

LOCAL NEWS.

REMOVED.—G. I. Ginter has resigned his position as Canadian express agent and will be succeeded by G. R. Perkins.

GRAND LAKE.—Capt. Brannen has been here in connection with the Grand Lake steamer.

THROUGH THE ICE.—Several teams broke through the ice at the St. Marys landing on Tuesday.

VISITING.—Thos. Hetherington, ex-M. P. P. for Queens county, was in the city during the week.

REMOVING.—H. D. Currie, dentist, intends removing to Cambridge, Mass., about the first of May.

HIS OLD STAND.—Dr. T. W. Lunn is engaged in dentistry at his old place of residence, Centreville.

WELLS ANDERSON.—Hon. T. W. Anglin will address the Irish literary and benevolent society at St. John on the 6th April.

S. A. FORTNER.—Capt. McLean, of Woodstock's contingent of the S. A. forces with the band, will bombard this town about the middle of next week.

WILL DEER.—The illustrious Captain Teak has arrived from Halifax, and will dine at the Barker this evening with the members for York.

TENNANT, DAVIES & CO. are showing some very handsome designs in new Brussels' Carpets, which they have just received. They invite inspection.

FOUR MILLION.—James Humble on Ryan Brook and the Nashwak has put in four million of spruce and cedar for Alex. Gibson. He will drive them to the mill.

ALL SMOKE.—A small blaze at the residence of Wm. Crowdon called out the firemen on Monday evening. There was more smoke than fire and no damage done.

ANOTHER FACTORY.—Farmers and others in the parish of Derby, Miramichi, have subscribed $1,000 worth of stock and intend building a cheese factory as soon as possible.

STRAAT CROSS CREEK.—It is reported that John Buchanan will build and run a store at Cross Creek, and that a branch of the Stanley garage will also be opened at the same place.

TO THE AVENUE.—It will be learned with regret that Sydney Murray of Springhill has had to be removed to the asylum. It is believed, however, that he will recover in a short time.

PLEASED TO SEE HIM.—No one received a heartier welcome from the older members of the legislature than did John Anderson, ex-M. P. P. for York, on Wednesday. Both sides gave him a cordial greeting.

FOR REV. A. J. MOWAT.—The new church to be built at Montreal, in which the Rev. A. J. Mowat, late of this city, will officiate, will cost $100,000, and will seat 1,200, with a school room to accommodate 600.

BAD CUT.—Geo. Todd is confined to the house by a bad cut, which he received whilst working at Eaton's mill. He was using a sapping axe and gave his leg a good whacking. He lost considerable blood.

BY WAGON.—Ex-councillor Brown, of Upper Southampton, drove from that place to this city, a distance of forty-five miles, with a wagon. While here he purchased a plowing machine for his new mill on Grier's creek.

GOSS TO MASSACHUSETTS.—Rev. Mr. Nobles, of Gibson, left for Hillsburg, N. S., Thursday, and will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist church there to-morrow. Rev. Mr. Knight will officiate during his absence on the Gibson circuit.

THE WATER WORKS.—Most of the pipes are in working order, and it is thought that there will be very little trouble from this forth. It has been a busy time for Supt. Burchill, but he has carried the work through quite successfully.

THE W. C. T. U.—Thursday evening the W. C. T. U. entertained the members of the infantry school at their hall. There was a large attendance, the boys enjoying themselves immensely. Another of these socials is promised in the near future.

AMONG OTHERS.—Among other visitors to the city this week may be mentioned Mr. Covett, of Halifax; R. E. Armstrong, of the St. John Globe; John A. Boves, of the St. John Gazette; and R. T. Babbitt, of Gagetown.

SHOULDER BROKEN.—John Flynn, of this city, while working in the New Hampshire lumber works a short time since, was thrown from a load of logs by his handspike slipping, and had his right shoulder broken. He has returned home.

THE STAMEN.—G. F. Baird, M. P., and Thos. Taylor, of Sheffield, were here on Tuesday on business in connection with the steamboat accommodation between this city and St. John the coming season. The intention of these gentlemen appears to be to give the best accommodation.

FREDERICTON BRIDGE.—Mr. Burpee will have the bridge planked with the first floor before the ice gets dangerous and it will be but a short job to put down the top floor. It is to be of two inch birch plank which will wear far longer than spruce or hemlock, especially after it gets seasoned.

IN THE EVERGLADES.—Will and Harry Chester are having great sport among the everglades of Florida. They took a brace canoe with them and astonish the natives by the ease with which they pass the cracker dugout. One remarked a few days since: "We uns like the boat you uns use."

ROBBERY.—The residence of Wilmet Tracy at McAdam was burglarized a few days since and everything not bolted down was carried away. Clothing, toilet, wash-tub and all except the stove mysteriously disappeared. There is no clue to the perpetrator. It is about time McAdam was supplied with police.

ST. MARYS CHURCHYARD.—At a recent meeting of the corporation which now assumes control of the lower St. Marys burying ground, a pastoral letter and edict was read from the bishop, setting forth the power of the church. It was resolved that the sum of five dollars be levied upon all bodies outside of the church who wish to bury their dead in that churchyard.

ST. MARYS SOAP WORKS.—It may be taken as a fact that John M. Wiley, druggist, of this city, will run the St. Marys soap works, the opening to take place in a short time. He has made a proposition to the stockholders which they have decided to accept. The toilet soap, known as Murch's, will be manufactured, as well as several medicines for which Mr. Wiley has the patent rights.

THE WEDDING.—On Thursday evening last, Mr. and Mrs. Austin Harris, of the Springhill hotel, celebrated their wedding. A large party of their friends drove up from this city in the Colossus, and had enough tinware to stock a store. There was plenty of music and a general good time. A beautiful supper was spread, and the tin wedding will be remembered by the participants for some time to come. The general hope was that Austin and Mrs. Harris might live to celebrate their golden wedding. No. 5 company, train at Fredericton Junction; No. 6 company, train at St. Stephen.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

The Sun's "Own Correspondent" An Adapt at "Raising."

The St. John Sun of Tuesday last, under the heading, "where the Money Goes," publishes a very garbled account of the amounts expended on the bridges of the province, and in connection with the lumber business. If the Sun's statement is compared with the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison of the reports that the Sun's editor is an adept at "raising." Ten dollars in his machinations loom up into a hundred with one stroke of the pen. Sixteen dollars are raised to sixty-six, and so on. A change in the printed report issued by the board of works, a person will at once come to the conclusion that the editor of that journal has been playing ten cent "auto" in his dreams, and has given his readers the benefit of his ravings; or that he has fallen a victim to some of the many afflictions to which weak minds are peculiarly subject.

The singular fact is evident from a comparison