

The students of the University of New Brunswick did themselves infinite discredit by their conduct at the city hall Thursday evening. Much allowance is made generally for the antics of college students, but when they step beyond the bounds of decency, they deserve and will receive the severe condemnation of an orderly community. Citizens who go to the city hall, pay their money and expect to enjoy the entertainment offered there, have no right to be insulted by a lot of young hoodlums, who rack their intellects to invent some new scheme for shocking the taste, and trying the patience of the people. To let a number of huns slob on a respectable audience, to frighten nervous ladies and create a disturbance, to openly insult their entertainers, was conduct worthy only of rowdies, much less young men who should be models of propriety. The students may think such actions awfully clever, but if they had the instincts of gentlemen, they would shrink from such an exhibition as they made of themselves Thursday evening. The leading people of the city were present at the concert, including the lieutenant-governor and Mrs. Fraser, and a gross insult was offered to every person in the hall. The disturbance was of such a character as to demand the attention of the University authorities, and if some action is not taken by the faculty to mark their disapproval of the disgraceful affair, the public will conclude that those who control the University have little regard for its good name, and the decorum of those who are receiving its instruction.

SNEERING AT THE FARMERS.

The Toronto Empire, the organ of the monopolists and combinationists, has sneered at the farmers in its tariff discussions, and is properly rebuked by the Montreal Star, an independent conservative newspaper. In an unsuccessful attempt to show that the tariff does not press heavily upon the farmers of Canada, the Empire remarked: "For instance, nobody will say that the ordinary farmer uses books and periodicals to the extent that other classes do. Do they use anything like the quantity of paper that other classes do? How many bicycles do they ride to pay the $64,000 on these, or how many do they buy for the $242,000 on cigars? The farmer is quite able to purchase them, but nobody pretends that the bulk of the silks, fancy goods, and manufactures of gold and silver, are not used by the residents of cities and towns."

The Star thinks the liberals could not desire better ammunition than this with which to fight an election. "For instance," declares the Empire, "with a triumphant smile, 'nobody will say that the ordinary farmer uses books and periodicals to the extent that other classes do.' If this be true, what is the reason? Are books a bad thing that the virtuous farmer eschews? Does the farmer waste his time at billiards or in pottering about in a tennis suit, so that he can get little chance to read? If these reasons be rejected by those who know the farmer, his aspirations and his laborious life, what others would they give, if asked to explain the Empire's absurd statement? They might, in the first place, object that there are other classes which read no more than the average farmer, and for much the same reasons, perhaps. For it is not the taxing of the books that does the mischief, it is the general taxing of the man that prevents him from buying books. They might, in the second place, point to the fact that many farmers who have the leisure and the library, are thoroughly well read men, thus proving beyond a doubt, that it is no class prejudice against light and learning that prevents the ordinary farmer from using books and periodicals as freely as other persons in the community. And they probably would, in the third place, take leave to say that where overwork and lack of leisure bar the way of the farmer to such reading as he has, the fault to some degree lies with a tariff that taxes his necessities and declines to pave his way to the right market.

In the same way, it is little less than insulting to joke about the fact that farmers have no use for bicycles or choice cigars, or that their wives get fewer silks and less jewelry than some other women, while all the time refusing them tariff relief. Do they not like pleasure trips? Are they fond of poor tobacco? Are they without the natural love for the beautiful things of life? It is poor judgment for a government organ to strive to make the farmer discontented with the present tariff by pointing out that he is able to afford so few of the good things about him that, really, he pays but little into the customs revenue. Tariff reform was asked for to remedy precisely this state of things. The first need of Canada today is to put the ordinary farmer, the industrious, intelligent farmer, into such a position that he can round out his life with reading and leisure like other reasonable successful men. If we can do this, we can fill up the Northwest without an effort, we can take the export back again tenfold, we can give our manufacturers a home market that will secure to them success and to us an abundance of competition.

This is the errand entrusted to the present session of parliament, says the Star, and the Empire would be in better business urging the government it supports, to obey the mandate of the people, with loyal respect for the spirit it springs from, than in attempting to persuade the farmer that when the tariff taxes goods out of his reach, it confers upon him a benefit.

Very general regret is expressed at the intended removal of Mr. Inglis from this city. He has been a resident of Fredericton for the past nine years, and has won the respect and esteem of all classes in the community. Under his able management, the bank of B. N. A. has developed a splendid business, and Mr. Inglis has secured what every man enjoys, even at the sacrifice of tender ties, a well deserved promotion. The Herald feels that it will receive the feeling of the business community and the minds of all who have been thrown in contact with Mr. Inglis that his removal is a distinct loss to the city. We wish him and his amiable lady, continued prosperity and happiness.

