FARM AND FRESIDE.

Timely Hints Useful to the Farmer and His Household.

Have you ever started on a search for a thoroughly good family cow? asks a writer to the Country Gentleman. And did you find what you sought, and was she perfect in every respect, and was the price asked a reasonable one?

There is a difference between the good family cow and a good dairy cow. The family cow is not a good dairy cow, and the dairy cow is not a family cow. She must be a copious giver of rich milk. Her cream must contain the qualities that go to the making of golden butter. She must be gentle in order that she may be a family pet, and handsome in order that she may be an ornament to the lawn when the children led her out to graze in the June evenings. She should be of a good family, so that her owner can descend learnedly upon her pedigree to his friend.

Such cows are in demand in every village, especially in suburban communities where men of some wealth have retired in order to gain rest and leisure and the full delights of the country life. One of the requisites for such enjoyment is a good cow. The ring of the milking can be heard, reminding one of the city from which it has just escaped. But such cows are not easy to find. Men breed cows for the dairy, but they pay little attention to handling them in such manner that they will satisfy all the needs of the suburban home. I have travelled for a whole day through a good dairy country on such a search, and found nothing to reward me unless I was willing to pay extravagantly for one of the qualities which was of minor importance—the pedigree. The defect was in the quality of gentleness. A vicious or tricky animal is of absolutely no value as a family cow. The hired girl is afraid of her, and the cow in turn becomes afraid of the girl, and they often "hit it off" together. The cow kicks over the fence, and consequently, it being hit with the milking stool. Then she goes from bad to worse until finally she is sold at half cost, and another one tried. The family cow should be trained to stand as quietly as a statue while being milked—to come when she is called to graze on the lawn, and to be afraid of no human being.

In my search when such a cow—or even one that approximated these qualities—was found, I soon learned that the owner realized her special value. "Can't part with her on account of the woman?" And I did not blame the woman in the least. Sometimes, it is true, this was only said for the purpose of inducing me to bid up the price. But when I found this to be the case, a further investigation would usually reveal some not wholly desirable quality in the cow that was the cause of her being so valued.

For a really good family cow, there is almost no standard or limit of value. She is worth more than her earning power. And there are always, and in almost every community, men who are willing to pay as high a price as the market will bear for an intelligent breeder? Would not an advertisement of family cows, warranted gentle, well-bred, good milkers and butter-makers, attract the attention of buyers who pass calmly over the announcements of dairy herds? Now, when farmers and stock growers are looking toward specialties for the best profit, it seems to me that one affording so good a field for enterprise should not long remain vacant.

The cost of growing such an animal need not be excessive. As they are not wanted for perpetrating breed, they need not be full-blooded, but should be bred by an animal of good dairy repute. The greatest value will come from the way in which they are handled, for the quality of gentleness is the very first requisite. They should be bred and fed for early maturity, and when the first calf is dropped, the heifer should be kept in milk as long as possible, so as to fit this desirable quality. The time to sell is when the second calf is dropped, and when it is worth many times as much as the first. There is more money in this than in growing beef, for the farmer who has a good medium-sized farm and is not already over-burdened with the work of tillage.

HOUSEHOLD RECIPES.
Hash for Tea.—The meat left over from the soup dinner made into hash, add onion, a bit of butter, a teaspoon of salt, rubbed smooth in half a teacup of water, pepper and salt. Simmer slowly. To boil hash or mince-meat make them.

Indian Pudding.—One quart of milk, one-half pint of molasses, one meal, one-half pint of ginger and salt. Scald the milk and pour it on the meal; cook for ten minutes stirring occasionally; add the molasses and onion; bake in a slow oven until done. Serve with cream.

GLEANINGS FROM YORK.
July 6.—We are having lovely weather and crops are looking very promising, especially the hay which will be very abundant. Michael Embleton is seriously ill, having had an attack of stroke. School is closed for the holidays, and the children are reveling among the strawberries, which are very abundant. The busy hum of the York woolen mill is again making music in the air. Mr. Stone has rented it for another term, and has commenced operations. We are pleased to have him among us again. Miss Ida Crombie has resigned her position as teacher at Wilnot Settlement, and Miss Patricia of Fredericton, has been engaged to take charge of the school for the fall term.

REFORM FOR BABIES.
We are reforming everything—particularly politics and woman's dress. Some times we run riot in the matter of reform. It generally happens, however, that if we reform in one thing, we reform in another. A vicious or tricky animal is of absolutely no value as a family cow. The hired girl is afraid of her, and the cow in turn becomes afraid of the girl, and they often "hit it off" together. Zealand Station.
July 7.—An aged man named Zephaniah Cross, who lived with his brother in New Zealand, died very suddenly last Monday. He was in the best of health, and was walking a short distance to a neighbor's house. On his way home he was seen to stagger and fall. Dean Cross was immediately on hand, but when he arrived life was extinct. Dr. McDonnell was summoned, but he thought it not necessary to hold an inquest as heart disease was the cause of his death. Hiram Hanson, who cut his foot very badly some time ago, while working in the bark woods, is doing nicely under the treatment of our M. D. The potato beetle is doing serious damage. Tramps are thicker than black flies, and at the same time there is no scarcity of peddlers. E. Burt is rejoicing over the arrival of a young son, also Nelson Brewer. Some of the farmers have already begun haying. Our merchant, D. Jewett, is progressing finely with his new dwelling house. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McKel arrived here from St. John last Monday. The holidays and strawberries have come together, and it makes the school boys rejoice.

