

NEWS ABOUT TOWN

Social, Personal and General Occurrences of the Week.

CRISP AND TO THE POINT.

Mayor Van Wart was sworn into office by Governor Fraser at noon Wednesday.

Mrs. M. B. Dixon, of St. John, is among her friends in Fredericton for a short visit.

Hedley V. Edgcombe arrived home from Boston this afternoon to attend his mother's funeral.

Dr. Stockton, M. P. F., lectured at the University Tuesday evening on "The Aim of Legislation."

There are 6,619 names on the recently revised federal lists for York, of which 1,177 are on the Conservative list.

Rev. R. Walter Colston, M. A., late of the Diocese of Quebec, has been elected rector of Douglas and Bright in this county.

Rev. Canon Patridge, the new sub-dean of the Cathedral, is expected to settle permanently here about the 18th of April.

Ald. Limerick has signed the contract to erect this summer, opposite the Cathedral, a $50,000 residence for T. Carleton Allen.

John G. Adams, W. M. Clarke and Wm. Cameron will be ordained elders of St. Paul's church at the morning service next Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Davidson will preach a temperance sermon to the Royal Templars in the Gibson Baptist church to-morrow (Sunday) evening.

Mrs. Donnelly, mother of Mrs. P. McPeake, died Wednesday at the advanced age of 82 years, and her remains were interred Thursday.

J. L. Stewart, the genial editor of the "Chatham World," came over to hear the Finance Minister's speech and returned to Chatham yesterday.

William Matthews, a yardman of the Canada Eastern, had his thumb and one finger smashed Tuesday morning while coupling cars at Gibson.

Herbert C. Tilly, St. John, will address a meeting for men only to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock in temperance hall, subject, "The Young Man and His Master."

L. W. Johnston has bought an interest in the agricultural implement business of Bligh & Prince, at Truro, N. S., and will remove with his family to that town.

John Richards, assistant clerk of the house of assembly, was knocked down while walking across the street yesterday morning by a team and quite seriously injured.

G. G. King, the Liberal candidate for Sunbury and Queens, will address the electors at Oranooko on Tuesday evening, and quite a number of Fredericton Liberals propose attending the meeting.

The talk around town is that the new Council will likely make several changes in the staff of civic officers, including the tax collector and city marshal and the chief engineer of the fire department.

Surveyor General Tweedie has told THE HERALD something of Chatham's celebrated garden farmer, George Seale, who last year raised 30,000 heads of cabbage on four acres of land which he sold at 5 cts. apiece.

The Fredericton bicyclists are talking of building a club house this spring, and will likely combine with it a canoe and boat house somewhere on the bank of the river. It is estimated that $1000 can be raised to cover the cost.

Another carnival is to be held at the Curling Rink next Wednesday evening, when prizes of $5 each will be paid to the most original costume of lady and gentleman. Admission 25 cents. This will be the last carnival of the season.

The services of Alfred Seely, treasurer of the Atlantic division of the C. P. R., at St. John, have been dispensed with on the alleged ground of economy. Mr. Seely for several years filled a similar position for the N. B. Railway Company at Gibson.

Ex-Ald. Farrell desires to express through THE HERALD, his sincere thanks to the friends who loyally stood to him in Monday's election contest, and who during his long service at the council extended to him their warm and unwavering support.

An amicable understanding having been reached between the hospital trustees and the medical staff, the latter have consented to continue their services at the institution. An extension is to be built to the hospital 25 x 45 feet, adding much greater facilities for its useful work, and including a training school for nurses.

Robert Connors, the well known lumberman of Upper St. Francis, died Saturday at the Arkansas Hot Springs, where he had spent the winter for the benefit of his health. Deceased was a Nova Scotian by birth, but nearly all his life had been identified with the lumbering industries of the province. He was 68 years old.

THE HERALD is informed that the Fredericton Electric Light and Gas Company have in contemplation the idea of abandoning the manufacture and sale of gas in the city. Possibly the company have been led to regard the matter with respect to the large amount of the article thrown upon the market at the city hall Monday night.