MAGNANIMOUS Mr. Foster has reduced the duty on coal oil from seven and one-half to six cents per gallon, but it will have to be dropped much lower than that or abolished altogether before the people are satisfied.

WOMEN SUFFRAGE IN NEW YORK.

Considerable interest is being taken in the agitation for women suffrage in New York. In that state the highest court has declared that an innovation unconstitutional, and now those who favor the extension of the franchise to the fair sex are agitating for a change in the constitution. But in the spirited campaign which is being carried on, the women themselves are divided in opinion. The women who want neither votes for themselves or for their sisters have an organized opposition to the suffrage movement, led by some of the most prominent ladies in Brooklyn, which is the headquarters of the agitation. One of these is Marion Harford, the celebrated novelist, who in a published letter says: "After long and careful study of the subject I am convinced that the majority of American women are neither willing nor ready for enrollment as active citizens of state and nation. Nor do I believe that the gift of the franchise to women is a benefit to the state. The women who are the advocates of the proposed alteration in the state constitution."

Anti-suffrage leagues have also been formed by women in Albany, Buffalo, Rochester, Troy, Syracuse and other points in the state. No doubt if the ladies of New Brunswick who are opposed to women suffrage would take the trouble to petition the legislature they would make quite as good a showing as those who favor it in this province. The Herald is convinced that even among the women themselves there is an overwhelming majority against the enfranchisement of their sex; but, unlike those who are agitating on the other side, they do not care to take upon themselves the publicity and trouble an active opposition would demand. They are the mothers, wives and sisters who faithfully do their duties in their homes and in society, leaving the public business to be attended to by the men. And they are in the right.

The report of the commissioners who investigated the current bridge affair is made public. The revised estimate of the cost of the works was $195,000, of which the sub-structure was estimated at $122,000. The actual cost of the sub-structure was $430,000. This is a glaring case of boodling to which our friend the Sun might profitably turn its attention.

SATURDAY last was nomination day in Gloucester. Blanchard (conservative) and Doocet (independent) were nominated. Polling takes place today and it is quite probable that Mr. Blanchard, who only recently resigned from the local legislature, will be elected.

The city council had a most disorderly meeting Tuesday evening, language of the gutter being interspersed throughout the debates. Mayor Beckwith was almost ejected from the chair, and the spectators present were very much disgusted with the performance.

HON. MR. LAURENCE has declined the invitation of the Liberal Association, Fredericton, N. W. T., to accept at their hands nomination for the house of commons.

Death Roll.

At New Maryland, York county, on the 29th ult., Mrs. Mary Charter, aged 73 years. At the same house, St. John, on the 27th ult., John L. Creighton, a native of this city, aged 68 years.

Charles Pond one of the first settlers of Durham, aged seventy-four, died on the morning of April 28th, at the residence of his son Moses Pond. Mrs. Maria Macreidie of St. John, sister of R. C. Macreidie of this city, died suddenly at Sussex on Friday of hemorrhage and heart failure. The deceased lady was a native of Scotland, and her death leaves R. C. Macreidie the sole surviving member of the family. The remains were interred at St. John, Rev. Dr. Bruce conducting the services.

Miss Annelia Simmons, daughter of Isaac W. Simmons, the well known tanner, died Sunday night. Deceased, who was a bright young girl of fifteen years, a pupil at the model school, was as usual as usual a few days before her death. She was suddenly seized with an acute type of spinal disease and brain fever, and for a day or two suffered excruciating pain. She then became unconscious and remained in that condition until her death. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Weddall.

It was with sorrow we record the death of Mrs. Jas. Davis, Brockway, which occurred on April 25th. The sad intelligence which reached our community, also called forth sighs of relief that the patient victim had put off the mortality which had caused her so much suffering for the past year and four months. She has been gradually sinking with consumption and as the end drew near she was all anxiety to go her perfect trust in Jesus never wavered. Deceased was twenty-two years of age and leaves a husband, father, brothers and sisters and a large circle of friends to mourn a sad loss.

There died at her home at Lower Southampton, on the 18th ult., Annie, wife of Alexander Munro Jr., in her fifty-fourth year. Deceased had been in failing health for a number of years, but during the winter it became evident that the struggle for life, and the result that had been could not continue long. At the last the end came peaceful, triumphant. On the 18th her remains were followed to their last resting place by a very large concourse of friends and relatives. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Wm. Ross of Prince William. Mrs. Munro was of an unassuming and gentle disposition, and these, with her many other good qualities, endeared her to every one who had the pleasure of her acquaintance. We tender to her aged mother and family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement.

