Hints for Parents.

WATCH, MOTHER, WATCH.
Mother, watch the little feet,
Climbing o'er the garden wall,
Bounding through the busy street,
Ringing cellar, shed, and hall,
Never count the moments lost,
Never mind the time it cost;
Little feet go astray;
Guide them, mother, while you may.

Mother, watch the little hand
Picking berries by the way,
Making houses in the sand,
Tossing up the fragrant hay,
Never dare the question ask,
"Why to this weary task?"
These same little hands may prove
Messengers of light and love.

Mother, watch the little tongue
Prattling eloquent and wild,
What is said, and what is sung,
By the happy, jocular child,
Catch the word while yet unspoken,
Stop the row before 'tis broken;
This same tongue may yet proclaim
Blessings in a Saviour's name.

Mother, watch the little heart,
Beating soft and warm for you;
Wholesome lessons now impart;
Keep, oh keep that young heart true.
Extirpating every weed,
Sowing good and precious seed;
Harvest rich you then may see;
Ripening into eternity.

Miscellany.

A Thrilling Scene.

Permit me to illustrate my views of the traffic in moderate drinking, by relating substantially a thrilling scene which occurred in Connecticut, while the people were gathered together to discuss the merits of the license question, and decide informally whether neighbors should any longer be permitted to destroy each other by vending alcoholic poison.

The town had suffered greatly from the sale and use of intoxicating liquors. The leading influences were opposed to total abstinence. At the meeting, the clergyman, a deacon and the physician were present, and were all in favor of permitting a few men of high moral character to sell alcohol, for they all agreed in opinion, that alcohol in moderation, when used as a beverage, was a good creature of God, and also, to restrict the sale of moderate use, was an unjust interference with human liberty, and a reflection upon the benevolence of the Almighty. They all united in the belief, that in the use of intoxicating beverages, excess alone was to be avoided.

The feeling appeared to be all one way when a single teetotaler, who was present by accident but who had been a former resident of the town, begged leave to differ from the speakers who had preceded him. He entered into a history of the village from its earliest settlement; he called the attention of the assembly to the desolation moderate drinking had brought upon families and individuals; he pointed to the poor-house, the prison-house, and the grave yard for its numerous victims; he urged the people by every consideration of mercy, to let down the flood-gates and prevent as far as possible, the continued desolation of families, by moderate use of alcohol. But all would not do. The arguments of the clergyman, the deacon, and the physician, were too much for the single teetotaler. No one rose to continue the discussion or support him, and the President of the meeting was about to put the question—when all at once there arose from one corner of the house a miserable female. She was thin and old, and her appearance indicated the utmost wretchedness and that her mortal career was almost closed. After a moment of silence, and all eyes being fixed upon her, she stretched her attenuated body to its utmost height, then her long fingers to their greatest length, and raising her voice to a shrill pitch, she called upon all to look upon her.

"Yes," she said, "look upon me, and then hear me. All that the last speaker has said relative to temperate drinking, as being the father of all drunkenness, is true. All practice, all experience, declare its truth. All drinking of intoxicating poisons as a beverage, is excess.—Look upon me. You all know me, or once did. You all know I was once the mistress of the best farm in this town. You all know too, I once had one of the best—the most devoted of husbands. You all know I had five noble-hearted, industrious boys. Where are they now? Doctor, where are they now? You all know. You all know they lie in a row, side by side, in yonder church-yard; all—every one of them—filling the drunkard's grave! They were all taught to believe that moderate drinking was safe, excess alone ought to be avoided; and they never acknowledged excess. They quoted you, and you and you," pointing with her shred of a finger to the minister, deacon, and doctor, as "authorities." They thought themselves safe under such teachers. But I saw the gradual change coming over my family and prospects with dismay and horror; I felt we were all to be overwhelmed in one common ruin; I tried to ward off the blow; I tried to break the spell—the delusive spell—in which the idea of the benefits of moderate drinking had involved my husband and sons; I begged, I prayed; but the odds were greatly against me.—The minister said the poison that was destroying my husband and boys, was a good creature of God; the deacon (who sits under the pulpit there, took our farm to pay his rum bill), sold them the poison; the physician said a little was good, and excess ought to be avoided. My poor husband and dear boys fell into the snare, and they could not escape, and one after another was conveyed to the hushed grave of the drunkard. Now look at me again; you probably see me for the last time; my hand has almost run. I have dragged my almost exhausted frame from my present abode—your poor house, to warn you all, to warn you deacon! to warn you, also teacher of God's word, and with her arm high flung, and her tall form stretched to its utmost, and her voice raised to an unearthly pitch, she exclaimed, "I shall soon stand before the judgment seat of God; I shall meet you there, you false guides, and be a swift witness against you all!"

