

UNCLE WALT

The Poetic Philosopher.

THE WISE OLD MAN.

The old man sits in his fig tree's shade, and fills himself with pink lemonade, and he smokes his pipe as he glances o'er the thrilling facts of the baseball score. He has no grief and he has no care, and he just leans back in his rocking chair, and views the world with a cheerful smile, for his larder's full and he has his pile.

The plan he has followed you will endorse! He used to work a bald-faced horse; he swung the axe and piled the spade, and he knuckled down at the blacksmith's trade wherever he worked in the field or in town, a part of his roubles he ralted down. He saw the folly of spendthrift men, and took to the bank a large brass yen; they burned their money as though with fire; he took to the bank a big tin lire.

And now he sits in his fig-tree's shade and eats ice cream with a wooden spade, and people smile as they look at him; he's fat and sassy and full of vim. And where are the fellows who drew their wage, and blew it in, in the bygone age? Do they sit back in their rocking chairs, serene and happy and free from cares? Have they their fig-trees and stuff to eat? Oh ask the copper who walks your beat.

WALT MASON.

THE HATS.

Girls of bygone days work hats; Think of it—the stupid flats!