Irish Dramas Next Week.
On Tuesday evening next Ed. W. Rowland and his clever company will be at the city hall. On that occasion that beautiful Irish drama "True Irish Hearts" will be performed. It will be remembered that this is the same play and company that were here last October. It is a rollicking, picturesque comedy which depicts life in Ireland, full of character and color, bright lines, repartee, songs and dances. The chief figure is the singing, dancing and love-making. The play is interpreted by the company of unusual strength, and the scenery is new and superb, from the studio of Harley Merry. "True Irish Hearts" should be given a rousing reception.

Wednesday evening that purely Irish American drama "The Cruikshank Lawn" will be presented.

APPOINTMENTS.—The last Royal Gazette contains notice of the following appointments in Sunbury: Henry M. Prince, Harry S. Miles and Henry Mowat, to be justices of the peace. Stephen H. Estabrook to be a justice of the peace and commissioner of the parish of Burton civil court, in room of George H. Hoban, retired.

AN OTTAWA RECEPTION.

Lord and Lady Aberdeen held a Brilliant Drawing Room at the Capital.

The Governor General and Lady Aberdeen gave a brilliant reception in the Senate chamber at Ottawa, Saturday evening. Punctually to the minute, at half-past eight, amid a crowd of distinguished guests, the ladies of the drawing room formed the escort—their excellencies drove up to the speaker's entrance of the Senate. Long before that crowd of carriages had been depositing their gayly-dressed occupants.

The Senate chamber is perfectly adapted for these state functions. It is a beautiful room, rather longer than wide, with a large gallery running around it. The floor rises in tiers from the centre on either side. At the upper end is the throne beneath a canopy of crimson. The carpet is crimson and all the furniture of the room are of crimson and gold. The officers of the Guards, the Dragoons and the 43rd and some Montreal officers are ranged in two lines up to the throne, and it is through this military ordeal

THE TREMBLING DEBUTANTE HAS TO WALK. Of course others beside the debutante have to face it, but I mention her because these who have been there before are not supposed to tremble, but only to wonder if their trains are all right, or if their hair is as nicely curled as usual. Most of the officers have cheerful words of encouragement to say to their friends as they pass up the line. When one is almost at the top, an aide-de-camp stretches out his hand for a card, which one gives mechanically. The card is passed on through five aide-de-camp until it reaches the military secretary, who in a loud imposing voice calls one's name, and then one finds oneself being thrust and smothered by two courtiers, which their excellencies return by a slight inclination of the head. And then the trying part is over and one goes out behind the throne and up to the gallery to watch the others. It is such a pleasant sight to see the ladies after being presented still stay on the floor—and the handsome uniforms of crimson and blue. Munroe Ferguson, A.D.C., and Mr. Erskine, A.D.C., belong to the Royal Scottish Archers, the Queen's body guard in Scotland. It is a very pretty uniform, dark green, with handsome epaulettes, and plenty of gold lace. Captain Kindersley is in the Guards. Captain Urquhart wore the full dress of his Highland regiment. Lieutenant-General Montgomery Moore, a fine soldierly looking man, stood with his aide on one side of the throne. Major-General Herbert in his handsome scarlet uniform was a conspicuous figure in the military group.

THE PREMIER AND THE CABINET ministers were in the Senate chamber when the viceroyal party arrived and they afterwards stood about the throne. They, as well as all the privy councillors, wore the Windsor uniform. And now for an account of their excellencies who were, of course, the central figures in this pageant. Lord Aberdeen wore the Windsor court dress, white silk knee-breeches, dark blue velvet coat, silk waistcoat, silk stockings and buckled shoes. Lady Aberdeen was in black, all black, not a bit of color except the rays that came from the diamonds in her tiara. Her dress was black satin with a very long train which was carried by two little pages in dark blue velvet with buckled shoes and white ruffs. Dear little boys they were. One was the Hon. Archie Gordon and the other Master Kommer Gordon, the son of Mr. Gordon, the military secretary. Lady Aberdeen wore a magnificent tiara of diamonds, with a court veil of black. The drawing room was long and her excellency looked very tired before it was over. When it was over, their excellencies left the room escorted by the aides-de-camp, General Montgomery Moore, Major-General Herbert, Lord Aberdeen carrying her excellency's train, and six ladies-in-waiting, dressed very much alike in grayish dresses with court veils and feathers and carrying large bouquets of crimson roses, the gift of his excellency. The ladies were Mrs. Gordon, of Elton, Hon. Mrs. Moore, Hon. Misses Colborne, who are staying at government house; Mrs. Hewitt, Miss Wilson and Miss Waterman. Their excellencies went first to the rooms of the speaker of the senate, where they had some refreshments, and afterwards to the speaker of the commons, where Mrs. White was holding a large reception. There were a great many pretty dresses worn, a great preponderance of white. There is no regulation dress at Ottawa drawing-rooms, but most ladies wear trains, and several wore the orthodox court veil. It is always easier to courtesy gracefully in a long dress, and the veils are becoming.

