CHANCE FOR IMPROVEMENT.

The election of councillors for the parishes passed off very quietly. In some quarters attempts were made to bring in local and dominion politics, but in general the voters ballotted for the men as no great question was at issue. The personel of the council has not changed, there beir nly five new men, some of these having had seats at the board before.

Now that the councillors have a two years lease of the seats it is to be hoped that they will attend more strictly to the affairs of the county. It would be as well if the public accounts committee could spend a day or more, if necessary, examining the different bills, as very high charges have been made for a small amount of work, as the jail repairs for instance.

It is something extraordinary that such large sums should be spent year after year on this institution. It would be better if a new one was built. Then, again, the jail barn has been a costly structure. The miscellaneous account has grown from a small figure of ten years since to an amount altogether out of reason. The people complain of these things, and it would be wise if the council decide to devote more time to the expenditures.

There are a great many incidentals that might be lopped off with benefit to the people. It would be better to reduce expenses and get clear of the debts than to have to ask loans year after year as is now done. If the council will set its mind to these things now that they have more time the county will be a gainer.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS.

Already the juvenile reformatory is receiving occupants, Williams and Cunningham being sent from St. John and Oulette from Andover. These boys belong to the class who do not attend school, but who spend the time loafing round railway stations, stables and other places of a similar nature. They learn the worst phases of life and invariably copy the conduct of the loafers with which they come in contact. In every city and large village of the province, boys of this kind may be seen. They spend their evenings playing cards, reading the lowest kind of literature, and not only destroy themselves but lead others astray.

They shun the Sabbath and day schools and all institutions that would be a means of improvement are looked on as an abomination. Only one thing can be done with such as these, and the reformatory offers that. There they will be taught a trade and be enabled to earn an honest living when restored to liberty.

Compulsory attendance at school has wrought a great change in the cities of its adoption among this class of offenders. It prevents their meeting together and planning schemes for mischief, it engrosses their attention and by being compelled to go to school they soon learn to take an interest in the work and enter upon manhood fairly well educated and intelligent instead of ignorant and debased as now. If this law is adopted by the province the police courts and reformatory will have fewer inmates, and society will be much benefitted.

In this city for years the greater number of offences have been committed by boys, the police magistrate being compelled to let some of them free with a caution as he knew that it would ruin them to be sent to jail. The compulsory law would be looked on with favor here.

BISMARCK.

One of the great men of the present age is dying. It is reported that Prince Bismarck, the man of blood and iron, has only a few days to live. He has been a wonderful man. He took the weak and puny German states, knit them together and formed a nation, that at his word dashed the French fortifications to fragments, rushed through the country with the sweep of an avalanche, and almost before the rest of the world knew that war had been declared, had Paris humiliated and her starving people at his feet asking for mercy.

He has held the peace of Europe at his will. One signal from him and Germany, France, Italy, Russia, Austria, England and all the other kingdoms and empires would have been at war.

As a prince and ruler he was of few words, stern, quick to read men's motives, and of unflinching determination; as a man he was beloved by his associates and his residence was the scene of many a joyful gathering.

How the affairs of Germany will be conducted after his death is hard to determine. The emperor is hasty and full of martial ardor and would welcome a war. The officers of the army and navy would be glad to get an opportunity to secure promotion by acts of valor and the common soldiers would also favor it.

Bismarck's death may hasten the war which must eventually come.

THE refusal of the lords to pass the home rule measure, is the first step in a movement that is destined to do away with that branch of the parliament of the mother country. The almost unanimous vote against the bill showed that whether the masses were in its favor or not they would throw it out. They did not for a moment take into consideration the great body of electors who sanctioned such a bill, but seeing in it a lessening of their own dignity, they condemned it. If they had discussed its provisions and condemned it because it would be ruinous to the people of the country, nothing could be said. As it is they have set the electors against them and now the general cry is for an elective branch of parliament, the putting in power of men directly responsible for their acts.

It has been said that at the close of the present reign Great Britain will be a republic. If this comes to pass the rejection of the home rule bill will be one of the events that led to its adoption.