Bloomfield Ridge.
July 2.—The talk is now about the excursion. Our pastor, Rev. E. Bell, of Boiestown, is going to have a train run from Fredericton to Chatham and back July 11th. The fare from Fredericton to Chatham will be $1.50 for round trip. S. P. Price is building a two story house up on his new farm. S. Grear is busy hauling timber from L. W. Richardson's mill, at Boiestown, C. W. Pond. McCallan and S. Johnston have returned from their vacation. E. Palmer of Campbellton, has been visiting his friends at this place, also R. McKay and Mrs. McKay. E. Palmer is ninety-three years old and was smart enough to walk to Bloomfield Ridge on June 27th and back home the same day. Rev. E. Archibald, the new Presbyterian minister of Nashwaak, preached at this place a large congregation. He is a good speaker and we will be glad to have him come again.

Pleasant Ridge.
July 5.—A subscriber to THE HERALD writes: As I have noticed lately the large amount of news items sent from various sections of the country, I thought it might interest some of your numerous readers to get a few notes from this remote and unheard of corner. Pleasant Ridge is, with the exception of four or five farms that were applied for under the Labor Act, a free grant settlement. The settlers for the first three or four years, made remarkable progress in the way of clearing land and erecting buildings, but as most of them had large families to support and the times not very prosperous, some of them got discouraged and left, and others for the want of teams and the means of improving their farms let their clearings grow up again into bushes. But we are pleased to notice lately a decided improvement. The settlers appear to be taking hold with a new energy, and there is more than double the acreage under crop this season than ever before, and all looking remarkably well. The grain and especially the hay crop never looked better in this section, and it has only to visit the farms of W. A. Carson and J. B. Holt, to see as fine fields of hay as to be found anywhere in the province. The only complaint at present among the farmers now is the potato bug, which appears to be more numerous and voracious than ever before. Our school for the past term has been

WOMAN'S GREATEST ENEMY.
When a woman is troubled with headaches the cause should be discovered, if possible, the overworked, the mental anxiety or distress rendered, the errors in diet corrected, or in late hours escaped. For early ones, writes Elizabeth R. Scovill in the May Ladies' Home Journal. Then a simple laxative may be needed to prepare the system to benefit by a tonic; cod-liver oil, iron, gentian, quassa, or whatever the doctor recommends as best suited to the particular case. The diet should be abundant and nourishing, avoiding rich meats, pastry or anything liable to digestion. Exercise in the open air, stopped before there is any feeling of fatigue, is important. When the first unpleasant symptoms are felt, lie down with the head low, and take a teaspoonful of aromatic spirits of ammonia in a little water. If it relieves put a hot-water bag to the feet and cover warmly with a blanket. If there is nervousness and depression take a half a teaspoonful of tincture of valerianate of ammonia, and repeat the dose in fifteen minutes. Have the room darkened and endeavor to sleep. Should these remedies not avert the attack, and the pain and nausea begin to manifest themselves, take a tablespoonful of strong tea or coffee, without milk if possible, very hot, or very cold, and repeat every fifteen minutes for four doses. If the nausea continues the sufferer usually imagines that it will be relieved by the act of vomiting, and is anxious to have an emetic. This may be the case if the headache has come on immediately after eating when the stomach contains a mass of undigested food, otherwise it is better to soothe the gastric disturbance and check the desire to vomit. Effervescent citrate of magnesia, local whisky or soda, will often produce this result. When the pain is severe, a piece of linen may be dipped in alcohol and water, and a single fold bound on the forehead, wetting it as soon it becomes dry. Sometimes a flannel wrung out of boiling water and applied as hot as it can be borne will give relief.

JUST YOUNG ONES.
"See those young ones!" exclaimed a little six-year-old, looking out of the window to where some little girls were playing in the soft mud and gutter. "Can't you any children?" asked her mother in a correcting tone. "But they are not, mamma," said the child. "The little girls that go to my kindergarten and keep their faces clean are children, but those dirty ones are just young ones." "Ich, Mange and Scratches of every kind, on human or animals, cured in 30 minutes by Woolford's Sanitary Lotion. For sale by W. Carter and Alonzo Staples.

HOW TO TREAT A MAN
By a Horse.
When a man drops from sheer exhaustion or illness, promptly seize an end board or cart seat, and pound him on the ribs. If this does not recuperate him, kick him violently in the belly. This treatment will restore him, if persistently administered. If a man finds his load too heavy, and feels that it will strain him to proceed, kick off a fence board and knock him down—and hammer him thoroughly with the board. This will give him renewed energy, and he will make no more fuss. But do not on any account reduce the load. That would look much like sympathy, and he would be likely to balk again when he is over-worked. If a man refuses to drink, give him water for two days. That will "teach him" to be thirsty at any time you find it convenient to attend to him. It is a good plan to ply the whip on a man who is at his work. No matter if he is doing his best, hit him now and again with "general principles," and to prevent any comfort. If his load is not too heavy, oblige him to go much faster to make up for it. Work him hard enough to bring the average life of man one-half, as is much work in his life, but it makes him water for two days.