The miserable female vanished; a dead silence pervaded the assembly, the minister, deacon and physician hung their heads: the president of the meeting put the question, shall we have any more license to sell alcoholic poisons, to be drank as a beverage? The response was a unanimous—No!

Friends of humanity everywhere,—what would have been your verdict had you been there? It must also have been—"No!"

Holding forth the Word of Life.

The word of life is the word of God. It liveth and abideth for ever. This word is to be held forth by every Christian. Not that all are to preach; but each one is to do all the good he can in his own proper sphere, just where God has placed him, holding forth the word of life in his daily walk and conversation, by example, by precept, and by individual and personal, as well as by associated effort. Now if all Christians would do so, then it would follow,—

1. That every Christian would be a constant reprover to the world. No sinner could see him without feeling reprov'd. His very life would administer reproof to the ungodly.

2. Every Christian, too, would be a constant warning to the world. All around him would be reminded of another state of existence, and of the danger of living unprepared for it. His very life would say, "Flee from the wrath to come."

3. Hence, every Christian would be a constant exhortation to the world. His life would say, "Follow me as I follow Christ."

4. The Christian, too, would be a constant incentive to the world,—an incentive to duty,—a persuasive to piety,—a motive to closing with Christ, and becoming reconciled to God.

Holding forth the word of life! O, that all would do so! Then how soon would the church arise and shine! And how soon would the world wear a different aspect! Let every Christian awake, and henceforth and evermore hold the word of life! Then God will smile, and angels will rejoice over repenting sinners! Then will be joy in heaven; and the very earth will be glad,—bud and blossom as the rose!

The Life-boat's Last Turn.

BY LIEUT. W. G. RHIND, R. N.

"It's the last turn she'll make," said William to his friend, as they stood on the cliff watching the life-boat, as she was bringing to the shore part of the crew and passengers of the wrecked vessel. "It's her last turn, for the storm has so increased, that ere they reach the wreck again, she will have gone to pieces." Now what the life-boat is to the stranded vessel, such is the gospel of salvation to poor lost man. It is his only remedy—there is no other—self-salvation in both cases is out of the question! And also, what the LAST BOAT is to the stranded vessel, which in a few minutes will be in pieces, such is the gospel, when preached at the end of the world. See how the sailors are tugging at the oar, if possible to reach the vessel once more—if possible to save some. Such surely is the ministry set forth by the angel flying through the midst of the heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach to all nations;—"Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come." And how is God to be feared?—how glorified? By believing "the everlasting gospel"—the unchanging gospel—the gospel of the first day of grace (Gen. iii. 15; iv. 4)—the gospel of the last day (Rev. xiv. 6-8). For salvation is only to be found through faith in the atoning blood of Him who was God and man in one person (John i. 14); the Christ of God (Matt. xvi. 16); the Saviour of the world (John i. 29; Acts. iv. 12). "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God" (1 Pet. iii. 18).

"Man the life-boat—man the life-boat; hearts of oak your succour lend; see the shattered vessel stagger; quick, oh quick assistance send."

See the ark of refuge launching,
See her hardy crew prepare
For the dangerous work of mercy;
Gallant British hearts are there.

Now the fragile boat is hanging
On the billow's feathery height;
Now 'midst fearful depths descending,
While we wither at the sight.

Courage! courage! she's in safety,
See again her buoyant form,
By his gracious hand uplifted,
Who controls the raging storm.

With her precious cargo freighted,
Now the life boat nears the shore;
Parents, brothers, friends embracing,
These they thought to see no more.

Blessings on the dauntless spirits,
Dauntless they, who, with brave,
Ready lie a limb to venture,
So they may a brother save.

Christian! pause and deeply ponder,
Is there nothing you can do?
The sinking ship, the storm, the life-boat,
Have they not a voice for you?

There's a storm, a fearful tempest,
Souls are sinking in despair;
There's a shore of blessed refuge,
Try, O try to guide them there!

