PILED GOLD ON THE ALTAR.

Miss Louise Shepard, who stripped off her Diamonds at Round Lake,

Set the Epidemic Going in the Gospel Tabernacle.

At a meeting the other night, in the Eighth Avenue Gospel Tabernacle of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, at New York, something unusual happened. It was at the height of the meeting, when Miss Louise Shepard, an evangelist, proposed that there should be an offering of gold and silver for the work of the Alliance in a spirit of religious fervor, men women marched up the aisles to the altar and left gold and silver watches, diamond pins and rings, and jewelry of all forms, to be sold in the interest of missionary work. The programme of the meeting was stopped, and when resumed until the altar of the tabernacle was PILED HIGH WITH THE OFFERINGS.

On Sunday morning, at one of the three great meetings at the American Theatre, more jewelry was given. One man's generosity reached such a pitch, that he gave away a deed for a farm; others gave money ranging from $600 to one dollar. More than $20,000 was subscribed during the day.

The convention of the Alliance began on October 8th. Delegates were present from all parts of the United States and Canada. Among the leading preachers of this organization, which includes all creeds, were the Rev. A. B. Simpson, of the Gospel Tabernacle, Rev. Dr. Arthur T. Pierson, Rev. Walter Russell of Canada, Rev. Dr. Nathaniel West, of Syracuse, and Rev. Dr. A. J. Gordon. There were missionaries who had seen service in all parts of the globe. The programme was interesting, and the meetings were attended by very large audiences. Each night during the convention, the Gospel Tabernacle was packed with people. The enthusiasm reached a culminating pitch on Friday night, when Miss Louise Shepard broke up the meeting with her

PROPOSITION FOR OFFERINGS.

Miss Shepard is a wealthy New York woman. A few years ago she was converted at a convention of the Missionary and Christian Alliance at Round Lake. At that time she took diamond rings from her fingers and cast them into the sea, and laid them on the altar as an offering to the cause. Since that time she has been a most earnest and devoted worker for the Alliance.

The programme on Friday evening was to include a series of short addresses on missionary topics. When it came Miss Shepard's turn to speak, she arose and showed a small watch, with cases, which she said, were made of iron. She explained that not long ago, she saw iron watches advertised in a Broadway window. She reached out to sell her watches, and give the proceeds to the Alliance, and use a cheap iron watch instead. Then she told a little story about the Order of the Iron Cross. This society was formed by women during the Prussian war, when the Emperor called upon all his subjects for assistance. The Prussian women had their jewelry for the benefit of the government and were iron crosses.

"Now," said Miss Shepard, with an appealing gesture, "if these women were willing to give up their jewelry because of the service they had done for their country, why ought not we as much for the love of Jesus. For gold we will give iron to you."

The Rev. Stephen Merritt, the undertaker and preacher, sat on the first row. When Miss Shepard stopped and looked about for a response he first rose. Mr. Merritt arose and after turning toward the audience pulled a fine gold watch from his vest pocket and laid it on the altar. Miss Shepard rewarded Mr. Merritt with an encouraging smile.

"Who is the next?" she asked.

A man took a diamond pin from his scarf and laid it by Mr. Merritt's watch. Women began to arise in the audience and began to pull rings from their fingers and jeweled pins from their dresses. Mr. Simpson tried to resume the programme of the meeting, but gave up when he saw the excitement growing and the aisles filling with people marching toward the altar and leaving watches, rings, pins, and money. Some of them pulled a little hand of gold from her finger and said that it was

The executive functions of the federal government are committed to nine departments and three commissions. The heads of eight of the most important departments form the President's cabinet, are appointed by him, and are responsible to him alone. Each department is divided into bureaus, each bureau into divisions, each division into rooms.

The nation performs only such functions of government as relate to the collective interests of the people. All other functions are performed by the state. The states are divided into administrative divisions, counties, townships, cities and towns. Each state has its own constitution, its executive, consisting of governor and officials, its legislature made up of senate and assembly, its system of local government, and of state and local taxation, its state debt, its body of private law, its courts under federal appeal, and the qualification for citizenship differs with the states.

Springfield.

Oct. 18—Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Crosse of Presque Isle who have been visiting Mrs. Crosse's mother have returned home. Miss E. Sanderson is the guest of Mrs. Clark.

Miss L. Love has gone to Fredericton to work for R. Cox of that place.

Rev. Mr. Whitman held service here Monday morning, Sunday's storm having prevented him fulfilling his regular appointment.

A surprise party from Springfield sent a very enjoyable evening at Mrs. C. Gordon's on the 14th, at Jewetta Mills. Mrs. Gordon was presented with a set of silver knives.

Our farmers are all doing digging potatoes. The crops have been unusually large and of a good size. J. Clark has raised some very fine ones twenty of which weighed forty pounds.

AYLMER'S WILD MAN.

A Peculiar Specimen Who Runs About Naked.

Aylmer, Quebec, has a wild man, who if he does not reside within the limits of the town, lives in such close proximity as to make the residents nervous to the point of alarm. No one knows what he is. He is only known as a wild man and everybody is frightened of him.

His headquarters are on the farm of the late John Newman, about a mile and a half above the town.

Every morning for about two weeks past, the Pontiac and Pacific Junction Railroad train has passed through this farm on its way cityward, the wild man has made an appearance in a field at the side of the railway track, stark naked.

HER BLOOMERS DIDN'T FIT.