What the home rule bill was has nothing to do with the result. No matter what the bill was, the action of the lords is looked upon as arbitrary and uncalled for in the present age.

GOVERNOR BOYD has visited the city and returned to St. John. While here he made many friends and is already named the "people's governor." It is evident that the appointment is very satisfactory to all.

THE KESWICK MURDER.

Evidence of the Unfortunate Woman's Husband.

Last Thursday afternoon H. B. Rainsford, clerk of the peace, and Dr. Coulthard of this city, went to Keswick for examination of the body. At the time of his arrival Dr. Coulthard found that the deceased had been divested of the clothing worn at the time of the murder, and was laid out for burial. There were no physical indications that any attempt at outrage had been made, nor could the doctor come to any reasonable conclusion in favor of this theory from what he saw. The deceased woman was nearing the time of her confinement, which would have taken place very probably in two or three weeks. The examination disclosed the fact that there was one terrible cut, which must have been made by some sharp instrument such as the blade of an axe, from behind the deceased. The stroke must have been made with terrible force and strength, for the gash extended from the back of the neck, through the vertebrae of the spinal column, which it severed clean and clear to the muscles of the throat, passing through and dissevering the wind pipe. In fact the head was only held to the trunk by the muscles of the throat. Besides this gash there were no other cuts visible. There were heavy bruises over each eye, the left shoulder was badly bruised and discolored, and there was an ugly abrasion on the inside of one of the knee caps. Whether these bruises were made by the poll of the axe, or by some other heavy blunt instrument, or were the results of the heavy fall of the body after the fatal stroke, the doctor was unable to say.

The axe with which the terrible deed was committed, has been found in the barn or shed, under some barrels or boxes by Zopher Dunphy. It had the appearance of being washed in water, and where the handle enters the iron there are little clots of blood such as would be made from the dripping of water and blood from the handle. At the end of the handle, on the other side of the axe, there are also clots of blood.

The prisoner was arrigned before Col. Marsh in the police court Monday morning. The examination was postponed until Thursday, and when Prof. Woodbridge began to explain to the prisoner in the mute language that the case would not be heard till Thursday, the unfortunate negro commenced to whine and twist himself as if in great fear that he was about to be whipped. The police court room was crowded with spectators, all anxious to get a glimpse of the prisoner.

The following is the result of the examination on Thursday:

Hedley E. Wheary said: I reside in the parish of Douglas in the county of York; am a farmer; was the husband of the late Bertha Wheary; she was living on Wednesday the 27th day of September; saw her alive last on that day. My father, my mother, my sister Mabel, my brother Tyler, the prisoner Edward, my wife and two children live in the same house, my father and family lived separate from myself and wife. Left home at half past five of that day, all the members of family were home then; father and the prisoner were the only ones up when I left, returned about half past three, met my boy Frank aged three years and nine months, he told me his mother was killed, he followed me around. I asked him who killed her he said "Edward." House is situated about a quarter of a mile from the road. When I returned home I drove into the yard near the entrance to my father's shed. I left the horses standing in the yard and went back to go to my own shed; entered the house by my father's shed door, passing through his kitchen and through the hall; before I entered the house the only person I saw about was the prisoner; my youngest son Willie, over one year old, was in my father's room standing by a chair. When I got into my shed I passed my wife lying dead near the window; she was lying on her back on the floor, one hand I think was across her breast and the other lying by her side; there was a pool of blood at her head and another at her feet; there was a big wide cut at her neck. I then opened the shed door and saw a spatter of blood on the outside of it; the body was about three or four feet from the door and a foot from the window; went then into my yard and made signs to the prisoner, who was still at the wood pile, to put up the horses; prisoner saw me when I came home but did not come near me; did not ask him how my wife was killed; he did not tell me; prisoner put the horses in the barn; I ran across the fields and told neighbors; Howard and Mrs. Riley came over to my house; when I returned the prisoner was not there; did not see him again until after dark; prisoner had on the same clothes all the time; did not ask the prisoner about the matter; only corresponded with him by writing and had nothing to write on; when I returned with Howard and Mrs. Riley found Mrs. Carlisle at the house; did not notice anything about the body more than stated; after Dr. Coburn came he made an examination and then an inquest was held; the body was then prepared for burial by Mrs. Carlyle and others. Father and mother came home just before dark; sister returned shortly afterwards; then Edward came home. Have had no communication with the prisoner about my wife's death; when Edward returned he had the digging fork with him; I took it away from him for fear he would hurt some person with it; my late wife and the prisoner never had any dispute that I knew of; we had lived together for six years; the prisoner lived with my father. Zopher Dunphy showed me an axe outside my house on Friday night last; brought the axe to this city (axe produced). This is the same axe and belongs to my father, and was used about the premises.

