ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA.

The R. M. Steamer Europa arrived yesterday morning, with Liverpool dates to the 16th inst. The death of Count Cavour, and its results to the Italian Kingdom are the principal topics in European politics.

INCREASE OF THE ARMY IN BRITISH AMERICA.—It has been, we are informed, determined to send these regiments of infantry and a sufficient amount of artillery and munitions of war to reinforce the garrisons in British North America.

THE NEW ITALIAN MINISTER.—In Wednesday's sitting of the Chamber of Deputies Baron Ricasoli announced the formation of the new Ministry, and said that in accepting so great a task, he and his colleagues had yielded to a sentiment of duty. After having dwelt on the immense loss sustained by Italy in the death of Count Cavour, he continued, "No one has bent under this misfortune, nor have we lost our faith in the destinies of Italy." He then explained that the policy of the new Cabinet will be a continuation of that of the one presided over by Count Cavour, who, he said, united boldness with prudence.

TERMINATION OF THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.—Melbourne, April 25.—The war in New Zealand terminated on the 19th of March. The Governor, it appears, made overtures of peace to the natives who had taken up arms, which nearly the whole of them, after another sanguinary engagement, accepted. The terms offered by the Governor comprehended the investigation of the title and the survey of the disputed land; the absolute right of the Queen's representatives to decide the question of ownership; the return of all plunder taken from the settlers; and lastly the recognition of the right of Government to dispose of the lands of those who have taken part in the war.

THE LAST HOURS OF COUNT CAVOUR.

The Romans, it is said, crowned on the Capitol the physician who rid them of Pope Adrian VI. The Italians of our own days would hang Count Cavour's doctors if the execution would afford any relief to their feelings. Within a very short period of five days they attempted to cure the Count of four or more different complaints,—congestion of the brain, typhus fever, intermittent pernicious fever, brain fever, dropsy, and lastly gout; and for all these diseases they could think of nothing but their own sovereign remedy—the lancet. The excitement of the Turin population, when they became aware of the Prime Minister's danger, rose to almost a frantic pitch. The gateway and courtyard of the Cavour Palace, the street, and all the adjoining avenues were strongly beset with eager faces, eager and silent, hardly imparting their fears to each other in an under-whisper. Had death been a visible, tangible enemy, you would have said the sullen, dogged expression of those countenances conveyed a firm, desperate resolution to grapple with him.

Notwithstanding frequent fits of delirium, Count Cavour seemed to have a distinct presentiment of his fate. Seeing himself alone with his domestic attendants, he asked with great serenity "whether his doctors had forsaken him?" On being answered, with surprise and concern, that they could never have thought of leaving him for a moment, he replied, with a smile, "Domattina, gli abbandonerò io." ("It is I who shall quit them to-morrow morning.")

The King paid repeated visits to the builder of the exalted fortunes of his dynasty. The dying man showed great strength and composure throughout his agony. There was apparently no intense suffering; at least, no utterance of it. He talked with great volubility, and even with his wonted humour, both in moments of mental alienation and in lucid intervals. Not one word escaped him throughout that betrayed the least feeling of resentment or animosity against any man living or dead. If this busy, scheming mind had no leisure for very expansive friendship or tender affection, it was, however, too loftily raised above the sphere of human passion to harbour any recollection of injury or insult. Generosity was an instinct with him and cost him no effort. He talked a good deal about politics, and to the last minute he expressed a firm faith in the destinies of his country. He advised patience and perseverance.

Victor Emmanuel passed several hours in the sick room, conversing most affectionately with his faithful Minister. His Majesty, after a short absence, returned again at eleven p. m., with the Prince Carignan, but the Count was no longer able to recognise the visitors. The King closed Count Cavour's eyes himself. No man in this world, and the greatest of all, know precisely the juncture at which it is good for them to die. What loss the death of this great man has inflicted upon Italy coming events will soon tell us. But for Cavour himself it is difficult to say whether he could depart this life at a moment more auspicious to his fame. His imperious, stubborn master-mind forced the Italian patriots to keep together. Cavour's death warns them to still closer unity of action and purpose.

SIR ROBERT PEEL AND THE SPANISH PERSECUTIONS.—Sir Robert Peel, M. P., addressed an immense audience on Tuesday evening last week at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool. He demanded, in the name of civil and religious liberty what was now being conceded by most nations, however despotic, that the same privileges and rights should be enjoyed by the Protestants in Spain as were enjoyed by Protestants in other parts of the world.
