THE WAR IN SIAM.

Siam Preparing to Fire on and Ram French War Ships.

LONDON, July 22.—The spirit of aggressive rapacity which has too often been the spirit of France in her dealings with weaker foreign powers has re-appeared in her controversy with Siam. It is visible in the rather piratical enterprise of the French gun-boats off Bangkok. It is audible alike in the speeches of her Foreign minister to the chamber and in the tone of the most serious and respectable French papers. She has at least a disputable case and a doubtful grievance against Siam. She acts as if right were wholly on her side or as if she did not care whether it were or not. A Siamese official has probably mentioned a French official engaged in the hostile expedition. The Siamese had the incredible effrontery to capture a French officer invading Siamese territory with a military force in time of peace. These are the grievances which Siam has acknowledged by unrelentingly investigating the acts of her mandarins and by releasing the French captain. The French on the other hand, in violation of their treaty with Siam, have sent gun-boats into the river Menam, the passage of which they forced, and in violation of every principle of international law have sent an ultimatum to the Siamese government embodying a demand for the surrender of territory admittedly belonging to Siam, to which the French have absolutely no other claim than that of the possession of superior force.

BUTTER MAKING.

A Paper on the Way to Make Good Marketable Butter.

The following is the paper read by Mr. Frederick McDonald of Glenadale, before the farmers and dairymen's association at their annual meeting in Charlottetown last week.—
Concerning the manufacture of butter, much has been written, and much of the local lore of neighborhoods can hardly be said, consisting as it does of traditional manipulations which are to be learned much better by experience than by reading. Processes in some respects differ almost diametrically, as each may be presumed to think he has hit upon the plan that is likely to produce the best results. I can hardly do better than detail the various processes of my own system of butter-making, which is attended with satisfactory results. Every effort in breeding and in feeding is directed toward the production of the largest quantity or the richest quality of milk. Milking is done quickly, regularly and thoroughly, the last drop being drawn from the udder at each milking, since nothing tends so much to cause a cow to fall off in her yield as the leaving of even a small quantity of milk in the udder. As the milk or some part of it is to be used as food, of course everything in connection with the operation is as clean as possible. Not only is the vessel into which the milk is drawn, but the udder and teats if necessary, are washed and the milk is strained through a fine cloth. In all cases care must be taken immediately on being drawn. After the milking the milk is taken to the dairy, where it is separated by an Alexandria cream separator with a capacity of fifty gallons an hour. The skim milk goes into the milk can and the cream is set away in a can immersed in ice cold water where it is kept sweet until twenty-four hours before churning, when it is ripened.

SIAM'S KING.

It is an Interesting Young Ancestor, and Rules a Queer People.

The king of Siam is a monarch who has more absolute power over his subjects than the Czar. Few men in the world have as much to make them feel big and important, but for one in his position, he is a very much civilized and fin-de-siècle young person. He is small in person. His head is crowned with a golden pyramid of jewels, rising in circular tiers, diminishing as they go upward, until they end in a long pencil-like point, which extends nearly two feet above the forehead of his singly own. His body is clad in gorgeous coat and vest, heavily embroidered in gold and jewels, and in place of trousers, he has the rich brocade sarong of the Siamese about his loins and waist. It comes down below his knees at the front, and it looks not unlike a pair of fancy knickerbockers. Below these are shapely pair of calves in white silk stockings, and his feet are thrust into short, covered heeled slippers, pointed like the shoe of a Turk. The whole makes a costume brilliant and grand. He is a pleasant looking fellow, and his olive-brown face is plump and unlined. He has beautiful black eyes, a broad, bright smile rather full form, and a short, straight black hair. Under his rather short and half-lion mane, there is a silky black moustache, and below this the lips are rather thick, and the chin plump and well rounded. His hands and feet are well made, and his fingers are long and slender. He is the ninth son of Maha Mongkut, the last king of Siam, and he was picked out of a family of eighty-four children to be placed upon the throne. He has thirty-four half-brothers and forty-nine half-sisters.

France demands 95,000 square miles of territory, besides a few petty millions of francs for damages, which, if genuine, a few thousands would cover. There is to be no inquiry into the facts, no negotiation, no opportunity for Siam to do so much as to state her own view of her own case. She is an independent kingdom, about one fourth larger than France in area, and she is to submit within forty-eight hours to humiliation, dismemberment and probable ruin. If she refuses to follow, such stripped of technicalities and details, are the facts which all the world's eyes are turned to. The French cannot obscure. These events occur in a part of the world so remote and are so entirely in union with the habit and policy of France toward oriental states that they might have attracted little attention were it not that they are to bring France into collision with England. Siam is what is known in the jargon of oriental diplomacy as a buffer state, interposing a considerable and most useful stretch of territory between the French and British frontiers.

