MAKING PIES BY MACHINERY. Philadelphia Record.

Lovers of the great American dainty—pie—will rejoice to learn that a new era has set in for its unlimited production.

It is a far cry from the "pie masher used to make" to a superior product made by machinery, but this has been accomplished by a machine invented by a Philadelphia.

For years there has been progress in "moet every line of baking, with the exception of the succulent pie. Bakers and practical inventors along those lines who experimented have declared that machine made pies are as impossible as perpetual motion. There are so many steps in the operation that it would seem their contention was well founded.

Undoubtedly by precedent, however, the Philadelphia inventor has continued his experiments for two years and at last has reached his goal. The pie-making machine has been installed in a baking company's plant in this city, and is now grinding out in steady stream of pies of all kinds and varieties. With the machine an operator can now produce thousands of pies where he formerly turned out hundreds. Not only will this serve to cheapen production, benefiting the consumer by making it possible to use better materials, but, as most of the work is mechanical, absolute cleanliness and uniformity is assured.

The pie machine is long and narrow, being about 10 feet by 20 inches. One man and three boys constitute the operating force, turning out 16 to 18 finished pies a minute. An electric motor furnishes power, while a gas jet keeps the form dies warm. Suspended over the machine is a tank, which holds a sufficient amount of filling for 400 pies. An agitator revolves within and keeps the fruit from packing at the outlet.

After the paste for crusts has been properly mixed it is weighed and cut into paper-size pieces by a dough divider. A tray of full lumps of dough for bottom crusts is placed at one end of the machine and another tray containing lumps for top crusts at the other end. At the rear is a stack of plates automatically fed by a ratchet. A mangle rolls the dough around, places a plate and the next movement brings it under the die which forms the lower crust. Then the fruit is deposited on the tank and the plate moves forward. By this time another lump of dough has been flattened out and stamped with an initial—such as "L" for lemon—while an automatic bellows blows a puff of flour over the dough to keep it from sticking.

The next movement brings the filled pie and the upper crust together one operator being stationed here to adjust the top cover if necessary. Then the covered pie comes under the edging die, which cuts out the scraps, and the pie passes forward on an apron which leads to the oven. One motion succeeds another with such regularity that the finished pie is passing to the oven almost before one can grasp the idea and purpose of the machine. With no fuss and little noise the empty plate starts at its end and passes off the other end of the machine, a finished pie in less than four seconds.

COULDN'T FIND THEM. (New York Tribune.)

A private letter recently received in this city from a Russian woman quotes the following little folk story as an illustration of the popular attitude in Russia:

Japan would have consented to peace with Russia some time ago if the czar had been able to send the Mikado the following persons: Two functionaries who do not steal; two priests who do not drink; one monk who has never been whipped; one workman who has always had enough to eat. But the czar was unable to find such persons in his whole country, and offered instead Admiral Alexieff, Grand Duke Sergius, Gen. Orloff, Admiral Ouchtomsky and the priest, Jean de Cronstadt. But the Mikado would not accept these substitutes, and that is why the war still goes on.

Coroner Roberts has made enquiries into the accident on Adelaide road on Monday, and has decided that no inquiry will be necessary.

DOCTOR AND TAILOR.

The doctor of a regiment stationed in India received a letter from his tailor including a long overdue account, and concluding with a polite inquiry after the doctor's health. The sawbones replied thus: "I have received your hypocritical letter, hoping that I am in a good state of health. Hear, then what your chance of my living long enough to be able to pay your bill are. I attend assiduously every cholera case in the camp, and I am making smallpox a special study. I swim every morning in a lake swarming with alligators. In went a foot of each better. The young one's face began to pale, but the other called for more boiling water.

"What the deuce is your leg made of, sir?" yelled the former, suddenly taking his foot from the bucket.

CONTINUOUS PRESSURE.
(San Antonio Express.)

—Mark Twain, in his lecturing days—reached a small eastern town one afternoon, and went before dinner to a barber's to be shaved.

"You are a stranger in this town, sir?" the barber asked.

"Yes, I'm a stranger here," was the reply.

"We're having a good lecture here to-night, sir," said the barber. "A Mark Twain lecture. Are you going to it?"

"Yes, I think I will," said Mr. Clemens.

"Have you got your ticket yet?" the barber asked.

"No, not yet," said the other.

"Then sir, you'll have to stand."

"Dear me," Mr. Clemens exclaimed. "It seems as if I always do have to stand when I hear that men Twain lecture."

"I'll bet you a dinner that you can't hold your foot—boots on—in a bucket of hot water as long as I can."

The bet was taken, and two buckets of hot water were brought in, and a kettle of boiling water to raise the temperature to the point of endurance. In went a foot of each better. The young one's face began to pale, but the other called for more boiling water.

"What the deuce is your leg made of, sir?" yelled the former, suddenly taking his foot from the bucket.

"Cork, sir—cork," was the answer.