O! remember Him who saved you,
Whose right hand deliverance wrought;
Who from depths of guilt and anguish,
You to peace and safety brought.

'Tis His voice who cheers you on ward
"He that winneth souls is wise;"
Launch the gospel's blessed life-boat,
Venture all to win the prize."

GOING SWIMMING.

"Come, let's go swimming; it's horrid hot," said James Jones to Henry Arnold, as the little boy came to a lane that led to the water. "I want to," answered Henry. "Want to? well, then, what's to hinder? Come." There was an undecided look on Henry's face for a moment, and then he said quickly, "Yes, I'll go," and away they skipped to a little point of land which ran into the river, where the boys usually went swimming. Two or three boys were already there, their black heads bobbing up and out of the water, and their arms moving to and fro like great fins.

James and Henry began to undress; and James was just ready to make his plunge when Henry buttoned up again. "Come, what does that mean?" shouted James. "Not going in," Henry answered. "Why not? are you afraid because Bill Parsons was drowned here?" cried James. "I'm not afraid of drowning, either," said Henry, reddening with sudden anger, for boys hate to be called cowards. "Then, why don't you go in, I should like to know?" asked James, in no very pleasant tones. "I'm not going in," answered Henry. "Just thought of it," asked James, with a sneer. "No, I have not just thought of it; but I did not think of it enough when I agreed to come with you; now I do, and I'm not going in."

"Why, your mother will never know it," cried all the boys together; "she'll never be the wiser." "But I shall know it," said Henry, "and I'm not going to do a thing which makes me feel mean—so I'm off." "Tied to his mother's apron-strings," yelled the boys. "Glad I got a mother's apron-strings to be tied to," shouted back Henry, from the top of the hill; "they're the best strings in the world—the police and the prison never get such boys in." And he marched bravely and joyfully home, a better and a stronger boy.

There are two capital points in Henry's conduct which I want you to notice. One is, he thought time enough beforehand to obey. You may say he ought not to have consented at all. I know it; but the fact is, we are all weak and liable to be tempted, and it is only by resistance to temptation that we grow strong. Think in time and act accordingly; boys. The other good thing is, Henry was not afraid of the ridicule of his companions. Knowing that he was right, he was sure being laughed at. That is a strong point in character. Keep to it. Never let any body ridicule you out of the sight and true way.

"AND YOU TOO."

Some ungodly young men were sitting together writing in an office. A faithful Christian entered, and addressed one of them solemnly about his soul's salvation. Just as he was leaving them, he turned to one who seemed so desperate and hardened that he lacked courage to address him, and just said, "And you too." These words, blessed by the Holy Spirit, found a lodgment in that guilty soul. The young man was a wanderer from home, and a neglecter of a pious mother's instructions. But how, then, his spoken words rang in his ears. When he saw his friends one by one yielding to Christ, something seemed to whisper, "And you too;" and when he heard of the fearful condition of those who were grieving the Spirit, and sealing their eternal fate, the words, "And you too," sank to his inmost soul. He became a child of God, and a minister of the gospel. The faithful Christian whose words awakened his attention, never knew while on earth the effect produced upon that thoughtless young man. But he will know in that day when the secrets of all hearts are revealed, and the deeds done in the body are made known. Let every young Christian learn to say and do something for Christ. If it be but little he can do, let that little be done. The Lord Jesus expects us to act according to our ability and our opportunity, and if we do so faithfully all our days, we shall hear him say, "Well done!"

AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL,

For the rapid Cure of
COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS,
BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH,
CROUP, ASTHMA, AND CONSUMPTION.

TO CURE A COLD, WITH HEADACHE AND SORENESS OF THE BODY.—Take the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, and wrap up warm, to sweat during the night. For a COLD AND COUGH, take it in the morning and evening, according to the directions on the bottle, and the difficulty will soon be removed. None will long suffer from this trouble when they find it can be so readily cured. Persons afflicted with a seated cough, which breaks them off their rest at night, will find by taking the Cherry Pectoral on going to bed, they may be sure of sound, uninterrupted sleep, and consequent refreshing rest. Great relief from suffering, and an ultimate cure, is offered to thousands who are thus afflicted, by this invaluable remedy. From its agreeable effects in these cases, many find themselves unwilling to forego its use when the necessity for it has ceased.