Tailor Clarke Altered Them in Vain and Now Sues For Eleven Dollars.

Miss Bogert Says They Were Not Properly Constructed "Where the Chief Wear and Tear Takes Place."

(New York News.)

Exhibit A in Justice John Peterson's court, in Brooklyn, next week will show why Miss Sylvia Bogert quit the dress reformers, and why tailor Ralph A. Clarke has made his last pair of bicycle bloomers. It will show in detail the trouble between two long-suffering people—trouble that caused a eleven-dollar lawsuit, which Miss Bogert says will carry to the United States Supreme Court if necessary.

"If I can't have bloomers as I want them, I won't have any at all, and no tailor can make me take them," is Miss Bogert's ultimatum.

Miss Sylvia Bogert is 20 years old. She is a pretty brunette, short but graceful, with large brown eyes, which shine with anger as she explained her trials as a dress reformer. She lives at the Sonora flats, 203 West Fourteenth street. She belongs to a family well-known in theatrical and musical circles. When she came out on a wheel she found herself embarrassed by flowing skirts. When her dress got entangled with the spokes of her wheel, her attention was turned to dress reform. One day last summer, while whirling up Flatbush avenue, in Brooklyn, she saw this sign:

LADIES' BICYCLE BLOOMERS A SPECIALTY.

Miss Bogert stooped the wheel in front of the sign and told Ralph A. Clarke, tailor, that she wanted some bloomers.

"All right," said Mr. Clarke, that is our specialty, and we can fit you out."

"But I want them different from 'e bloomers worn by other girls," said Miss Bogert, and then she proceeded to explain there is an evident discrepancy between the measurements and the indiscreet things that you have sent me. I also call your attention to the fact that you have not sufficiently strengthened the parts where the chief wear and tear takes place. Sincerely, SYLVIA BOGERT.

Mr. Clarke changed the measurements of the garments and added more padding. Back came the bloomers from the Sonora flats with this note pinned on the hip pocket:

Dear Mr. Clarke: I object to look like a contemporary of Hercules Hudson. Make me look like a modern American woman, please. Sincerely, SYLVIA BOGERT.

Mr. Clarke made one more effort to make Miss Bogert "look like a modern American woman," but the bloomers were returned with another note:

Dear Mr. Clarke: I am afraid that you will think that I am hard to please, but the bloomers are somewhat tight where they should be loose, and abominably loose where no fullness is needed. I am tired of complaining, and unless you can make them to my satisfaction I shall not take them. Please look up my measurements once more. Sincerely, SYLVIA BOGERT.

Mr. Clarke is a patient man, and, although quite as tired of hearing Miss Bogert's complaints as she was tired of complaining, he made more changes and asked Miss Bogert to measure the bloomers for the purpose of unifying her measurements. She replied by returning the bloomers again, and writing a lot of criticisms about the pleats, gorts, darts and so forth. Then tailor Clarke got angry. He threw the bloomers in a corner of his store and took down the sign from the window. There would be no specialties in the line of bloomers at his place.

He then notified Miss Bogert that she would have to pay for the bloomers whether she liked them or not. Miss Bogert wrote back that Mr. Clarke could give them to some one else; she would not have them. Mr. Clarke consulted his lawyer, John A. Anderson, and began a suit against Miss Bogert to recover $11, the price of the bloomers. The papers were served yesterday.

Miss Bogert told a Sun reporter last evening that the bloomers were all wrong. "In the first place," she said, "they did not fit. They were too tight where—well, they do not fit at all. I suppose Mr. Clarke thought I would take of my skirts when I made the measurements behind the curtain; but I didn't do it. Then, the lining was not lined as I ordered. You see, that chamois lining was my own idea. I wanted to wear the bloomers in the fall—and well, I did not want any more clothes inside of them than that!—then the lining was so arranged that—you see this is a delicate subject—but my letter to Mr. Clarke explains that. But I am going to stick to skirts for bicycling and I am done with dress reform."

"It's billions," your friends say when you're irritable. Take Hawker's liver pills, they cure biliousness.

A YEAR OF BRITISH VICTORIES.

The majority of historians say that the year 1759 is one of the most memorable years in the annals of Britain. The arms of England were successful on sea and land, although she was engaged at one time in wars which extended to the four quarters of the world. The French were making preparations for an invasion of England, but in July Admiral Rodney defeated them in the West Indies. He then sailed for the coast of France, and destroyed the transports in the port. Admiral Boscawen defeated and dispersed the French fleet off Lagos, August 18th. Hawke gained a single victory over a French fleet at Quiberon, November 20th. The taking of Quebec from the French by General Wolfe, September 13, put all North America in the hands of England.

In this same campaign the French were routed, July 24th, by Sir William Johnson, and at the same time, July 22nd, Amherst captured Fort Carillon. Many strong posts were evacuated by the French on the approach of the British forces. Ticonderoga, too, was captured. To these conquests during this year was added the Island of Guadaloupe, through the success of Commodore Moore and General Hopson. On August 1st in this year the famous battle of Minden was fought in Prussia; 80,000 French were vanquished by a force of 60,000, consisting of English, Hessian, and Hanoverian, under Prince Ferdinand and Lord George Sackville. The allies were again victorious at Exdorf, Warburg, and Ziegenbush.

THEORY AND PRACTICE.

Cora—Why did she leave the room when she was in the middle of her argument about the cruelty of killing song birds?