A dispatch came to Woodstock on Monday morning announcing the death of Jesse Matthews, father of Walter Matthews, engineer on the C. P. R. freight between Woodstock and Prescott. He was between sixty and seventy years of age. He was for many years an engineer and used to run on the steamers between Woodstock and Fredericton, and resided in Fredericton up to the time of his going to Hartland.

The Fredericton Electric Light Company offer a reward of $100 for the detection and conviction of the person or persons who have damaged their property recently. Three lamps have been destroyed, two by cutting the rope which suspended them, and the other at the Gregory bridge, was shot down, the bullet having been found inside the broken lamp. Such wanton destruction of property is a serious matter, and if the company discover the perpetrators it is probable they will spend a term at Dorchester.

When Mr. Foster was trying to prove at the City hall, that manufacturing industries in Canada required protection because capital cannot be got as cheaply as in England, turning to the platform occupants he asked, "What capitalist in this country will lend his money to the manufacturers at 3 per cent?" Nobody answered him in the affirmative, but Ald. Macpherson, who sat right under the Minister's eye at the moment, was seen to be earnestly figuring up in his mind whether he would come to the rescue and advance the cash at 5 per cent.

The city has lost a very worthy lady by the death of Mrs. John Edgcombe who passed away at her residence Thursday evening about seven o'clock. Deceased was 77 years old, and has been in failing health for some time. One daughter, Mrs. Thomas Knowles, and seven sons survive her. Her sons are William, Fred, B., Alfred, Albert, Norman, Hedley, of this city, and Arthur, who resides in St. John. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and the body will be taken to the Methodist church. Mrs. Edgcombe will long be remembered here for the good she has done and her charity and Christian benevolence.

THE CIVIC ELECTIONS.

Mr. Vanwart is the New Mayor by a Large Majority.

The mayoralty and aldermanic elections, Monday, created considerable interest and resulted in several changes in the membership of the board. Wesley Vanwart was elected mayor, defeating Daniel Jordan by 137 majority, and of the old council, Ald. Farrell, Moore, Macnutt and Estabrook were defeated. The new aldermen are Geo. W. Adams, Martin Lemont, Joshua Limerick and B. A. Everett.

The contest was spirited, especially at the court house poll, where rum and money were used freely by Ald. Macpherson, whose election must have cost him a large amount of money. Several voters were spotted here, and Sam Wab, the Chinese laundryman was made to swallow the oath that he is a British subject. He was led up to the poll by Ald. Macpherson, who coached him until the oath was swallowed and the ballot deposited.

A determined effort was made all day to defeat Ald. Farrell in Carlton, and Ald. Moore and Macnutt in Queens ward, and it succeeded. In Queens ward, the large number of candidates in the field divided the vote. Down town, Mr. Limerick and Mr. Macpherson had the active assistance of a portion of the anti-Scott act party, and it was the W. C. T. Union ran Mr. Limerick on their ticket with Mr. Lemont. The main effort of the day however among many of these people was to defeat Ald. Farrell, who neglected the vote even interestedly loyally stood to his colleague, Ald. Golding. The large vote polled for Ald. Anderson is no indication of that person's strength or popularity, but as evidence that votes were thrown away on him to defeat Ald. Macpherson. Mr. Tupper was almost unknown, but without organization or active friends he came within eighteen votes of defeating Ald. Macpherson. It was a healthy combination; the temperance men up town voting for Macpherson, while down town he was supplying his voters with whiskey.

Following are the returns of the election:

Table with columns: Mayor, Poll No. 1, Poll No. 2, Total. Mayor: Vanwart 291, Jordan 138, Total 429.

WELLINGTON WARD. Anderson 281, 301, 582; Macpherson 237, 199, 436; Tupper 194, 224, 418.

ST. ANN'S WARD. Adams 215, 216, 431; Gilman 196, 211, 407; Quartermain 192, 165, 357; Estabrook 153, 188, 341.

CARLETON WARD. Golding 227, 271, 498; Everett 243, 196, 439; Farrell 172, 255, 427.

QUEENS WARD. Lemont 229, 151, 380; Limerick 201, 170, 371; Moore 125, 163, 288; Macnutt 110, 163, 273; McCathern 68, 97, 165.