Cross-examined by Mr. VanWart. Found the door leading to my shed fastened on the inside when I drove into the yard; the prisoner was at the woodpile; he appeared to look different from what he usually did.

Mrs. Carlisle said: Have heard the evidence of Hedley Wheary, live near his place, have known the prisoner for years, have seen him quite often, remember Wednesday, the 27th, was coming from mouth of Keswick, when I met Hedley Wheary, asked him what was the matter, he said his wife was dead, murdered lying in a pool of blood, to go on quick that there was no person around, when I got to the house, I saw Bertha Wheary lying dead on her back on the floor, her right arm and hand was on her breast, her left hand by her side, her dress was upturned above her knees. I turned the dress down, the blood was dry and stiff, she appeared to have been dead some time, her legs were apart between twelve and thirteen inches, did not appear to be lying in a natural position, Mrs. Riley and I went up stairs and got a bed to spread her on, when laying her out saw several sharp cuts on her legs, did not see similar cuts in her dress, saw cuts on the left shoulder, straight up and down, another across, there was a cut on the back of the neck almost severing the head from the body, some scratches on the face, both eyes were badly scratched. Mrs. Riley said, have heard the evidence of Hedley Wheary, went to the house when Hedley told me what the trouble was, when I got there I found Mrs. Carlisle, the Wheary's and children outside the house, I saw Bertha Wheary lying dead in a pool of blood.

Her evidence was the same as that given by Mrs. Carlisle.

The case will come up on Tuesday next as Monday is reserved for Scott act decisions. The court on Thursday was crowded, there being a large crowd of colored people present.

The prisoner refuses to say anything about the murder. When the axe was produced in court he pointed to it in a tragical way and by signs to the interpreter either said that he had used it, or that the police should not have brought it there. He said that he did not know Mrs. Riley or Mrs. Carlisle, though he has been acquainted with them for years and had tea with the former on the night before the murder.

One thing in his favor is that the clothes he had on when arrested, and which the people say he wore that day, show no signs of blood. It is plain from the post-mortem that no outrage was done, and it is believed that none was attempted. There are many theories advanced but none supply the missing links.

CANTERBURY STATION.

OCT. 5.— One of the saddest deaths that has occurred here for some time was that of Mrs. Mackillincuddy of Skiff Lake, she leaves seven small children.

The picnic in the Back Lane on Saturday last was a financial success, the day was very fine and everyone enjoyed themselves.

Two fine buildings erected in Canterbury since the fire, are the store and hall by J. H. Carr, and the store and dwelling by E. Lundon. Carr's building is 30 x 60 feet the first flat is to be used as a general store and the second flat as a hall. The building is to be finished in first class style and will supply Canterbury with a long felt want.

The buildings erected by E. Lundon are to be used as a store and dwelling, the main building being 25 x 45 feet, with an ell 25 x 29, at right angles to the main building and with 22 feet posts throughout.

The store which occupies the lower portion of the building is finished with stained sheathing, the floors being of hardwood as are also the floors of the lower portion of the ell. Miss Lundon who is book keeper and orders all the goods has now ready for opening the finest stock of dry goods, hardware, groceries etc., and her customers and friends will be pleased to see her relieved from the crowded quarters she has been forced to occupy since the fire.

