obtained for Inventors, in the United States, Canada and Europe, at reduced rates. With our principal Office located in Washington, directly opposite the United States Patent Office, we are able to attend to all Patent Business with greater promptness and despatch and less cost than other patent attorneys, who are at a distance from Washington, and who have, therefore, to employ "associate attorneys." We make preliminary examinations and furnish opinions as to patentability, free of charge, and all who are interested in new inventions and Patents are invited to send for a copy of our 'Guide for obtaining Patents,' which is sent free to any address, and contains complete instructions how to obtain Patents, and other valuable matter. We refer to the German American National Bank, Washington, D. C.; the Royal Swedish, Norwegian, and Danish Legations, at Washington; Hon. Joseph Casey, late Chief Justice U. S. CLOTHES WRINGERS.

ON account of the Wringer Manufacturing Co's not being able to form a new combination to keep up the prices (the old combination having expired Jan. 1, 1882), there has been a very keen competition since and the result is that we can sell Wringers at less than it formerly cost to import them. Now is the time to buy, as a combination may be formed again at any time and prices advanced. Orders from the country promptly filled and delivered at the trains or boats without any charge for cartage or packing.

Annexation.

(London Advertiser.)

In the last issue of the North American Review there appears an article on the annexation question, viewed from the American standpoint. It is only natural that, in discussing international relations, every country should consider its own interests first; and when our neighbors think about a closer union with Canada, it is with regard to possible benefits accruing to themselves that they first inquire.

The writer in the article referred to points out the extent and capabilities of the Dominion—its growth and developments, it vast resources, the advantages it offers to emigrants, and the opportunities it affords for the profitable investment of capital. Its geographical relationship to the old world is also favorably contrasted with that of the United States; as for instance, where it appears that Montreal is 257 nautical miles nearer to Liverpool than is New York; and Quebec 395 miles nearer; while even Port Nelson on Hudson's Bay is actually 99 miles nearer. And again on the westward, Japan is nearer to British Columbia than to San Francisco, while from Japan to Liverpool it is 935 miles shorter by way of the Canada Pacific than the American railways.

In view of these facts it is suggested that it would be wise policy for the United States to cultivate closer relationship with Canada, as a union of the two countries would be decidedly advantageous to the people of the republic, who would have the field for their enterprise and energy doubled in extent.

But it does not appear to strike the writer of the article that if there are great capabilities and possibilities in the Canadian Provinces, such as would justify the Government of the United States in seeking more intimate relationship with us, the same conditions would justify Canada in keeping separate from the United States, or from any other country, and in paddling her own canoe. If she has developed her resources and increased her wealth and population in a state of dependency, she might do better by a union with another country, but would be more likely to prosper by herself.

The writer referred to sees what thoughtful people in Canada, as well as out of it, can easily see, and that is, that the danger of any rupture of the present Confederation or any probabilities of future international changes have their seat in the discontent of the Provinces with the lavish expenditure of the Dominion Government and its centralizing tendencies. There is not a Province that has not had just cause for dissatisfaction, or that has not expressed it pretty loudly. The Tory party boasts continually through its organs that it is the sole defender of Confederation and has a monopoly of what it professes to call loyalty. But if the Confederation should be broken up and if annexation or independence should follow, there is no doubt the Tories will deserve the credit of having helped to bring about that state of affairs by the anti-provincial policy of the Dominion Government.

The Decline of the Puritan Stock.

Dr. John Ellis has just published a pamphlet entitled "Deterioration of the Puritan Stock, and its Causes," which contains matter for reflection. He gives official statistics for Massachusetts, covering the six years from 1876 to 1881, inclusive, which on their face appear to indicate that during that period the deaths exceed the births among native Americans in that State by 29,796; whereas the births exceeded the deaths among the foreign-born population by 87,854. As there is some confusion in the classification, however, Dr. Ellis thinks it not safe to infer from the statistics more than that "the foreign-born inhabitants of Massachusetts, numbering less than one-fourth the population of the State, gave birth to more than one half of the children born in the State." This conclusion, if trustworthy, is sufficiently serious, and it remains to ascertain the cause of such a marked decline in the vitality of a once specially hardy and vigorous race. The question has, no doubt, often been discussed before, but it is still an open one, since none of the explanations thus far suggested appear to cover the ground. Dr. Ellis believes that tight dressing, luxury, indisposition to assume family cares, and impatience of the domestic life among the women, and intemperance among the men, are the principal causes of the apparent deterioration in the Puritan stock.

