BODY FOUND IN OLD LUMBER CAMP.

Thought to be the Remains of John Hannon, Who Disappeared in 1896.

On Thursday, while Harry Carr and Samuel Tracey were hunting at MacAdam's dam, ten miles from MacAdam, they found the skeleton of a man in an old lumber camp. Carr, a grizzled old man, and Tracey, a younger man, were both well known in the lumbering business. They had been hunting for some time, and had been successful in finding several other skeletons. The skeleton found on Thursday was the most complete they had found yet. It was found in a small cave, and was surrounded by some old tools and a few pieces of clothing. The men were very excited, and they decided to take the skeleton home with them. They had it buried in a small grave, and they decided to keep it as a memorial to the man who had disappeared in 1896.

NORTH END LAD SHOT THROUGH HEAD.

Another gunning accident, due to carelessness both in handling and in leaving a loaded gun in reach of children, occurred Sunday morning at 194 Metcalf street, and Harold McKelvie, son of Sinclair McKelvie, baker, is now in the hospital with a bullet in his head.

On Sunday morning Mr. McKelvie's two sons, Frederick, aged 12, and Harold, aged 10, went down into the bakery, which is in the lower flat of his house, to get some water. It is said, and while there they noticed a rifle lying in the corner. The gun was, luckily, of the pump action, and the boys were not hurt.

A BOY THE SOLE SURVIVOR OF CREW.

Spanish Lad Rescued at Last Gasp After Awful Hardships—Rest of His Comrades All Drowned.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—The Orient-Pacific liner Omrah which recently arrived at Plymouth had on board the sole survivor of the crew of the Spanish brigantine Carmela which was wrecked while on a voyage from Gortayal in Southern Spain to Seville in Portugal.

While passing Cape St. Vincent A. H. Fraser, the third officer of the Omrah saw a quantity of wreckage at some distance from the ship. When the Omrah came nearer it was seen that a human being was lying across the wreckage, but whether dead or alive it was impossible to say.

The lifeboat was at once lowered and sheltered as much as possible by the crew. The boy was quickly away on its errand of mercy.

After a difficult and dangerous row the lifeboat reached the wreckage which was nothing more substantial than a couple of planks lashed together. Lying on these, unconscious and partially clothed was the body of a Spanish sailor lad.

He was taken back to the Omrah and had soon recovered sufficiently to tell his story.

He said that his name was Juan Delgado Lantano, and that he was one of a crew of seven belonging to the Spanish brigantine Carmela. On the day night the Carmela encountered squally weather and early Monday morning she capsized. The crew were thrown into the water but Lantano and two other sailors managed to grasp a couple of floating planks and using them together improvised a raft. The raft trail to which the three men clung was continually swept by the waves and during the night Lantano's two companions were drowned.

For two days and three nights he drifted about on the waves. During that time two vessels passed within distance, but the boy was so weak from exposure that he could not raise his voice above a whisper. After the last ship went by without seeing him he became unconscious and knew no more until he awoke to find himself safe on board the Omrah.

BLIND CALL HER BLESSED.

Valuable Invention of a Halifax Lady—A Device With Which Sightless Persons Write.

Miss Edith Ferguson Black, referred to in the article from the Los Angeles Times published below, is a Halifax lady, sister of Dr. John F. Black. The family removed from Halifax to California some years ago. Miss Black was the first lady typewriter in Halifax.

(Los Angeles Times, Cal.) That necessity is indeed the mother of invention has been proved by the right here in Los Angeles by a bright little woman whose needs led to her invention of a simple device which has been hailed with delight by hundreds.

Miss Edith Ferguson Black, a Canadian by birth, an Angeleno by residence, and a clever writer of fiction by occupation, is the inventor. A few years ago Miss Black had a long and serious illness that left her with weakened eyesight, and the physicians forbade her to strain her eyes by writing. This meant great hardship to one who for years had found her chief occupation in using the pen.

But she met the pen, and she met the pen to solve the difficulty, and after weeks of thought, evolved a neat little automatic writer, so ingeniously constructed that a blind person can use it.

Of the simplest mechanism, it consists of a polished wooden base with nickel attachments of such lightness and compactness that it can be handled with the greatest ease and held in any position, being a combination of the pen and the typewriter.

The pencil is held in an upright position, and runs along against the guide, which is rigid enough to insure a straight line, and yet responds to a slight pressure of the pencil when it is desired to make loop letters below the line. After the loop is made the pen is immediately springs back to place. A hand rest is attached loosely, on the left side, to a nickel-plated rod, notched at intervals to indicate lines, and slips from one notch to the next for each succeeding line, held by an invisible spring, which a slight pressure of the thumb slides downward from line to line until the page is filled, when the hand-rest stops automatically. It can then be lifted and pushed back to the top, where it stops mechanically, and the knob of the paper spring is pressed with the thumb, which releases the written sheet, so it can be withdrawn leaving a fresh one beneath.

A fountain or ball-point pen can be used, and duplicate copies can be made by slipping carbon under the top sheet. There are no obstructions to impede the free sweep of the pen, and therefore a natural handwriting is assured.

SOME FREDERICTON FREE BAPTISTS REFUSE TO AGREE TO UNION.

(Fredericton Gleaner.) When the congregation of the Fredericton Free Baptist church took a vote upon the question of church union there were about 10 members who voted in the negative or against the union. These members who were opposed to union will again be asked to sign a statement that the union has been consummated. What steps these persons will take is known and one of them said today that he had no plans, although he felt that he was practically without a church.

It has been stated quite openly that the members who were opposed to union were asked for their dismissal from the church now the union is consummated, so far as can be learned only one gentleman has asked for his dismissal.

Today this gentleman made the following statement: "I am not in favor of this union for the simple reason that we were getting along spiritually and financially all right without the union, and I cannot see what more they want. I was opposed to it, as I said a minute ago, so I took the quietest way of getting out of the whole thing and asked for my dismissal. I have heard nothing more about it, except that I am told that the Union doesn't work well across the river, where they cannot agree on one pastor for the two churches."

Regarding the Gibson pastorate a meeting of the Baptist committees of Gibson and Maryville will be held on Tuesday night to take some action up on the calling of a pastor.

Rev. Mr. Rideout, pastor of the Free Baptist church, is of the opinion that the less said about the matter the better, so he feels that it will work out all right.
