NOTES FROM OTTAWA.

(From our own Correspondent.)

Ottawa, Feb 18, 1878.—Parliament opened with even more than the usual pomp and circumstance of official life; but the gathering or assembly, as Sir John A. Macdonald termed it in his scholarly and historical way, was a scene that was never beheld, and probably never will be again in the history of this Canada of ours. The Opposition, although they were quite certain of defeat, knowing as they did to a fraction the strength of the Government party, seemed very resolute, as the forces were marshalled for a little guerilla parliamentary warfare. Every one here knew it was settled that Hon. Mr. Anglin, of your city, would be elected without the appearance of a struggle on the part of the Government. Why, then, make such a fierce resistance, which the leader of the Opposition knew better than any one else would be the means of showing the real strength of both parties? It is whispered that it was all a sham-fight, as it were. A sort of time-killing engagement. Many appear to be under the impression that the Government are desirous of pushing business through as quickly as possible and appealing to the country immediately thereafter. The object of the Opposition would be, the knowing ones say, with many a wink and nod, to make the session as long and acrimonious as may be, in the hope that something may turn up to favor them. They have nothing to gain but everything to lose by going to the country unprepared, and, therefore, they are determined to occupy all the time they can. This is the reason given by many here for the length to which things were carried at the "assembly" and subsequently. It is, perhaps, to be regretted that the great constitutional question involved, if there really was any, was not more clearly defined, debated and settled forever, as far as the politicians can settle anything of the kind. Mr. Anglin was one of the most interested of the spectators. He knew, of course, that no matter what the Opposition might do, he was the choice of the stronger party, and would, therefore, take his place as usual in the uncomfortable-looking perch occupied by His Honor the Speaker.

The telegraph has told you of the rather quaint and curious figure cut by one of your New Brunswick representatives, the Hon. Peter Mitchell, the leader of the Left Centre, the extraordinary man, who is leader, head, tail and centre of that independent party, the man who would not allow himself to be snowballed in Northumberland. Having arrived rather late at Ottawa, the hon. member had not, I suppose, an opportunity given him to study the great constitutional question in all its aspects and did not thoroughly comprehend the stand to be taken by the leader of the Opposition. Mr. Mitchell came into the House without, of course, being introduced as there was really no Speaker. When he found the drift of things generally his conscience smote him for infringing ever so little on the well-established usages and customs of Parliament, and he begged to be allowed to retire, but before doing so he made a little speech, which was quoted next day as a proof that the hon. member had actually taken his seat in the House, and was, therefore, so perfectly well-known to his honor the Speaker that further introduction was unnecessary. It is acknowledged by friend and foe that the Hon. Peter did not figure to advantage in the different attitudes he assumed the first two days. If he succeed in getting Mr. Haddow, the new member for Restigouche and his neighbor in the county, to join the Left Centre, he may yet regain the ground so early lost.

It has been generally remarked here that not a single minister accompanied His Excellency the Governor General in his visit to Montreal, where a grand reception is being given him. Business before pleasure, you know. All parties in Ottawa regret the departure of Lord Dufferin at the close of his present term of office. No Governer General since Lord Elgin's time has so gained the sympathy, I might even say affection of Canadians generally like the present popular occupant of the position. Lord Dufferin's speeches on various subjects, particularly his addresses, touching on the soil of the different provinces he has visited, the capabilities of the country, the climate, magnificent water-stretches, ample means of communication, are models of eloquence. In England, as here, we may feel assured of possessing a true friend to Canada in the person of the noble Lord.

The debate on the Address has surprised every one. Matters in the House have been lively and were it not for the personal and disgusting issues brought forward, might be termed amusing. Sir John when not loud and boisterous in his accusations has been clever and witty. The poet of the House, Mr. Plumb of Niagara fame, has for the most part been highly amusing. Many of the members who are themselves no doubt votaries of the muses, delight in asking the honorable member referred to to give exhibitions of his skill in the poetical line, and he has not been slow to respond. The Government members who spoke, when not out of humor have been dignified, in this presenting a marked difference to the Opposition spokesmen, who generally have not been as prudent as might be expected of men holding their responsible positions. The little affairs between Dr. Tupper and the Minister of Militia and Messrs. Langevin and Frechette have formed the subject of much conversation. Mr. Jones has certainly improved greatly as a debater. Evidently the Halifax election has borne good fruit in this respect if in no other. The only charge brought to bear against the Hon. Minister that produced a marked impression was that of disloyalty. The facts before the House and the country go to show that Mr. Jones was very imprudent in his speeches during the Confederation excitement in Nova Scotia and particularly when he said as is reported, that "When the British flag is hauled down from the Citadel Hill he would take off his hat and cheer," words like these are never forgotten, and are sure to be made use of against the speaker who so far forgets what he owes to his Queen and his country as to utter them, no matter what excitement he may labor under at the time. This charge now trumped up by the Opposition is intended to do good or bad work among the ultra loyalists at the next elections.

