In Successful Progress.

Every man should be as good as his word, but it isn't always the case. Every store should be as good as its advertisements represent it to be, but it's sometimes the reverse.

It doesn't take any of us a great while to learn "which is which." If we had no higher motive, policy would teach us that exaggerated and misleading statements would create distrust sooner or later. But we have a higher ambition. We want to chisel into our business these four words:

"Our Word is Good."

By that we mean exactly what we say—that whenever we give you our word for anything, you may rest assured it is the truth.

FOR INSTANCE: When we say that we are offering OVERCOATS, good wearing Overcoats, that sold at $10, $12 and $13.50 for $6.90 and $7.90, we mean exactly what we say.

OTHER OVERCOATS, $8.90, $9.90, $12—very much under regular prices.

20th CENTURY SUITS—except Blue and Black—at 20 per cent. discount. Suits—in a few sizes only—$3.95, $4.90, $5.00 and $7.50.

Publicity and the Balance Sheet

When the average man looks at a piece of cloth he vaguely guesses at the quality, and wonders whether the price is not a little too high.

When an expert on cloth looks at it he traces it back to a flock of sheep grazing on a hillside. His mind goes back to the days of primitive looms, and forward again to these times of well-night sentient machinery. He sees the gradual growth of knowledge about dyes, from the time the first Indian painted his cheeks with crude red ochre to these days when we pilfer the hues of the rainbow. He sees the generations of men at work at the looms, each bringing increased skill to the task of making cloth.

The merchant should see as much in his balance sheet as the cloth expert sees in the piece of cloth.

He should see other things than the figures which represent "net profits." He should understand the causes which have operated to "grind out these figures."

And, while each phase of store expense should interest him, the expenditures of the year for "publicity" should have the most thorough consideration. For these figures regulate all other figures on the balance sheet as surely as the moon regulates the tides.

Assuming that his appropriation for publicity has been wisely expended, he can see where a figure four instead of a figure three in the advertising bill would have "ground out" a figure eight instead of a figure four in his "net profits" column.

His mind should travel back to certain days of the year when his advertising was weakest and scantiest, and when stocks seemed anchored to counters and shelves, and clerks all got sociable and friendly with one another. The final history of these days is written in the balance sheet.

He can recall other days when his advertising was electric with interest, when publicity reached flood tide, and the store was "raided" by patrons. And, thinking of these days, he wonders how the ebb tide could have traveled so far, and turned so reluctantly, in the "days that were dull."

In substance, the balance sheet should teach him that, as the best business and the best advertising "happened" to come at the same time, that in the coming year he will raise the standard, assure the invariable continuity and increase the space occupied by his store advertising.

RESCUE IN MID-OCEAN.

Capt. Nelson and Crew of the Schooner W. R. Chester Had a Narrow Escape.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—After a rescue in mid-ocean and a narrow escape from death, Captain Wm. Nelson, his wife and five seamen, of the two-masted schooner W. R. Chester, arrived tonight as passengers on the Atlantic transport line steamship Minnehaha. The schooner was abandoned in lat. 39.02, lon. 59.20, the crew being taken aboard the steamship Anglo-Chilian, which landed them at Havre.

The Chester left Jonesport, Maine, on Nov. 24, lumber laden, and bound for Barbados. She ran into rough weather soon after sailing, which continued until Dec. 11, when she was struck by a wave which threw her on her beam ends. She rolled over to port so far that her captain and his wife thought she would turn turtle, and the captain gave the order to cut away the masts. This was done, and when they went by the board, carrying away the bowsprit and other hamper, the vessel slowly came back to an even keel. To add to the peril of the situation, Captain Nelson found that his rudder was broken, and the schooner wallowed and rolled at the mercy of every sea which broke over her.

"Fortunately," said the captain, "she did not leak. We huddled in the cabin and did the best we could for four days and a half. There was plenty to eat and fresh water. There came a lull in the storm on the evening of the 15th, when the Anglo-Chilian came along. We lit signals of distress and the steamship sent her boat for us in charge of the second officer. It was necessary to make two trips to take off six of us. The schooner was set on fire when we left."

Captain Nelson, while he lost nearly all his belongings, managed to save his parrot and his wife's cat.

CANNOT GO TO SCHOOL.

Owing to the steady increase in the young population of Fairville the primary department of the school house has been very much crowded of late. In the new building which has recently been constructed one department is to be put in order for grade I. this term. It was impossible, however, to have the new room ready for the opening Monday, and Miss O'Brien, the primary teacher, was obliged to send the first grade home with instructions not to return till next Monday morning, when the department in the new building will be able to accommodate them.

The primary department of the school last term had 80 pupils, which was more than any teacher could do justice to. Besides this it was very difficult to accommodate them with seats, many having to sit on benches and work with their books on their knees.

At their regular meeting last night No. 1 Salvage Corps passed the resolution of confidence in their driver, which is referred to in another article. A motion was also passed instructing the secretary to notify the Common Council that the corps desired new quarters. The members feel that in their present rooms they are not sufficiently isolated.

Three new applications for membership were received and referred to the investigating committee.

After the business had been concluded Captain Green entertained the members to hot coffee and a variety of tempting eatables. A box of good cigars and an excellent musical programme added further to the pleasure of those present.

BASEBALL.

BOSTON, Jan. 9. — Captain Jimmy Collins, of the Boston American Baseball Club, is in town, and is elated over next season's prospects,, although he declines to rush into print with wild prophecies. He is not claiming everything, but says Boston will have a strong string of pitchers.

