

Poetry.

THE CHRISTMAS ROSE.

There is a flower which blooms a one,
Bound in the frozen ground,
Where birds to their secret haunts have flown,
And the seed lies round.
Yet the mantle it wears is pure and white
As the snow in which it sleeps;
And amid all the angry storms of night,
Its purity it keeps.
Few where the sunbeams that give it birth,
Cold is its crystal bed.
It blooms by itself on the darkened earth,
Like the living mist at the dead.
But it tells me of One whose dwelling here
Was a dwelling of grief and woe;
Where the smiles gave place to the bitter tear,
And the friend to the ruthless foe.
No power but this could have stood that blast;
The fiercest earth ever bore;
But He endured till the rage was past,
And vengeance could do no more.
His righteous spirit, the power of hell
Tried all their skill to blot;
But when they had crushed it with malice fell,
Found it still without a spot.
Ah, happy the soul by whom it is known
This fair, this peerless flower!
For where its seed by heaven is sown,
'Twill abide through the darkest hour.

The wild winds may from earth's gems away,
The snow may melt from beneath,
Yet hope shall still smile on her cheery day,
And weave thee a heavenly wreath.
Or is thine a blossom left waste and drear,
Bruised by a hand divine?
There is yet one flower, whose smile could cheer
A broken heart like thine.

God grant thee to turn from thy wintry lot,
To rest on a Saviour's love
And to know there is One who changeth not,
A TALE OF LIVES ABOVE.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

Praise to God, immortal praise,
For the love that crowns our days;
Bounteous source of every joy,
Let thy praise our tongues employ;
All to thee, our God, we owe,
Source whence all our blessings flow.
All the blessings of the fields,
All the stores the garden yields,
Flocks that whiten all the plain,
Yellow sheaves of ripened grain,
Lord, for these our souls shall raise
Grateful vows and solemn praise.
Clouds that drop their fatening dews,
Suns that gleam with warm effluence,
All the plenty summer pours,
Autumn's rich and flowing stores;
Lord, for these our souls shall raise
Grateful vows and solemn praise.
Peace, prosperity, and health,
Private bliss and public weal,
Knowledge, with its gladdening streams,
Pure religion's holier beams;
Lord, for these our souls shall raise
Grateful vows and solemn praise.

The Red-Coat Preacher.

Captain Scott, the intimate friend and helper of Whitefield, having received a good education, embraced the profession of arms in his seventeenth year. He was in active service, and was soon promoted to the rank of captain. The dangers to which he was exposed as a soldier, made a deep impression upon his mind, and led him to resolve to make preparations for death. He read the Scriptures, and offered a form of prayer daily, though his conduct in other respects remained unchanged. Happening to be quartered near Oat-hall, and being out on a shooting party, he was driven by a storm to take shelter in a farm-house. A number of labourers were present, and the farmer being a religious man, the conversation turned on the subject of personal religion. Scott listened to their remarks with astonishment. He found they had ideas of religion which were perfectly new to him, and yet they were such as commended themselves to his conscience. He asked whence they had acquired their knowledge, and they told him at the hall of Lady Huntingdon, where a famous man was then preaching. They gave him an urgent invitation to come and hear for himself. He did so the following Sabbath, and heard Mr. Romaine preach from the text—"I am the way." The discourse made known to him the way of salvation, and the result was, that he became a new man—a decided Christian. He soon began to hold meetings with his soldiers, among whom he became exceedingly useful, though this course exposed him to many annoyances. His first sermon was preached before his ordination, under the following circumstances:—A pious person to whom he was introduced, having heard of the meetings he had held among the soldiers, told him he must preach in his house that evening. He gave him a Bible and hymn-book, and left him alone in the parlour to prepare for his work. He complied with the request, or rather the injunction, and from that time forward he was a zealous and effective public preacher. He soon after preached in the meeting-houses in Leicester, in his regimentals, and attracted great attention, and awakened great opposition. Whitefield gave him his hearty commendation, and invited him to London. "I have," said he, "invited Captain Scott to come to London, and bring his artillery to Tubernacle rampart, and try what execution he can do there." Immense congregations crowded to hear him, and many were converted under his ministry.

The change in Captain Scott's mode of life caused many to say of him, as some did of his Master, "He is beside himself." One night, as he took the mail-coach for Shrewsbury, he found he had for a companion a major in the army. Though strangers, they engaged in conversation, and the captain asked him if he was acquainted with any families in Shrewsbury. The major answered him in the affirmative, and enumerated, among other families of his acquaintance, the Scotts. In the course of his remarks respecting them, he said, "there was one mad fellow, who many years ago went into the army; and when he was there, turned Methodist, and went about preaching with his regiment." "Has he shown any other marks of derangement than those you have mentioned?" said Captain Scott. "I really can't say, as I know very little about him." When they arrived at Oxford, they were shown into a room lighted by two candles. The captain, taking one in each hand, walked up to the major, and said, "Give me leave to introduce to you the mad Captain Scott." The major was overwhelmed with astonishment, and was greatly mortified at what he had said. The captain assured him that his remarks had not caused the slightest pain, but requested that when he saw his friends, he would correct their misapprehensions with respect to the state of his mind. "It is no uncommon thing," said Scott, "for a man to be charged with derangement, when he begins to be truly wise, especially when he begins to reflect that he has an immortal and priceless soul, and makes it his great concern to secure its eternal happiness." He took the opportunity to explain to the major the change in his views since he entered the army, and in so doing, to set before him the way of salvation, with what effect, is not known.