The scene between the French members anent the Thibault invasion was most disgraceful. It is hard to understand how Frechette was allowed to utter such language in the House of Commons where all are supposed to be gentlemen as when Langevin's Cross received from the Pope. The language and the insinuations were alike unworthy of a gentleman, and must have a bad effect on the country. Mr. McKenzie appears to be most unfortunate in possessing on his side of the House men who do their utmost to prove that the party (the Government party,) is hostile to a large and very influential class of our fellow-citizens. Mr. Huntingdon is another example of this. At one time he appeared ready booted and spurred to mount the Protestant war horse. Mr. Frechett's allusion to Mr. Langevin's buying his cross of honor was an insult of the worst kind. On the whole the debate will have an elevating influence on the public mind.

A WATTO.

Francis Murphy, a temperance lecturer, recently visited Washington with the understanding that he was to receive $200 per week for a fortnight, and his expenses paid at the best hotel in the city. The meetings were slimly attended and at the end of the week, Murphy announced his intention to return to New York. His bills at the hotel were $60 for board, $58 for incidentals, and $53 for the board of two musicians that accompanied him. In addition to paying these bills, the Young Men's Christian Association, under whose auspices he appeared, gave him $101 for his services, and, at Murphy's request, refunded him $12 which he said he had given to the poor while in the city. Murphy also wanted them to hand over to him the proceeds of a collection taken up at one of the meetings for the benefit of the poor. The Association refused to do this, and now declare they will publicly repudiate him if he ever again sets foot in Washington.

WHAT MEN WANT WIVES FOR.

It is not to sweep the house, make the bed, darn the socks, and cook the meals, chiefly that a man wants a wife. If this is all he needs, servants can do it more cheaply than a wife. If this is all a young man calls to see a lady for, send him into the pantry to taste the bread and cake she has made, send him in to inspect the needle work and bed-making, or put a broom in her hand and send him to witness its use. Such things are important and the young man will quickly look after them. But what the true man wants with a wife is her companionship, sympathy, and love. The way of life has many dreary places in it, and man needs a companion to go with him. A man is sometimes overtaken by misfortunes, he meets with failure and defeat, trials and temptations beset him, and he needs one to sympathise with. He has some hard battle to fight with poverty, enemies and with sin; and he needs a woman that, when he puts his arm around her he feels he has something to fight for, that will always keep him to fight; that will put her lips to his ear and whisper words of counsel, and her hand on his heart and impart inspiration. All through life, through storm, and through sunshine, conflict and victory, through adverse and favoring winds, man needs a woman's love. The heart yearns for it. A sister's or a mother's love will hardly supply the need.

A man's best female friend is a wife, of good sense and heart, whom he loves and who loves him. But supposing the man to be without such a helpmate, female friendship he must still have, or his intellect will be without a garden, and there will be many an unheeded gap even in its strongest fence. Female friendship is to a man the bulwark of sweetness, and the ornament of his existence.

Ex Commissioner Leggett of the United States Patent Office is authority for the statement that nine-tenths of the capital invested in manufactures in this country is so invested through the protection it receives from the Patent laws and letters Patent. The business of the office has shown a healthy increase the last month past. The attorneys are hard at work looking after the interests of their clients. Edson Bros., 711 G Street, are among the oldest and most reliable firms and are reaping the reward of their industry and reasonable charges. They make an examination at the outset to determine the patentability of an invention, thus often saving the inventor disappointment and expense. They do not report doubtful inventions patentable to obtain their fee, as that is not required until the patent is allowed. Circulars and information sent free.

Operations were resumed in the Lehigh coal regin yesterday and will be continued for the present week, when another suspension occurs.

President Hayes has approved of a joint resolution for submission to Congress declaring a reduction of the tax on distilled spirits inexpedient.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From our Own Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17

"Whilst I, a lonesome kind o' man,
Wie'in my chimney-corner zit,
No vriend or dog do bide Wie' me,
Zo I be vorced to think a bit."

There is food enough for thought in the things one sees and hears at the capital these days, and the reflections are not all of the most pleasant and cheerful nature. If a correspondent would "touch the harp gently" and lightly, and drive not only dull care, but dull, sad and painful thoughts away he must turn his attention from such things; as the daily accounts of the distressed condition of his own country, the famine in China, the war in Europe, and returning board troubles in Louisiana, and calmly contemplate the efforts of Dr. Mary Walker and her associate female suffragists. Late women rights conventions have rather sat down on Dr. Mary, yet somehow, she comes to the front and is now taking a part in the raid upon Congress. The representatives of the late meeting here have been for three weeks button-holing members and senators, and haranguing committees until they have got all the House judiciary committee so "befuddled" that it stands a tie on the motion to report a bill giving the dear creatures the right to do as they please. As if woman had'nt always done that! Mrs. Spencer corned Ben Butler the other day, and there has been no end of gossip as to the nature of the interview especially as the wily and naughty Benjamin was seen to wink at her in the gallery recently. Dr. Walker is a character. But everybody knows that already. The sight of her peculiar dress of black pantaloons, close-fitting waist with fur-bound caps, half crown hat and walking stick recals Byron's lines:

"I know not what I could have been, but feel
I am not what I should be."