England has moreover an important commercial interest in Siam, France having next to none, and English subjects in Bangkok in considerable numbers. She cannot, therefore, tolerate French encroachments which threaten the independent existence of Siam or the treaty and trade rights of her own people. She is bound to protest both as a champion of lords with such singular moderation and firmness that even the Anglophobes of France, who appear to include nearly the whole population, can find no cause of offence in his language. In England on the other hand, it is felt that Lord Rosebery's civil work indicates no weakness of purpose. His course and capacity are so well known here as to command the confidence of both parties. They are so well known in France that it is not expected France will extend her enterprises to a point which might compel him to interpose. These are the outlines of the situation. It is critical, but probably not dangerous, unless it should happen too often that despatches from Paris arrive too late to prevent eager naval officers on the spot from taking the law into their own hands.

SCANDALOUS TREATMENT OF LORD DUFFIN. Meantime Lord Duffin returned to France temporarily. He had been withdrawn by the English foreign minister on account of the long-continued and scandalous personal attacks of the baser Paris papers, mentioned even by the less baser. In all civilized and in most barbarous countries an ambassador is held sacred, and the government to which he is accredited finds means of protecting him from abuse as well as from violence. France is the exception. True, offending papers may be prosecuted, not only at the instigation of the ambassador, a provision which, whether or not the authors of this singular process ever intended, makes a prosecution impossible. The ambassador would think it inconsistent with his dignity to ask for the indictment of those gutter journals, or of any journal. No foreign government would allow its representative to put himself in that humiliating attitude. On the other hand, no government could suffer an ambassador to be reviled and insulted forever. Lord Rosebery's patience was almost equalled. But at last, convinced that no redress was to be had, he told Lord Duffin to come home. If he now sends him back it is, as I understand, solely for the conduct of negotiations relating to Siam. Those finished, Lord Duffin will once more find himself in need of sea air at Walmer, and his duties as Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports will again become imperative.

OMINOUS CLOUDS GATHERING. The Newfoundland business may detain him. This is a more delicate difficulty than Siam. There is nothing in the lobster question which arbitration might not settle in a week, but Newfoundland unhappily has to be dealt with in Egypt. The French keep every eye open so long as England clings to the banks of the Nile. The visit of the Khedive to the Sultan is a third difficulty, and perhaps Madagascar a fourth. Ten days ago there was not a cloud on the horizon. Now they gather from all quarters at once.

GREAT IS THE GLADSTONIAN GULLITINE. The automatic Gladstone gullitine resumed operations on Thursday on the stroke of ten and did its work with its usual neatness and despatch. The last ten clauses of the home rule bill, not counting clauses, schedules and such matters, were passed through committee. They were for the most part undebated, unconsidered and unopposed. Such is legislation under Mr. Gladstone; such the process by which an old constitution is torn up and a new constitution framed. The will of an old man in a hurry is omnipotent in the house of commons. Rapid, indeed, is the progress of debasement and demoralization. The excitement, indignation, anger and stormy ebullitions of the first week are seen no more. They were sometimes creditable, but they were at least signs of a healthy vitality. They were a protest against an odious form of tyranny, the more odious because enforced with the forms of law. But after three weeks of this "discipline" the house becomes weary of the contest, accepts its fate and hardy ever remonstrates.

CIVIL SERVANTS IN IRELAND. There has been a contest, rather languid, over the fate of civil servants in Ireland, who, after six years, are to be handed over to the tender mercies of Messrs. Healy, Walsh, Dillon & Co. with the option of retiring meantime on meagre pensions. There has been another contest over the police, whose fate is still of uncertainty.

THE FINANCIAL CLAUSES. There has been another debate on Irish finance, which is still in a fluid state. There has been one scene, when Mr. John Morely made another attack — he cannot keep his hands off them — on another Irish judge. Mr. Carson called it a cowardly attack, and had forthwith to withdraw "cowardly."

WHAT THE FRENCH DEMANDS MEAN. The Bangkok correspondent of The Times says, concerning the terms of France's ultimatum: "Europe, and especially Great Britain, should know that this territorial demand represents 65,000 square miles. It includes the province that Burma ceded to Siam on the condition that it should be ceded to any other power and 50,000 miles of northern Siam, into which the French have never advanced. The demand for the evacuation of the left bank of the Mekong river proves that governor general de Lamouignon is not content with the French possession of the tract claimed as antrane. The indemnity demanded represents France's previous claims and should satisfy the most grasping government. In fact, France demands the dismemberment and ruin of Siam, and, if these be denied, will make war upon the French possession of the tract claimed as antrane.