Ald. Farrell has represented Carleton ward ever since 1881 with the exception of two years, and was never defeated before. Ald. Macnutt sat for Queens ward since 1887, and Monday was his first defeat. On four occasions he was elected by acclamation. Ald. Moore also represented Queens for six years—was four times elected by acclamation, and never knew defeat until Monday. Ald. Estabrook came in for St. Ann's ward last year. Ald. Everett in 1893 sat for Carleton. The new men—Ald. Adams, Lemont and Limerick—are all well known and popular citizens, and will doubtless make good aldermen.

THE HERALD congratulates Mr. Vanwart on his sweeping victory. He is a bright lawyer, an excellent business man, and there is no reason why he should not be a model mayor.

Mr. Foster's defence of the National Policy was very lame. His gloried in the alleged prosperity of the North West, but failed to touch on the depopulation of the Maritime provinces and the actual decrease of nearly 3,000 in the population of Kings from 1881 to 1891. Speaking of the distressed returns he ranked blacksmith shops along with other industries which he alleged had sprung up under the National Policy, and admitted that the reduction in the cost of sugar was due to the reduction in the cost of the raw material. He egged the government for its policy of subsidizing railways, but neglected to tell his hearers why his government had refused to vote the full amount for the projected Prince William railway. Only once did Mr. Foster attempt to tell a story, and then it was one told by A. H. Gillmor, M. P., at St. John, a few nights before, and was so badly mangled as to be almost unrecognizable. He misrepresented the Liberal policy as he did in St. John Tuesday night, and abused the free trade policy of Great Britain. He landed the National Policy and referring particularly to the cotton industry, alleging that no cotton factory in Canada could stand six months if the sugar was swept away. This latter statement must have gratified very largely on the ears of Mr. Gibson, to whom is attributed the remark that in cotton manufacturing he is not afraid of the competition of the United States.

Mr. Foster spoke eloquently for an hour and three quarters, showing no sign of fatigue, and was roundly cheered by his friends at the close of his address, which contained nothing new, but much which can be easily refuted by any ordinarily intelligent Liberal. The meeting closed at 10 o'clock with cheers for Foster and the Queen, and the good Tories who have resented the matter, and who during the large amount of the article thrown upon the market at the city hall Monday night.

There were no conversions.

Danced at the Queen's.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Edwards entertained a large number of ladies and gentlemen friends at the Queen hotel Thursday evening in honor of their niece, Miss Jennie Edwards of Halifax, and the affair was a very pleasant success. The older guests and those who did not dance, enjoyed the evening, while the large dining hall was thrown open to the dancers. Excellent music was furnished by Hanan's orchestra, and a splendid supper was served at midnight. The "hole of the ball" who was she?—well she lives down town in a big house not far from the rear of Church street. Mr. and Mrs. Edwards' well known hospitality was thoroughly enjoyed by their guests, and when the function ended at 3 a. m. everybody expressed the pleasures of the evening.

Isaac Long, who died at the residence of Jas. Tibbits, his brother-in-law, early Tuesday morning, was a well known citizen, and his demise will be sincerely regretted. He had suffered from paralysis for several years. He leaves five brothers, one of whom is W. W. Long of this city, and three sisters, Mrs. Tibbits, Mrs. Pugh of Wisconsin and Mrs. Geo. Hume now in England. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended. Rev. Mr. Tippet conducted the services. The deceased never married.

Howard & Crangle's billiard saloon was entered Tuesday night and some goods stolen. Yesterday two ladies named Peony and Cannon were arrested, and the booty with a quantity of tobacco, pipes, etc. stolen from Wiley's drug store, were found in Dr. Seery's barn, Cannon being employed on the Doctor's premises. The business will be tried before Judge Marsh on Monday.

The Scott act people, having with the aid of some of the liquor dealers, elected a Scott act council, they should now regard on the appointment of a Scott act inspector.

THE TORY MEETING.

Mr. Gibson's Candidacy before the Electors of York.

THE SAME OLD, OLD STORY WHICH NOBODY BELIEVES.

Mr. Foster Makes a Confession on the Prohibition Question.