The Cabinet smashers, having let Secretaries Evarts and Schurz alone for awhile, are concentrating their efforts on Secretary Sherman. This time it is the work of the silver men, and they have it all fixed. The President will not vote the silver bill, whereupon Secretary Sherman will resign and Senator Matthews be appointed in his place to carry out the new financial policy with which he is in harmony. In consideration of stepping down and out of the Treasury, Mr. Sherman is to be appointed to the Berlin mission, and the silver Senators will see that he is confirmed. But your correspondent takes very little stock in this for several reasons one of which is that John Sherman isn't a resigning sort of man. These things however, with the rumors of his indictment in New Orleans for complicity in the returning board frauds, and the report that Packard is now here with an ultimatum, having a tell-tale letter in his possession, must all have a tendency to cause the Secretary to "think a bit," whether true or false. The ultimatum which Packard is said to demand is the collectorship at New Orleans and they say if he don't get it he intends to make a very large fuss. The House Committee on Invalid Pensions, have agreed upon a substitute for all the bills referred to, providing for payment of arrearages of pensions. Under this substitute all pensions shall be paid from the date of death or discharge, if applied for within five years: if not applied for within that time payment shall begin with the date of application, no arrearages to be paid at a greater rate than was provided in the original certificate, the Secretary of the Interior to make rules for payment. The bill also restores to the pension list all persons whose names were stricken therefrom on account of disloyalty. This section is for the benefit of southerners who served in the wars previous to the rebellion. The committee has also commenced a thorough inquiry. A number of gentlemen in the enjoyment of fat salaries and an ordinary degree of robustitude, connected with the office, are said, by those who profess to know, to have fallen into the habit of frugally adding to their incomes by drawing from the beneficent Government they serve. Long association with invalids has rendered them adepts in the art of simulating sickness, and as examination day approaches they find it an easy matter, with the connivance of the examiner, of course, to develop a hemorrhage of the lungs, a violent attack of heart disease, lameness in the bowels, or symptoms of some other of the innumerable physical ills that flesh is heir to. This may be base slander and the employees referred to are entitled to an opportunity to prove it such.

Advices from China are to the effect that owing to the famine 9,000,000 inhabitants of the "Flowery Kingdom" are on the verge of starvation. Memorials have been introduced in both Houses urging the use of the $700,000 indemnity fund, which should long since have been returned, for the relief of these sufferers. Thus the voice of charity finds an echo in the nation's capital for the starving millions in China, and proves that, in spite of race, religion or nationality, the great aphorism is as true to-day as it was two hundred years ago—"One touch of nature makes the whole world a kin."

A Wonderful Clock made in Pensylvania.

In Mengel's building, Reading, Pa., is now on exhibition in all probability the most wonderful clock in the world. It was built by Stephen D. Engle, a watchmaker, at Hazleton. He is about forty-five years of age, and was about twenty years in perfecting the clock. Mr. Reid, paid Engle, $5,000 for it. Engle never saw the Strasburg clock. In fact, he has not travelled more than two hundred miles from home at any time. This clock stands eleven feet high. At its base it is about four feet wide and at the top about two. It is about three feet deep at the base, gradually less towards the top. Its colors are brown and gold. The Strasburg clock is thirty feet high, yet its mechanism is not so intricate, nor has it as many figures as the Hazleton clock. The Strasburg clock's figures are about three feet high, and the American clock about nine inches. Three minutes before the hour a pipe organ inside the clock plays an anthem. It has five tunes. Bells are then rung, and when the hour is struck, double doors in an alcove open, and a figure of Jesus appears. Double doors to the left then open, and the apostles appear slowly one by one, in procession. As Peter approaches, Satan looks out of a window above, and tempts him. Five times the devil appears, and when Peter passes, denying Christ, the cock flaps its wings and crows. When Judas appears, Satan comes from his window and follows Judas out in the procession, and then goes back up to his place to watch Judas, appearing on both sides. As the procession has passed, Judas and the three Marys disappear, and the doors are closed. The scene can be repeated seven times in an hour, if necessary, and the natural motion of the clock produces it four times per hour, whereas the Strasburg procession is made but once a day, at 12 o'clock. Below the piazza is the main dial, about thirteen inches in diameter. To its right is a figure of Time with an hour-glass. Above this there is a window, at which appear figures representing youth, manhood, and old age. To the left of the dial is a skeleton representing Death. When the hour-hand approaches the first quarter, Time reverses his hour-glass and strikes one on a bell with his scythe, when another bell inside responds; then Childhood appears instantly. When the hour-hand approaches the second quarter, or half-hour, there are heard the strokes of two bells. Then Youth appears, and the organ plays a hymn. After this Time strikes two and reverses his hour-glass, when two bells respond inside. One minute after this a chime of bells is heard, when a folding-door opens in the upper porch, and one at the right of the court, when the Savior comes walking out. Then the apostles appear in procession. The clock also tells of the moon's changes, the tides, the seasons, days, and day of the month and year, and the signs of zodiac; and on top a soldier is constantly on guard, walking back and forward. As the hours advance, Manhood, Old Age and Death take part in the panorama.
