FIRE AT MILFORD.

Seven Families Rendered Homeless Early This Morning.

One of the most disastrous fires known in the history of Milford visited that place this morning and resulted in the loss of over nine thousand dollars' worth of property and the rendering homeless of seven families. Between one and two o'clock Samuel Dunstan, who lives on the Spur road, saw flames issuing from the house of Jeremiah Driscoll, who lived a few doors away. He immediately rushed out and alarmed first the Driscoll family and afterwards the people living in the adjoining houses. When discovered, the fire, which had started in the back kitchen of Driscoll's house, had already obtained a great headway, and the saving of the building appeared impossible. Mr. Driscoll's daughter, who was sleeping above the kitchen, with difficulty made her escape from the burning building. By this time the fire had obtained control of the whole house and rapidly spread to the adjoining buildings on each side, the only fire escape being by Mrs. Denlow, Sullivan and on the south by James Fitzgerald. Both these families, when the fire was first discovered had set about removing their household effects, but such was the rapidly with which the flames spread that they were unable to save more than a very small part of their goods. At daybreak two houses had been totally destroyed, and in spite of the efforts of the residents who were doing all in their power with buckets, the flames had spread still further and had reached the house owned and occupied by Mrs. Coyle and the residence of Mrs. Charles Savage. About four o'clock an engine arrived from Fredericton and rendered material assistance to the residents, the streams from it preventing the fire from spreading any further to the north. But John Lee's house to the south had been seized upon by the flames and before the fire was extinguished it was reduced to a mass of ruin. Very few of the families succeeded in saving any amount of their goods, as the fire moved so rapidly that they had not time to do much.

Jeremiah Driscoll estimates his loss at not less than three thousand dollars, to cover which he holds eight hundred and fifty dollars insurance each in the Bina and Imperial companies. Mr. Lee has a thousand dollars in the Sun, and estimates his loss at fifteen hundred.

Mrs. Coyle carries five hundred dollars in the Commercial. Less at least fifteen hundred.

Mrs. Savage estimates her loss at about a thousand dollars. Richard Lodge, who owns the house occupied by Mrs. Fitzgerald, has six hundred insurance in the Sun. Mrs. Swan carries nine hundred dollars in the Western, and estimates her loss at twelve hundred.

The cause of the fire is unknown, as although the cooking stove was in Driscoll's back kitchen, there had been no fire in it after five o'clock on Sunday evening, nor had any of the family occasion to use that part of the house. The residents of Milford believe that the fire was the work of an incendiary and are on the lookout for the guilty one.

He was eighty-eight years of age, and lived until about thirty years ago resided in the city. He then went to Hoboken, N. J., where he lived until five years ago, when he returned home. POLICE COURT.

Several Interesting Cases Before the Magistrate This Morning.

The usual Monday morning crowd, both of visitors and prisoners, gathered in the Police Court today. There were in all seven prisoners, most of them common drunks, and by a singular coincidence all were mousetaches. Charles McCarthy was picked up in the old graveyard on Saturday night, where he had gone to permit social intercourse between the two kinds of spirits. He was given two months.

Two men, McGee and Mitchell, who have been making a habit of stopping people on the street and begging money from them, were gathered into safe keeping by Sergeant Campbell, Mitchell, in one instance, had thrown his arms around a woman's neck and would not leave until she gave him ten cents. They stopped various other people with requests to buy beer, and made thorough nuisances of themselves. For want of further evidence their case was adjourned until tomorrow.

Robert McCallum, without pleading for the charge to be read to him, pleaded "Guilty," in an emphatic manner, and told that he had purchased three flasks of whiskey before seven o'clock on Saturday night, had gone to the Opera House and never touched a drop until after the performance. Eight of twenty.

Two other drunks, McHale and Mulcahey, who were found one on Prince William and the other on Smyth street, left deposits of eight dollars with Captain Jenkins, and as they did not answer to their names this morning, the deposits were declared forfeited.

Daniel O'Leary got drunk last night and went home for money. He claimed that he left some dollars in the house, which belonged to himself, and when he got in his father sent for the police and had him removed. This morning the father was unable to attend court, and Daniel was remanded for further evidence.

GROW MORE ASPARAGUS.
Some very fine asparagus at S. Z. Dickson's stall in the country market this morning attracted the attention of a Star man.

"That," said J. N. Wetmore, "is not American asparagus, but was grown at Rothsay. It is of much better quality than the imported article."

"Is there much of it raised hereabouts?" the Star asked.

"Very little," was the reply. "Some say it does not pay. But it can be raised, and as it can be pulled and brought into market and sold for consumption the same day, it is much fresher than that from the states."

"Now, take horse radish. A few years ago very little of it was raised here. But you see these cases of a thousand bottles each, neatly sealed and labelled. They came from Clifton, and it pays the people to raise the radishes and put them up in this way. There is a good demand for the article."

Speaking of the markets generally Mr. Dickson said eggs were firmer and potatoes appeared to be tending firmer also.

AT TRINITY LAST EVENING.
Members of the Loyallist and Historical Societies attended Trinity church last evening en masse. The services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Richardson, Rev. W. W. Craig and Rev. W. O. Raymond, chaplain of the Loyallist Society, who preached the sermon. He took for his text the words—"The land that Thou gavest our fathers," and preached a very appropriate sermon, dealing first with the Loyallists and closing with a strong appeal for fidelity to duty in national life. After the service Dr. Wm. Bayard, president of the Loyallist Society, unveiled the brass tablet erected in memory of the late Joseph W. Lawrence. Among those who attended was His Honor Lieut-Gov. McClellan.

BACK FROM THE EXPOSITION.
F. A. Dykeman returned on Saturday from a business trip to Upper Canada and the United States. While away he took in the Pan-American exposition at Buffalo, and has brought back with him many souvenirs and the fair. He says that the exhibition is still in an unfinished state and it seems evident that some weeks yet will elapse before everything is in shape. Despite this fact there are however large crowds of people daily arriving in Buffalo, and helping to swell the exchequer of the hotel keepers and the managers of the exhibition.

SATISFACTORY TEST.
This morning Mayor Daniel, Ald. McGoldrick and Robinson, Chief Kerr, R. W. Prink, C. E. L. Jarvis and a number of other insurance men and citizens witnessed a trial of the water pressure at the fountain on King square, after the change that has been made in the system. The test on the high pressure service threw a stream of water 60 or 70 feet in the air, while the lower pressure showed a falling off. The tests were regarded as very satisfactory.
