CELERY.

To obtain good celery, it is necessary that the plants should be strong and well grown. Sow the seeds in a hot-bed or cold-frame. When the plants are about three inches in height, transplant to a nicely prepared bed in the border, setting them about four or five inches apart.—When about six inches high, and good stocky plants, set them in the trenches. About the middle of July is early enough. Too many make trenches by digging out the top soil, and only putting a few inches of mould at the bottom, and never obtain good celery. The trenches should contain at least eighteen inches of good soil and well-rotted manure, in about equal portions. Take off all suckers and straggling leaves at the time of transplanting. Earth up a little during the summer, keeping the leaf-stalks close together, so that the soil cannot get between them, and during September and October earth up well for blanching. Those who grew celery for market extensively do not use trenches, but make the soil deep and rich and plant in rows, earthing up with the plough. Take up the plants late in the fall, just before winter sets in. A little may be placed in the cellar, covered with sand or earth for immediate use. The best way of keeping is to dig a trench about a foot wide, deep enough to stand the stalks erect, leaving the tops a foot below the surface. Place them in this trench, without crowding, then cover with boards and plenty of leaves and straw. This can be opened at any time during the winter, commencing at one end, removing enough to the cellar to last a week or ten days.—Vick's Guide.

POTATO SETS.—A correspondent in the Country Gentleman, in an article on potato culture, has the following sensible remarks: "I have noticed several articles in your columns lately in regard to the size of seed. The question appears to be, shall we plant large, small, cut or uncut seed. There is almost always too much seed planted—too many eyes to the hill. We might as well expect to raise large ears of corn with ten or twelve stalks to the hill, as large potatoes with the amount of vines in a hill. I have tried every way of seedling, and with me the best is to select large, smooth, well developed tubers, discard deep-eyed and prongy specimens, for I believe in potatoes, as well as in other things 'like begets like.' This is best done at digging time. Put them away by themselves. I have found it best to bury (for if put in cellar the temptation to use them is great), and not open until planting time. Cut them to one eye in a piece, and put but one piece in the hill: plant in the drills, and at digging time you will find but few small potatoes. On no account plant the very small potatoes; cook them and feed to the hogs. I believe that the main cause potatoes running out is planting small or medium seed, and continuing it year after year.

LARGE CROPS OF POTATOES.—A farmer in Pontiac county, Quebec, writes to the Canada Farmer that he has never failed to obtain 400 to 500 bushels of potatoes per acre for several years past.—He selects the earliest and best potatoes of all variety he wishes to grow, in the fall ploughs the land 8 inches deep, and cross-ploughs it in spring 4 inches deep, thus leaving the seeds of weeds, &c., at the bottom of the seed bed. He plants about the 12th of May, cuts his seeds into from three to six pieces each, a week before planting time and is careful not to have the eyes sprout before planting. He has the ground well harrowed and levelled, marks rows both ways two and a half feet apart each way, by means of a wooden rake with four large teeth in it, each the required distance apart to mark the rows. He drops three pieces of potato at each cross mark, and does all the afterwork by means of a plough which he runs both ways between the rows; and harvests his crop of potatoes fifteen to twenty days ahead of any of his neighbours. He grows potatoes on the same land for three years in succession, and then puts in wheat, of which he always gets a good crop after potatoes. The varieties he grew were Peachblow, Pink-eye, Irish Melvine, and China White.

COMPOSITION FOR WOUNDS ON TREES.—We find nothing better than white lead paint, adding a little lamp-black to render it less conspicuous.—The edge of the wound where the branch is sawn off should be pared smooth with a knife, and the wound well coated with the paint.

OATS.—The Country Gentleman says that all heavy oats that have been introduced have degenerated after a few years to the old standard.

It is said that Ohio has in the past three years imported ten million bushels of wheat to feed her people, instead of exporting, as formerly, from seven to ten millions annually.

NEW PEAS.—Mr. Laxton, of Stamford, England, has succeeded in raising a race of early green marrows of great excellence, by his exertions in hybridizing.

William L., raised by him, is a wrinkled blue marrow, as early as Sangster's No. 1. and producing very large pods.

Mutum in Parvo is said to be a larger form of Little Gem, and in some respects an improvement on that variety.

Letters from France mention a premature growth of the wheat on account of the mild weather.