Besides the buildings already mentioned, a large stable has been erected to accommodate the horses, of which a number are bred and owned by Mr. Lundon. These consisist of pure bred Clydes and standard bred trotting stock. The Clydes at present on hand are the imported stallion Jamie the Laird, who this year, added to his already long list of first prizes, a first at the Eastern Maine State Fair. There are also two imported mares, six years old, a three-year-old filly, two-year-old filly, which took first prize at Bangor this year and two colts, weanlings, being all pure bred. In trotting stock there are at present only two, these are by Harry Wilkes, are sisters, their dam being by Mambrino Charta. The older of these mares is in foal to W. J. Todd's Elation by Electioneer.

The Methodist church here has been torn down, a new one will be erected on the old site. In the meantime, services will be held in J. H. Carr's hall.

A public entertainment was held in the hall on Saturday, to aid in building the new Methodist church. The chief feature of the entertainment, were the readings by the elocutionist George R. Band. Considering the dark, rainy night, the entertainment was fairly well attended.

The election for councillors for the parish of Canterbary, passed off quieter than parish elections usually do here. The contestants were Carr and Jamieson against Lawson and Paterson, the result being that Carr and Jamieson were elected with a majority of almost two to one.

THE VALKYRIE LEADS.

The first of the series of races for the American cup, between the British yacht Valkyrie and the American yacht, Vigilant, was started Thursday, at 11.26, a. m., but, owing to the lightness of the wind, a finish could not be had within the time limit of six hours, so the race was declared off. Enough, however, was developed in the course of the struggle to indicate what is likely to happen, at least in one line of sailing, when the wind is sufficient to secure a finish. Our good friends, the Americans, have been quite free in their predictions that the Vigilant would surely win if the wind was light, and that in windward work the Valkyrie would be beaten. As to the latter, Thursday's race afforded a sufficient test of what the British yacht could do, and the theory as to the superiority of the Vigilant in light winds must also now be regarded as wholly exploded. The wind Thursday, during most of the day, off Sandy Hook, was blowing at the rate of from four to six miles an hours, and in that very small breeze the Vaklyrie easily ran away from her American rival, reaching the turning boat, which was fifteen miles to leeward, a long distance ahead of the Vigilant. The wind continued free for an hour and forty-five minutes after the race started, and then hauled to the south southwest, so that it was necessary for the yachts to beat to the stake boat, which had until then been to leeward. In the windward work the Valkyrie walked right away from the Vigilant in the light breeze and turned the stake boat twenty-one minutes ahead of her. As the Valkyrie was three and a half hours reaching the turning boat the superiority of the Valkyrie to the Viligent may be put down at about ten per cent, in light winds. It looks now as if the American cup is likely to return to England.

WICKHAM, QUEENS.

OCT. 2.— Rev. Mr. Shaw (Baptist) preached a very interesting sermon here on Sunday, the 24th ult.

Amos Sharp has just completed a very fine house. Mr. Urquhart was foreman of the work.

The hon. A. G. Blair and L. P. Ferris, M.P.P., who were traveling through the parish, gave their friend, J. W. Carpenter, a brief visit.

Miss B. H. Upton paid her friends a short visit last week.

Miss Frances Carpenter and Miss Alice Carpenter, who spent the summer with their relatives, have returned to their former places, the former in Philadelphia, the latter in Leominster, Mass.

Mrs. Geo. Day gave a pleasant reception to the young folks on Thursday of last week.

BLOOMFIELD RIDGE.—A very successful harvest supper was held at Bloomfield Ridge last Thursday evening. Tables were spread in the new church and everyone went away perfectly satisfied with the great variety and abundance of eatables which were placed before them by the attentive waiters. After supper the company were entertained by music in the hall which was furnished by Miss Bent of Maugerville. The sum of forty-seven dollars was realized.

AROUND THE WORLD.

The News of the World in Brief—The Cream of Our Exchanges.