"Young, Dineen, Tannehill, Gibson and undoubtedly Hughes will do the bulk of the work," says Collins. "I figure that Burkett will strengthen the team ten per cent. He will show his old-time form, too.

"Farrell, Criger, Doran and McGovern should form a good catching staff. I sincerely hope that Farrell will be able to play with us and that he will be in shape to do him justice. Grimshaw is touted very highly and will deliver the goods. If Grimshaw can prove he is a better man than La Chance he will get the place. If not La Chance will play, provided, of course, that both men are not beaten out by Schaffer, who, they tell me is a beaut."

The word has been passed along that Selbach will sit with the wallflowers at the start, and Burkett will play left field to Freeman's right. Stahl will occupy the other place among the daisies.

Willie Keeler, who finished second among the American league batters and is therefore entitled to pose as an expert critic, says of the spit ball:

"It's not an old delivery under a new name and it's not easy to hit. I'll vouch for that on my own experience. A pitcher can't control it on a rainy day and he can't pitch a curve ball, but has to depend upon a change of pace or do the best he can.

"It's different with the spit ball, however. The pitcher wets the index and middle fingers and throws the ball with all his might. It's a crazy ball, because it's likely to go either to the right or left or down. Even the pitcher don't know where it's going exactly. Nor the catchers, either. They just try to block it. The batter? Well, he don't have any show at all.

"The first time I saw it used was when I was with the Baltimore team. Bowerman had it and used it in practice, but nobody paid much attention to it. Chesbro was the first to get control of it. He seldom used anything but the spit ball and a fast one during last season. He pitched six straight games without using a curve last season, using nine spit balls out of ten pitched balls. The tenth was a fast one. That was during the time he won 13 or 14 straight.

"The way Chesbro made that wild pitch which lost the championship to Boston was that he put his thumb where Dineen had wet it in pitching the spit ball. Both used the spit ball in that game. Chesbro's thumb slipped on the part of the ball that Dineen was wetting and the wild pitch resulted. Dineen had the spit ball that last day and he had it good."

"Did you make any hits?"

"I did not." Willie's accent on the "not" was so forcible as to indicate that nobody could hit Dineen's spit ball that day.

"It looked kind of funny that day," continued Keeler. "He had a great control over it."

FIRE LOSSES IN N. B.

Amounted to $360,000 in the Past Year.

The annual meeting of the board of fire underwriters was held yesterday forenoon, when officers were elected for the ensuing year. S. S. Hall was chosen president, and Peter Clinch was re-elected secretary. The committee on rates and assessments is composed of the three most recent presidents.

It is stated that the total insurance losses paid in New Brunswick during the year 1904 amounted to $360,000, which is approximately sixty per cent of the insurance. The local operating expenses vary from 20 to 30 per cent, and the head office expenses from 5 to 10 per cent last year the total general average of operating expenses being 32.97 per cent of the income. This result is regarded by the underwriters as being distinctly favorable, and the year is put down as a good one. If all other provinces of the Dominion gave such results, it is stated that the year would be a most prosperous one for the companies.

FREIGHT AGENTS MEET.

J. N. Sutherland, district freight agent of the C. P. R., leaves today for Montreal, where he will attend a meeting of the freight agents of Canada. The association will hold meetings on both Wednesday and Thursday. Many matters of interest will be discussed. Mr. Sutherland will return immediately after the sessions are concluded.

INDIANS DEFIANT.

Vancouver Island Tribe Attack Officials Sent to Arrest Men Who Broke Contracts.

(New York Herald.)

VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 7.—For the first time in almost a score of years the Indians of Vancouver Island have set the white man's law and its officers at defiance and caused the despatch of a government cruiser with sufficient force to maintain authority and make wholesale arrests. That the outbreak of the Nootka tribe has been without fatality thus far alone relieves the seriousness of the situation, first news of which reached Victoria on the return of the Queen City from the west coast.

The beginning of the trouble wth the Nootkas is ten months old. Certain of their young men had signed articles for the spring sealing with vessels of the Victoria fleet. These articles they broke after obtaining considerable advances. At the close of the season Captain Brown, of the Zellah May, was delegated to visit the Indians at their village and bring the offenders to justice. Chief Constable McDougall was instructed to go with him.

Nootka is midway between Clayoquot and Cape Scott and isolated from any community of whites. Captain Brown, who had been sworn in as a special officer, and McDougall quickly located Nootka Harry and Maqinna, or "Napoleon," a nephew of the chief, and decided that they were the offenders who should be arrested. To avoid unnecessary conflict it was agreed to keep the men under observation, deferring arrest until the approach of the steamer, which had orders to pick up the party.

Unluckily the smoke of another vessel was mistaken for that of the expected steamer, the arrests were made prematurely and trouble began. The men of Nootka pleaded for the liberation of the captives, and then threatened, and meanwhile the steamer passed.

The Indians surrounded the hut and one was sent in with a bundle of clothing, which they explained belonged to "Napoleon." He obtained permission to put on these garments, and soon appeared in a faded naval uniform of half a century ago, his shaggy head crowned with a cap bearing an emblem of British authority.

Then the bearing of the tribe underwent a remarkable change. The constables were informed that the uniform had been given to the tribe by Sir James Douglas, first governor of the colony, and that the Indians had been assured that any Nootka wearing it would be immune from interference by white law officers. It was a compact with the "Old Governor," and, with this as their justification, the Indians prepared for an assault in force.

This attack was successful, although the chief and ringleader had his head split open with a pair of handcuffs by McDougall, who was overpowered and his revolver and other property seized.

In response to signals the Indians then disappeared as if by magic. Their lookouts had sighted the approaching steamer, and soon afterward McDougall and Brown were taken on board.
