

Times Changes.

Time changes—oh! Time's changes, We can hear the cottage roof,
Or read the palace dome,
We hear the merry laughter,
And the merry song,
A dead and solemn thing.

The playground of our childhood days May seem so strange a place, That not one olden inmate Is left for us to trace.
The beams that light life's morning up May seem in misty shade, The stars of pleasure's fairy day May glimmer but to fade.
But we can lightly smile at all, Time's changes, all we find Some well-known voice grow harshly cold That once was warmly kind.
Till hand and eyes that used to be The first and last of life, Can calmly take a long farewell,
And just as calmly meet.

A Hint to Young Ladies.—An intelligent gentleman of fortune visited a country village in Maine, not far from Bangor, and was hospitably entertained and lodged by a gentleman having three daughters—two of whom in rich dresses entertained the distinguished stranger in the parlour, while one kept herself in the kitchen, assisting her mother in preparing the food and setting the table for tea; and after the supper, in doing the work till it was fully completed; when she also joined her sisters in the parlour for the remainder of the evening. The next morning the same daughter was again early in the kitchen, while the other two were in the parlour. The gentleman, like Franklin, possessed a discriminating mind—was a close observer of the habits of the young ladies—watched an opportunity and whispered something in the ear of the industrious one, and thereby for a time, but revisited the same family, and in about one year the young lady of the kitchen was conveyed to Boston, the wife of a fine gentleman, where she now presides at an elegant mansion. The gentleman whose fortune she won by a judicious department and well directed industry. So much for an industrious young lady.

"Will you give us a 'apple' of what you don't sell?" asked a young gentleman, entering a chandler's shop. "Willingly," replied the shopkeeper, on laying a stick rather roughly about the shoulders of the querist. "We always give that gratis."

"Oh, my friend," said a doctor to an Irish patient, "be composed: We must all die once." "I an 'it's that what vexes me," replied the patient.
"I could die half a dozen times, I'd not care a ha-penny about this time."

A Letter of the fair sex says the women are all alike. "When they are made, they are mild as milk; once made them wives, and they learn their backs against their marriage certificate and defy you."