As the foreign-born population drink more whiskey and beer than the native-born, intemperance can hardly be accepted as the explanation. As tight-dressing has never been confined to Massachusetts, in the first place, and in the second, is nowhere at present practised to anything like the extent that it was a quarter of a century ago, neither can that evil be regarded as solving the problem. In fact, it is certain that women dress to-day much more sensibly than they ever did, and pay more regard to physiological laws. It is also true that the strain of life upon a large percentage of them is less, if we except the effects of voluntary dissipation. But the chief difficulty consists in the obvious fact that the people of Massachusetts, generally speaking, live very much as the people of most other States live. They are certainly not more given to bad habits than their neighbors. They are certainly not behind the rest of the country in civilization, in sobriety, in ordered habits, in intelligence. Where is it that the causes of the decline referred to are to be sought, then?

Climatic conditions will not afford the answer, because the climate was the same when the Puritan stock was most vigorous. But the training of the young and the increasing ambition of girls may perhaps breed an indifference to or dislike of marriage, and thus encourage that dread of large families which, whether in Massachusetts or in France, is always reflected in the vital statistics. The growth of such sentiments among the women of any community must sooner or later affect its increase. The tendency to cultivate the intellect exclusively also has mischievous results, and it would appear that nature has in this way made it impossible to err far or long in that direction since the consequence of such a policy is the rapid disappearance of the stock upon which such experiments are made. Reviewing all facts and suggestions, it seems necessary to conclude that the main cause of the decline in the Puritan stock is really a change in the views of life held by women and it can only be presumed that the new views are more influential in that state than elsewhere in the Union. This alone can account for the fact that a similar decline is not observable in other states.—New York Tribune.

GENTEEL SLAVERY IN BOSTON.—The commercial employers in Boston are excited over an event that occurred on a recent Monday. The dry goods clerks, it seems, have no liberty of action in trying to better their condition, as the principal Boston houses have a compact not to hire help from each other nor to encourage any advance in salary. A Philadelphia house sent an agent to Boston to engage men, and, of course, many Boston clerks were anxious to apply. The large dry goods houses sent out floor walkers and deputy managers to stand at the office of application and spot all clerks. The result was a big black list and a number of dismissals. The question now arises, were those deputy spies guilty of intimidation, for which they can be punished by law, and is it a crime in a free country for men to honestly endeavour to better their condition? This is the result of the extraordinary number of young men who seek the 'genteel' business instead of learning a trade.

CAIRO, June 27.—Col. Kitchener, who has arrived at Korosko, reports the messengers arrived with letters from Zobehr Pacha were allowed to pass through rebel lines and received an escort of Mahdi's horsemen and are now nearing Khartoum. This is regarded as a proof of Zobehr's good faith.

CHEWING THE CUD.—Every child living in the country has stood and watched this curious operation, and wondered what the lump was which he saw come up in the cow's throat, and then go down again after she had chewed it for a certain length of time. And perhaps he may have seen the anxiety and turmoil produced on a farm by the report that some one of the cows had "lost her cud," and as the result of this excitement he may have seen the absurd attempt to "make a new cud," in the hope that the cow would by such means be restored to good condition. There is in the minds of a large proportion of the readers of the Scientific American (which simply means the community) so little correct understanding of the true nature of "chewing the cud," that a few words concerning it may not be amiss.

A very large tribe of animals, of which sheep and cows are only familiar examples, are called in works of natural history Ruminantia because they all ruminate, they chew the cud. They do so because their peculiar organs of digestion require it; they can get their nourishment in no other way. They have, it is said in the books, from stomachs, but the statement is not strictly correct, for the entire digestion is done in a single one, that which is called the fourth, the other three being only places for preparatory work. Their food is swallowed without being chewed; the chewing is to come later. When this unchewed food is swallowed it passes directly into the first stomach, to use the common term; but the drink which the animal takes goes straight past the entrance of the first into the second. These two serve only to soak and soften the coarse food. When the first has done what it can, the food passes out of it into the second, and then the cow or sheep is ready to "chew the cud."