THE WAY THE MONEY GOES.

At the meeting of the public accounts committee at Ottawa, Tuesday, Joseph Pope, assistant clerk of the privy council, was examined in regard to his expenses in connection with the Behring Sea arbitration case in Paris. In reply to Mr. McMillen, Mr. Pope said that he was appointed private secretary to the British agent who was the minister of marine and fisheries, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper. His salary in the department was $2400. He charged and received $10 per day as his expenses for every day he was absent on the arbitration, but did not get any salary. His salary in the department continued while he was absent. In answer to Mr. Lister he said that he charged for 215 days and received it. He charged for the days he was going and coming on the steamer, $10 per day in addition to his own passage. At first he did not include this in his account to the marine department, but Mr. Owens, the accountant of that department, had told him that he could have had the time he was on the steamer charged as well. He withdrew that account and put in a second one, including the time he was on the steamer. He was aware that the auditor general had decided against paying for the time he was on the steamer, but the matter had never been settled by the treasury board, and he thought if he could get the money he might as well have it.

Sir Hibbert Tupper said that he took the responsibility for the payment. Mr. Lister said that there was nothing to show in the papers that Sir Charles had accepted the responsibility. He said that Sir Charles Tupper Mr. Pope said that he had done work for the counsel for Britain as well as for him (the minister).

Sir Charles Tupper, after the examination of Mr. Pope was over, stated that the supplementary estimates would contain an additional sum of about $50,000 in connection with Behring Sea.

One thousand men have been discharged from the Canadian Pacific railway service between Montreal and Vancouver, owing to slack business. At McAdam a large reduction has been made in the force.

Serg. Armstrong, of Ottawa, and Lieut. Davidson, of Quebec, have declined places on the Biely team, which brings in Serg. Major Case, of the Halifax artillery, and Major Bishop, of the 63rd batt. Halifax.

A GIGANTIC LANDSLIDE.

Which Wrought Death and Destruction.

The village of St. Albans, Quebec, on the shore of the river Ste. Anne, is the scene of a disaster which has caused the destruction of four lives, buried seven houses under a landslide, swept a mill out of existence, and caused damage amounting to nearly $400,000, besides completely changing the bed of a river, and causing the entire disappearance of a large waterfall. St. Albans is about fifty miles from Quebec. Excessive snow in the woods, recently melted, has swollen the Ste. Anne river to an unusual extent, and there were fears of an inundation in the village. On the night of April 27th a terrible noise was heard by the villagers, and when they rushed out it was to find that a waterfall, 100 feet high, in the middle of the village, had entirely disappeared, and that the pulp mill of Mr. Gorrie, which formerly stood at the foot of it, was entirely buried. Upon the surface of the rocks and earth which covered the site of the mill were the debris of overturned houses and barns, mixed pell-mell with large trees and gigantic boulders. A night of extreme terror was spent by the inhabitants searching for dead and injured. So far it is known that four people, Mr. and Mrs. Gauthier and their two children, have been swept into the river. Seven houses in all were destroyed, but the occupants of most heard the sound of rushing waters, and felt the trembling of the ground like an earthquake shock, in time to escape. The river had changed its bed for a distance of a point and a half, and shifted nearly 500 feet. Besides Gauthier's house, and Gorrie's mill, Mr. Audy's house and three or four others have been swept away, as well as the highway bridge of St. Casimir and the mill of St. Casimir and Ste. Anne were swept away. Lumber merchants also lost considerable timber, their booms being broken up and carried away.

The parish of Ste. Anne, St. Albans and St. Casimir lose several thousand dollars each and are left without communication, which is sorely felt under the circumstances, as considerable business was transacted between these places. The damage has been estimated in round figures at $500,000.