With the aid of a brass band, dirt cheap railway fares from along the Nashwaak and the natural curiosity of the people, the Tory machine works in Fredericton, and Mr. Gibson's candidacy for the County of York, the City Hall was filled to the doors Wednesday evening, when Hon. G. E. Foster made his first appearance under the paternal wing of the Coar of all the fish winks. Very many in the audience were Liberals who went to hear Mr. Foster explain why he fled from Kings county, and why Mr. Foster was so suddenly seized with an affection for Foster and his Tory relations. But they were disappointed, and only heard the same old story of the National Policy and the wonderful things it has done for the country, and heathed in with a labored explanation of why the Finance Minister has gone back on his prohibition promises.

The Minister's Surroundings.

The meeting was a very orderly one indeed, and there was little enthusiasm. Expecting to see some of the old faces when Mr. Foster pronounced an elaborate speech on his part, Alex. Gibson, Evidently Mr. Gibson is not much of a favorite with a Fredericton audience. On the platform with the Minister, were the Hon. G. E. Foster, Alex. Gibson, J. C. H. Hat and Parson Lodge, of Marysville, with a fair sprinkling of the Tory machine workers in Fredericton, and men who handle the Tory bootie in the outlying districts. The monkey like physiognomy of Hemic Pitts peeped out from the wings, and was suffused by that well known grin which indicates the hollowed within. The Tory machine workers in the group were a proud smile of satisfaction over the unconditional capture of the Nashwaak King, for he was not at their very abodes, breathing the same air, and animated by the same spirit.

A Remarkably Healthy Man.

Walter MacFarlane, of St. Marys, was in the chair, and when in response to his introduction, Mr. Foster was given a very cordial reception. People who expected to see the broken down crippled old man who had retired from Kings county because of his health, were surprised to find Mr. Foster looking well, much better in fact than when he used to talk temperance and prohibition from the same platform since his retirement from Kings county because of his health. The Herald was specially pleased to discover that Mr. Foster was able to walk onto the stage without help from any one; that he never sat down during his nearly two hours speech, or summoned medical assistance, although Drs. Coulthard and Osburn were within easy call. The story circulated the night before that Mr. Foster was met at the depot by a Tory delegation from Marysville and Fredericton, and conveyed to that institution for treatment, was thus proved a baseless fabrication. Mr. Foster's physical health appears excellent, but his political health has been badly broken by his experiences in Kings county, and will be completely shattered before he gets through his campaign in York. When Mr. Foster first appeared on the stage Wednesday night, he aroused the enthusiasm of the University students, seated in a body in the rear of the hall, and they met him with the cry of "What's the matter with Foster? He's all right!" and "Foster is all right; he is only shamming sick."

Why he Left Kings.

After Mr. Foster had expressed his satisfaction at the size of the audience, and his pleasure at being among his friends in Fredericton, he stated that he had been tempted to answer some of the queries put to him last week by THE HERALD. The first he endeavored to explain why he was here seeking a constituency anyway, and he blamed it all on the Tory machine. He had said two years ago to come, and he could not think of declining the invitation. "Why had he left Kings?" Well, that was his own fault, and he would not answer the question. The audience was much disappointed when Mr. Foster passed over the matter so lightly, but it was a delicate thing for Mr. Foster to do this, and he got rid of it as easily as possible. When a man is quietly told to get out of a constituency, that his friends don't want any more of him, he does not want to confess the whole thing to the public, and he is bound to do so. Mr. Foster had evidently been reading THE HERALD most diligently during the past few weeks, and was able to quote verbatim many of the things which he had applied to him. No doubt if Mr. Gibson had been called to his feet he could have fully supplemented anything overlooked by Mr. Foster. We presume that these gentlemen sleep with their hands under their pillows.

Praises his Master.

Mr. Foster tried to arouse old memories when he referred to the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition. Mr. Foster complained that he was called Mr. Gibson's candidate, and then proceeded to apply a liberal dose of luffy to the King of the college days in Fredericton, but while many in the audience recalled his residence here, the greater number of voters knew him only as the great tax levier and the exponent of the prohibition.