FREDERICTON, JULY 15, 1893.

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

The dispatches which Sir Charles Tupper is on his way to Canada. Great care is also taken by the press to spread abroad the impression that he is coming over on private business. Sir Charles has been Canada's well paid high commissioner in London for a long time, and he was never yet known to make a visit to Canada on private business. It may be said with equal truth that he never came on public business either, although always at the public expense. It is always in response to a Macedonian cry of distress from his party at home that the knight of Cumberland comes over the sea. Sometimes it is on the eve of an election, and sometimes his coming precedes by a short time a change in the policy of the party or the constitution of the cabinet. What he is coming to do just now, of course, not being in the secrets of the powers that be, we cannot say, but we are of the opinion that the weakened condition and general disability of the government will necessitate a complete diagnosis on the part of the Great Physician. Just what tonic he will administer to the party will depend not so much upon the conditions of the patient, as upon what a careful feeling of the pulse of the country indicates to be the general trend of public opinion. In other words he will endeavor to make his patient conform to his surroundings. Of course if the condition of the patient is a very complicated one he will not readily conform, and these are just the symptoms that Dr. Tupper will have to counter. Orangism affecting the spleen; the Manitoba school question bothering the liver; monopoly at the heart, and McCarthyism sapping the system, will just the skill of the doctor to the uttermost, and render him a hopeless one. After all why would it not be better to quietly let nature take its course, as it must inevitably do in the end. Among other good things this would necessitate a rest, and possibly a change of climate.

The home rule bill is being forced through parliament at a rate that would make the hair of an engine driver stand on end. The Grand Old Man is evidently determined not to have any humbugging about the passing of his pet measure. When he thinks there has been talking enough over any section, or when he thinks it best not to discuss it at all, he simply moves the chairman to apply the clote, and it goes right through as a matter of course. The measure, which seems somewhat strange to those who do not understand its merits, is perhaps the only means by which the bill could be got through the committee of the whole house during the natural life of Mr. Gladstone. But while it will serve to pass the bill through the house of commons, it will not work in the house of lords, nor is it by any means certain that it will satisfy the people, who will no doubt sooner or later be called upon to say whether home rule is to be an established fact or not. In the meantime the bill through committee is being greatly complicated and embarrassed by the inability of chairman Mellor to fill the position.

The negro question is causing wide-spread uneasiness in the north. Every once in a while some brutal negro outrages a white woman, and thereupon the people of the locality proceed to burn, shoot or hang the culprit. The justice that overtakes the offender is swift, but unfortunately there is sometimes suspicion that the victim of the avenging mob is not the guilty party. To those who know nothing of the negro question as it exists in the south these lynch law executions seem barbarous in the extreme. Those who are in position to know whereof they speak, however, say that this is the only effectual way to keep the negro in restraint. The natural process of the law, they say, has no terrors for him. It seems strange, nevertheless, that the evil in place of being extinguished, which summary executions seem to be rather on the increase. The peculiar characteristics of the negro may have something to do with it.

The question as to whether or not the World's Fair is to be opened on Sundays, which is causing so much controversy among those interested, seems to be solving itself. The fair has been opened to the public for two or three Sundays, and the attendance is so far short of what was expected that the management have abandoned their minds that the majority of the people prefer to rest on the Sabbath day. If the question can be settled in this way it ought to be satisfactory, and would certainly reflect credit upon the people whose morality made such a settlement possible.

The Fairville Fire.

Fire has again scourged the village of Fairville, St. John Co., after a respite of only a year since the last conflagration there. The fire started at 4:30 Monday afternoon in a barn in the rear of the Currie hotel on the corner of Main street and the Milford road, and the high southwest wind so rapidly fanned the flames that in less than three hours nearly four acres of ground had been burned over and more than forty houses completely destroyed, while several others had been damaged by fire and water. Beginning at the Currie hotel, the fire burned almost every building in the section from Milford street along Main to Station, down Station to Franklin, along Franklin to Maiden lane, thence to Prospect street and back to Milford road, about fifty yards from the hotel. The city and Carleton firemen by great exertions prevented the flames extending past the house and barns of Dr. O'Neill on Milford street. The origin of the fire is unknown, but there are some who believe it was incendiary. Among the buildings burned was the Canadian Pacific railway station and freight shed. The agent, Frank J. Stout, furnished; Chas. L. Doherty, dry goods, boots and shoes and groceries; C. Duran, boot and shoe; M. Morris, saloon; Fred. Barhill, general grocery; J. R. Bartlett, hotel; Francis Currie, hotel; Mrs. Mary Morris, tavern; Wm. Fox, tailor. Some of these buildings were also used as private residences. Besides these, there were about fifty dwelling-houses burned. The fire covered nearly the same ground as that of a year ago, and many of the buildings burned were new within the last twelve months. It is hard to estimate the total loss. Some put it at $75,000, others at $125,000, and still others at $150,000. The insurance was very small. Fairville has practically no fire protection, and the insurance rates are so high that very many owners prefer to carry the risk themselves. This is the third time Fairville has been visited by fire.

