HOW TO FEED STOCK.

First Prize Essay on Timely Topics in Feeding.

To many the coming winter will be a very trying one. What with a short crop of straw, grain turning out fairly well, roots below the yield of other years, pasture gone for months, making fall feeding a necessity, and that feeding has been done, perhaps, with stuff stored for winter, presents a problem not easily solved; how to do the winter feeding to the best advantage.

HER NEW HOME.

Lizzie Borden and Her Sister Have Purchased Another Home.

If Lizzie Borden ever tried to live so as to give her critics she has given it up as a hopeless task. They found no end of fault with her as long as she lived in the old house on Court street, Fall River, where the murders were committed, and now that she has moved into another dwelling in a better part of the city they say that she has come into the money of her murdered parents and is making it fly. Among the sensational stuff that has been published about her recently is the news that she refuses to wear mourning and goes tearing through the streets in a buggy beside her sister Emma in a very light dress, while Emma dresses in deep mourning. According to the New York Sun, the fact is that she has on two occasions hired a very team and gone out for a ride, her own and only horse being busied by the work on the farm beyond the city limits. She has indeed worn a light gown—one of her old ones she has selected from the wardrobe hanging in the closet in the old house after the murder. But Emma has not accompanied her in deep or any other kind of mourning, for the simple reason that neither of these original and interesting women believes in wearing mourning.

CARE OF HARNESS.

Some farmers pay little attention to the proper care of their harness, devoting less attention to it than to their horses, and the harnesses they use are of a cheap quality, and are not made to last. It is the duty of every farmer to see that his harnesses are of the best quality, and that they are properly cared for. A harness is a very important part of a horse's equipment, and it is one that should not be neglected. A harness that is well cared for will last for many years, and it will be found to be a very economical investment.

PREPARING BEES FOR WINTER.

The time of the year has arrived when we must set about preparing the tiny workers for their winter's rest, says a writer in the Farmer's Advocate. Bees should be fed by the twentieth of September, as it is hard to get them to take in the feed when the weather begins to get colder, as it generally does after that date. Now I want to say a word about the next step in the preparation, that of packing them in chaff for the winter, and I think that this should be done by the tenth of October, for by this date the bees are beginning to get cold. The plan which I follow is not the one of shipping caskets made out of canvas and stuffed with chaff, but a method which I think started in my spary. I will try to explain it as well as it is possible. First, I take a long strip of tin about one inch in width and cut it into pieces about four inches in length. I then fasten one of these pieces by one end to the bottom of the division board in such a way that it is extending backward along the bottom of the hive. I then fasten the other end to the bottom of the hive with a tack; then take two inch wire nails and put one in each side of the top of the division board, so that it will not press forward against the comb; then take dry chaff and pack it firmly behind the division board. This done, I next take a piece of canvas and cut it to the size of the outside of the bottom of the supers, or sections, as you may call it, and fasten it to the bottom with tacks. I then fill it with chaff and the hive is ready for winter. After they are all ready for winter I leave them out on their summer stands until the winter sets in. I have left them out as late as the third of January, and they wintered in the shape. Still, I think it is better to have them in by the last week in November.