The second stomach, while busily at work in soaking the food, keeps it in motion, and gradually rolls it up into masses, so that in the small upper part there is formed an oblong solid lump of the size that we recognize as the "cud." This the animal throws up into the mouth, and chews with evidently as much satisfaction as the same act of mastication gives us when we put the most delicate morsels between our teeth. When it is sufficiently chewed, the mass is swallowed and its place taken by another which had been rolled up in the mean time.

But the "cud" thus masticated does not return to the second stomach, from which it had come. It passes smoothly into the third, a place for additional lubrication, and then into the fourth, where the true digestion begins and ends.

This is, in brief, the whole story, and we see how naturally the chewing comes in; it is the same as in our own case, only that it is at a different stage of the food's progress. And we see also what "losing the cud" really is. The cow or sheep is suffering from indigestion; the "second stomach" has failed to roll up the little masses suitable for chewing, and there is nothing which the poor beast can bring up. Of course, therefore, the one being required is to restore the tone and power of the stomach; not to burden it with an "artificial cud," which would only increase the difficulty, instead of relieving it.

THE PROPAGANDA.—The Moniteur de Rome refers in a special manner to the address of the Bishops of Nova Scotia (Maritime Provinces) to Queen Victoria concerning the spoliation of Propaganda. It also dwells with pleasure on the part taken by Mgr. Capel in the drawing up of the protest of the New York Catholics. It is noted also that the Swiss Piusverein has sent a despatch to his holiness in which, in the name of 2,000 members of the society, it unites its protest to that sent by the Bishop of Switzerland. In Austria the protests against the action of the Italian Government are most numerous, and two new demonstrations in this respect are noted—that of the Patriotic Association of Vienna and that of the Political Circle of Troppau.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., June 27.—Nineteen River Head prisoners, charged with the murder of five Orangemen, on St. Stephen's Day, were all acquitted this evening amid intense excitement.

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 26.—Yale defeated Harvard in the 'Varsity race over the four mile straight-away course on the Thames, this afternoon, winning by three lengths, in 20 minutes and 31 seconds, the fastest time on record. The course was in fine condition. Harvard was the favorite in the betting before the start. Yale rowed in splendid form, pulling 29 strokes to the minute from the start. Both crews spurted at times and each alternately had a slight advantage in the early part of the race. In the last half, however, Yale drew away and won as above stated. Harvard's time was 20 minutes, 40 seconds. Harvards average stroke was 35 and Yale's 39. After the completion of the 'Varsity race, the Harvard-Columbia freshmen race was rowed. Columbia started with 42 strokes and kept her lead from the start, crossing the line the winner by four lengths. To-night Columbia and Yale have united in a jollification on account of their victories over Harvard.

The Spirit of the Times, of June 28th, will publish an interview with Vanderbilt in relation to Mr. Case's offer to match Jay-Eye-See against Maud S. or any other trotter for $10,000 a side. Vanderbilt is reported as saying he keeps Maud S. merely for his own pleasure and will not allow her to be trotted in a race or match.

Five thousand persons were in attendance at Madison Square Garden, June 27th to witness the sparring match between Mike Cleary, of Philadelphia, and Jake Kilrain, of Boston. The match was a tame affair and was declared a draw. There were but few blows struck and the audience hissed the boxers in the last round.

PARIS, June 26.—Despatches from Hanoi state that 4,000 Chinese regulars, who were provided with artillery, entrenched themselves at Langson, in violation of the treaty, and attacked the French forces on Monday, as they were on the march, killing seven and wounding forty-two. Gen. Nigrier at once set out with reinforcements. Gen. Millot telegraphs that the French troops numbered 700 men, and were on their way to Langson. Though so greatly outnumbered, they routed the Chinese. Among those lost by the French were two officers.

Prime Minister Ferry stated in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, that M. Patenotre had been ordered to proceed to Pekin and demand satisfaction for the Chinese violation of the treaty, at Langson. He said also that Admiral Corbet had gone northward with ships under his command, to support the French demands.

LONDON, June 23.—In the House of Commons, this evening, Mr. Gladstone moved that the franchise bill be ordered to a third reading. He said he had tried his best to avoid a conflict with the House of Lords, but should a conflict arise, while he would greatly regret it, he had no doubt of the issue. Sir Stafford Northcote objected to Gladstone's reference to the House of Lords. The bill was then ordered to a third reading by a unanimous vote. The result was received with prolonged cheering.

TOULON, June 26.—Six deaths from cholera occurred here to-day.