MRS. HARTLEY'S DEATH.

Full Particulars of the Double Drowning at Missoula. Further particulars have been received by telegram concerning the drowning of Mrs. G. Napier Hartley at Missoula a week ago Thursday. It seems that a party of five, comprising Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. Hickernell, of Missoula, and Miss Thompson, of St. Louis, had gone camping twenty miles from Missoula, on the bank of a swift mountain stream. The gentlemen of the party spent the time hunting and fishing, and the morning of the accident had gone some distance up the stream fishing. During their absence the ladies attempted to cross the stream on a foot log, when Mrs. Hartley and Mrs. Hickernell fell off and were both drowned in the swift rushing current. There was no assistance at hand. Miss Thompson stood on the shore and witnessed their death struggles without being able to do them in the least. One can scarcely imagine the grief of the young husbands on returning to camp and learning of their common bereavement. Mr. Hickernell is a well known lawyer of Missoula, who like Mr. Hartley, has been married only a short time. Miss Thompson is well known here. She is a daughter of the late James Thompson, and sister of George and Robert Thompson, now of St. Louis. She has been in poor health for some time past, and was on a visit to Mrs. Hartley, hoping that the rest and change would be a benefit. But the terrible shock she has sustained must have injured her.

The following is a full report of the sad drowning, as published in the Evening Missoulian of July 7th: Yesterday morning at about 10:30 o'clock Mrs. G. Napier Hartley and Mrs. E. Hickernell, of Missoula, were drowned in the Lo Lo, and the news did not reach the city until after five o'clock in the afternoon. The true particulars of the dreadful accident will never be obtained, as they were known only to the two unfortunate young women now cold in death. The story is gleaned from persons who took pains to learn all the circumstances connected with the case. Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, Mr. and Mrs. Hickernell and Miss Thompson, a young lady friend of St. Louis, Mo., who was visiting Mrs. Hartley, left Missoula Wednesday for an outing on the Lo Lo creek and stopped at the Wilkinson ranch, twenty-two miles west from Missoula. The ranch is situated on the south fork of the Lo Lo creek about one-half of a mile above its confluence with the main stream. Across the forks, a short distance from the house, is a log which serves as a foot bridge. It is a big piece of timber with the rough bark still on it, and is as safe enough as a bridge for a cool headed person, but the water beneath rushes along with the impetuosity of a mill race. Yesterday morning about 9:30 o'clock Mr. Wilkinson and his three children, a boy and two girls, Mr. and Mrs. Hickernell, Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, and Miss Thompson left the house and crossed the log bridge safely. Mr. Hartley and Mr. Hickernell started up stream, intending to walk quite a distance up and whip the stream down. Mr. Wilkinson went to work in a field some distance from the bridge. The ladies of the party were warned not to attempt to cross the log alone. Miss Thompson walked upstream about one hundred yards to fish. Mr. Hartley and Mrs. Hickernell having a small rifle and revolver, said they would look for some small game. The children remained with them.

Our hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Arlington Wright, who so wisely chose the prettiest month in the year to embark on the path of matrimony. He married Miss Blanche Ketchum of Bridgewater, Me., and upon their arrival here the boys turned out en masse and gave them a noisy welcome. "The knight of the black horse" led the motley host, and when they had fired away their powder and shouted themselves hoarse, the bride and groom appeared on the verandah, and the scene was changed to congratulations and feasting. Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Brown, Rev. Mr. Granville, and Misses Lily and Lucy Grant gave good wishes to the happy pair. The Dominion Islander, held this year on Grand Mann Island. They will be gone a week. We wish them bon voyage and safe return.

HARVEY STATION.

July 5.—The farmers were all very glad to see the rain yesterday which was very much needed. The weather for some time past has been extremely hot and dry and the crops were not looking as well as they should. The hay crop promises to be the lightest that we have had for some years. Potatoes look very promising. It is with regret that we report the death of Mrs. Wm. Messer Jr. of Tweedside, who died on the 18th ult. after a short illness. She leaves a husband and five small children to mourn their sad loss. Deceased was the third daughter of John Rutherford Esq. of Tweedside. Rev. Jas. A. She was taken ill Sunday evening, and kept sinking until her death. She will be very much missed by her large circle of friends in the city and province. Mrs. John A. Morrison, sr., died at her residence, "River Side," below town, Tuesday evening last, about 9 o'clock, after a short illness. Her husband, J. A. Morrison, was remembered, died only a few weeks ago.
