he left his room and entered the bath room. A moment or two later one of the maids called Mrs. Lewin and said she heard a very peculiar noise, like an explosion, coming from the bath room. Mrs. Lewin went to the door and heard no sound, tried to open the door, but found it locked, and then called to Mr. Rice to open it. Receiving no response she summoned James Rice, brother of the deceased, and the servant man. With an axe they broke open the door and on entering the room found Mr. Rice on the floor, dying. A small wound on his breast, from which the blood was flowing, and a revolver on the floor by his side, told the sad tale. Death took place almost immediately. The suicide was the eldest son of Rev. S. H. Rice, one of the best known ministers of the Methodist conference, at present stationed at Cornwall, P. E. I. The deceased was just twenty-one years of age, graduated last spring from Sackville, and at the last Methodist conference he was admitted a probationer, and sent to labor on Grand Manan. The field was a heavy one, and being a very conscientious worker, there is no doubt that he used himself up mentally and physically.

AROUND THE WORLD.

The News of the World in Brief—The Cream of Our Exchanges.

Charles Fawcett's foundry at Sackville, was burned to the ground Sunday night. John L. Sullivan got into a row at Sandusky, Ohio, on Saturday, and was locked up by the police.

Mrs. Murchison, the doctor's wife who was knocked down and kicked at Bonshaw, died at P.E.I. yesterday. It is said she was encephalic.

Thirteen animals of the Ontario agricultural college herd, at Guelph, have been slaughtered because of tuberculosis developed by lymph.

As a feature of the coming winter carnival at Quebec, it is proposed to hold a grand caribou hunt on the ice in the harbor. The idea is to capture a dozen or more of the seven and a one-half pounders on the ice in front of the city, letting the local norloms hunt them down in canoes or otherwise.

A despatch to the news agency at London, from Capetown states that native runners have arrived at Fort Salisbury bringing confirmation of the reports of the annihilation by Matabeles of Captain Wilton and the force commanded by him. The runners state that Capt. Wilson was surrounded by Matabeles on Dec. 8, and that not a single man of the British force escaped with his life.

On Christmas day, one of the Freeman brothers, colored, recently convicted at London, for the murder of policeman Rankin at Chatham, now in the penitentiary at Kingston, Ont., ate three two pound currant loaves, besides meat, etc., for breakfast, and for dinner, after conferring his allowance of meat and vegetables, he ate seven and a one-half pounds of plum pudding. His equal as a pig-worm, has not been seen within the prison walls.

Wednesday was declaration day in Prince Edward Island. Twenty-three government and seven opposition supporters were declared to be elected. Of the vote polled for the various candidates, only about sixty per cent were cast on the prohibition plebiscite, and the vote stood four to one for prohibition. All the cities and towns, as well as the rural districts, went strongly for prohibition. There is no liquor law of any kind in force in the island at present.

At White Head, a station on the Erie and Huron Railway, near Chatham, Ontario, Alfred McDougall, twenty-two years of age, attempted to shoot Ella Sutherland because she refused to marry him. The men were crowded into a car, and the intended victim's screams brought other members of the family to the room. Young McDougall escaped to the yard, where he tied one end of a string to the trigger of his gun and the other end to a post, and holding the gun to his head blew half of his brains out.

Four men were drowned in the Symonds-Kaye gold mine at Montague, ten miles from Halifax, at midnight on Wednesday. At a depth of seventy-five feet is a tunnel running 250 feet east and west. The gang working at the east end of this tunnel fired off a blast. There was supposed to be a distance of fifty feet between this tunnel and an old working, but instead of this there was only five feet of wall. The blast drove a hole through this thin partition, through which water from the old workings rushed with great velocity and the men were drowned like rats in a trap.

A bold robbery was committed at the Three Rivers, Quebec, post office, at an early hour Thursday morning. The burglars forced the outer porch door at the front of the building, then bored away the woodwork of the door proper, so that the door would swing outward. The safe in the enclosure was drilled about ten inches below the combination, and the door blown out with dynamite. A small locked box inside the safe, containing registered letters was pried out. The burglars took away some $400 worth of stamps, $100 in money orders, and ten or twelve registered letters. It is supposed by some that the burglars got wind of a certain letter, supposed to contain a lot of money mailed by La Banque du Peuple, addressed to Mr. Scott, of the Basse Laurentides railway. This letter is missing.

In connection with Lord Aberdeen's choice of a chaplain, it is of some interest to know that the selection fell on a former Moncton pastor now resident at Ottawa. Rev. Mr. Winfield, last spring he gave up his charge of the Reformed Episcopal Church, at Ottawa, because of conscientious convictions which led him to join the Presbyterian Church. It is understood that the salary is to be $1400. He happened to preach in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church soon after the Governor-general came to Ottawa, and His Excellency, who was present, was apparently impressed by the sermon. A day or two later he asked Mr. Winfield to visit him at Rideau Hall. This probably led to the present appointment. Mr. Winfield formerly was rector of St. George's (Reformed Episcopal) church, Moncton.