TO SINGERS AND PUBLIC SPEAKERS this remedy is invaluable, as by its action on the throat and lungs, when taken in small quantities, it removes all hoarseness in a few hours, and wonderfully increases the power and flexibility of the voice.

ASTHMA is generally much relieved, and often wholly cured by Cherry Pectoral. But there are some cases so obstinate as to yield entirely to no medicine. Cherry Pectoral will cure them if they can be cured.

BRONCHITIS, or irritation of the throat and upper portion of the lungs, may be cured by taking Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses. The uncomfortable oppression is soon relieved.

FOR CROUP.—Give an emetic of antimony, to be followed by large and frequent doses of the Cherry Pectoral, until it cures the disease. If taken in season it will not fail to cure.

WHOOPING COUGH may be broken up and soon cured by the use of Cherry Pectoral.

THE INFLUENZA is speedily removed by this remedy. Numerous instances have been noticed where whole families were protected from any serious consequences, while their neighbours without the Cherry Pectoral, were suffering from the disease.

Repeated instances are reported here of patients who have been cured from LIVER COMPLAINTS by this remedy, so many that there can be no question of its healing power in these diseases. It should be perseveringly taken until the pain in the side and other unpleasant symptoms cease.

FOR CONSUMPTION, in its earliest stages, it should be taken under the advice of a good Physician, if possible, and in every case with careful regard to the printed directions on the bottle. If judiciously used, and the patient is carefully nursed meantime, it will seldom fail to subdue the disease.

For settled CONSUMPTION in its worst form, the Cherry Pectoral should be given in doses adapted to what the patient requires and can bear. It always affords some relief, and is not unfrequently the means of curing those who are considered last all cure.—There are many thousands scattered all over the country, who feel and say they owe their lives and present health to the Cherry Pectoral.

Twenty years of trial, instead of impairing the public confidence in this medicine, has won for it an appreciation and notoriety far exceeding the most sanguine expectations of its friends. Nothing but its intrinsic virtues and the unmistakable benefit conferred on thousands of sufferers could so originate and maintain the reputation it enjoys. While many inferior remedies have been introduced, and have failed and been discarded, this has had the advantage of every trial, conferred benefits on the afflicted they can never forget, and produced cures too numerous and too remarkable to be forgotten.

While it is a fraud on the public to pretend that any medicine will infallibly cure—still there is abundant proof that the Cherry Pectoral does not only as a general thing but also invariably cure the maladies for which it is employed.

As time makes these facts wider and better known, this medicine has gradually become the best reliance of the affections of the log-cabin of the American Peasant, to the Palaces of European Kings.

Prepared by J. C. AYER, Practical and Analytical Chemist, Lowell, Mass., and sold in St. John by T. Walker & Co., Fellows & Co., Everett & Co., Chalmers & Hunt, & in Fredericton, in Carleton by J. Cook, and by the Druggists generally.

MONUMENTS &c.
THE business heretofore carried on by McKIM & CLEAR, in the name and on account of the old stand, Germain street, has now a more superior assortment of workmanship in Marble, MONUMENTS, TOMB TABLES, MANTELE PIECES, &c., &c., containing beauty of design, correctness of finish, and durability of material.

The Subscriber is determined he will spare no pains, trouble, or expense, to maintain the fame his work has secured throughout the Provinces. Determined to satisfy all who may kindly favour him with patronage, he will receive no pay until the articles ordered are finished, and not then, unless they give complete satisfaction. He is prepared to continue to rival all those firms, of Yankee extraction, which are endeavoring to build up their inferior fame upon the ruins of his Establishment, and who seem to think wretched workmanship may be palmed off with impunity upon this community, while the members of such firms give neither personal attention nor superintendence to the execution of their work. Having studied his business in England and Scotland, he has since his commencement in England and John, entirely outstripped all competitors whose importations from the United States have been even miserable samples of land of Yankee clap-net, wooden nutmegs! He desires to defend no man, but as a hard-working business man, he thinks himself more deserving patronage than those who are endeavoring to build up their inferior fame upon the ruins of his Establishment, and who seem to think wretched workmanship may be palmed off with impunity upon this community, while the members of such firms give neither personal attention nor superintendence to the execution of their work. Having studied his business in England and Scotland, he has since his commencement in England and John, entirely outstripped all competitors whose importations from the United States have been even miserable samples of land of Yankee clap-net, wooden nutmegs!