One day the captain, being about to visit Berwick, took a letter from Mr. Romaine to a gentleman there named Powys, with whom Mr. Venn was then staying. Powys had known Scott well in former days, but was ignorant of the change that had taken place in his character. He was standing in the window, and saw the captain ride up in his uniform, and upon his military horse. "There is Captain Scott," said he, "what can he want here? I am determined I will not see him, if I can help it." He retired from the window; but as the captain inquired for him, he could not refuse to see him: he received him with an air of distant civility, regretting his presence, since it would be an interruption to the spiritual enjoyment of himself and friends. Scott handed him Romaine's letter. When he had read it, he ran and threw his arms around his guest, at the same time crying out, "Mr. Venn! Mr. Venn! Mrs. Powys! Mrs. Powys! Come here, come here quickly! Here is Captain Scott, a convert to Christ!" They came; and being informed of the contents of Romaine's letter, embraced the penitent, and, like the angels in heaven, rejoiced over him who had been dead, and was alive again; who had been lost, but was found.

After a while he sold his commission, and renounced all his hopes of military advancement for the nobler prospect of saving men by Christ crucified. He was one of the supplies at the Tabernacle for more than twenty years.

THE ONE CHERISHED SIN.—Often from my window on the sea-shore I have observed a little boat at anchor. Day after day, month after month, it is seen at the same spot. The tides ebb and flow, yet it scarcely moves. While many a gallant vessel spreads its sails, and, catching the favouring breeze, has reached the haven, this little bark moves not from its accustomed spot. True it is, that when the tide rises, it rises; and when it ebbs again, it sinks; but advances not. Why is this? Approach nearer, and you will see. It is fastened to the earth by one slender rope. There is the secret. A cord, scarcely visible, enchains it, and will not let it go. Now, stationary Christians, see here your state—the state of thousands. Sabbath's come and go, but leave them as before. Ordinances come and go; ministers come and go; means, privileges, sermons, move them not—yes, they move them; a slight elevation by a sabbath tide, and again they sink; but no onward, heavenward movement. They are as remote as ever from the haven of rest; this sabbath as the last, this year as the past. Some on sin enslaves, enchains the soul, and will not let it go. Some secret, unseen, allowed indulgence, drags down the soul, and keeps it fast to earth. If it be so, snap it asunder; make one desperate effort in the strength of God. Take the Bible as your chart, and Christ as your pilot, to steer you safely amid the dangerous rocks, and pray for the Spirit of all grace to fill out every sail, and waft you onwards over the ocean of life to the haven of everlasting rest.

Incident.—A few months since a lady belonging to this city went to New York and put up at one of the Broadway hotels. After going to her room for the night, she took out her pocket book and watch, laid them on the table and then sat down to read. While engaged in reading she thought she heard breathing from some one apparently near by, but finally, concluded it must be imagination. Soon after she commenced making preparations to retire, and in adjusting her hair she dropped one of her hair pins. While stopping to pick it up she discovered a hat under the bed, and a closer observation revealed to her sight the full length figure of a man. Without evincing emotion, she quickly threw a shawl over her shoulders, went out of the room, locking the door after her, and stepping into the hall she rang the bell which summoned to her assistance the proprietors, who called in the services of a police officer and the intruder was arrested. There was found on the prisoner a bottle of chloroform. He was convicted on the testimony of the lady, and sent to the State prison for six months. The sequel to the whole was in dropping the hair pin.—New Haven Journal.

KENNEDY'S MEDICAL DISCOVERY.—77
Great of the Age.—Mr. KENNEDY, of Roxbury, has discovered in one of our common pasture weeds, a remedy that cures EVERY KIND OF HUMOR, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple. He has tried it in over eleven hundred cases and never failed except in two. He has now in his possession over two hundred certificates of its value, all within twenty miles of Boston.

Two bottles are warranted to cure a nursing sore mouth.
One to three bottles will cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.
Two bottles will clear the system of biliousness.
Two bottles are warranted to cure the worst canker in the mouth and stomach.

Three to five bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of erysipelas.
Two to four bottles are warranted to cure all humor in the eyes.
Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches among the hair.

Four to six bottles are warranted to cure corrupt and running ulcers.
One bottle will cure scaly eruptions of the skin.
Two or three bottles warranted to cure the worst case of ringworm.

Two or three bottles are warranted to cure the most desperate cases of rheumatism.
Three or four bottles are warranted to cure the salt rheum.
Five to eight bottles will cure the very worst case of scrofula.

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle, and a perfect cure is warranted when the above quantity is taken. Nothing looks so improbable to those who have in vain tried all the wonderful medicines of the day, as that a common weed, growing in the pastures, and along old stone walls, should cure humor in the system; yet it is not a fiction. If you have a humor it has to start. There are no ifs and abouts about it, suiting some cases, but not yours. He has peddled over a thousand bottles of it in the vicinity of Boston, and knows the effect of it in every case. It has already done some of the greatest cures ever done in Massachusetts; and has seen poor, puny looking children, whose flesh was soft and flabby, restored to a perfect state of health by one bottle.

To those who are subject to a sick headache one bottle will always cure it. It gives great relief in catarrh and dizziness. Some who have taken it have been cured for years, and have been regulated by it. Where the body is sound, it is quite safe, but where there is any derangement of the functions of nature, it may cause very singular feelings, but you must not be alarmed—they always disappear in from four days to a week. There is never a bad result from its use on the contrary, when that feeling is gone, you will feel more like a new person. I heard some of the most extravagant encomiums of it that ever man listened to.

No change of diet ever necessary. Eat the best you can and enough of it.
