lead out of the valley of Baidar to the rear of the Russians. They hold the two only roads, one to the right, which goes to Markoul and Kuluz, and the other to the left, which runs by Ozenblush into the Tschouliou valley, and from there to the defiles of Aitodor and Mankup Kale. The Russians are still down a Markul, which is situated in the gorge formed by one of the feeders of the Belbek. They are, however, evidently only a strong grande garde, a few battalions, and the usual accompaniment of Cossacks. Towards Ozenblush the Russian outposts hold the plateau on the right bank of the little stream of Upu, overlooking the head of the Tschouliou valley. The outposts on both sides are so close to each other that shots are continually exchanged between them. The features of the country are particularly fit for such encounters, the heights being covered with brushwood, and the little ravines on all sides facilitating the approach of both parties. Both the roads which lead up from the Valley of Baidar to the north are only country roads, and, of course, nearly impassable in winter or after rain. Having taken up their offensive position, the French, with their usual foresight, have begun to make them both practicable for the march of an army. All these positions have been occupied by the French, without anything worth the name of a fight. They were only occupied by Cossack videttes, who, as usual, at the approach of a force retired. We have evidently not come to the line which the Russians intend to defend."

The ground about Sebastopol is an image on a small scale of the whole south of the Crimea. "It is a natural fortress," continues the writer, "which we are moreover attacking from the south, that is, its most difficult face. If you look at the map you will easily see that all the abrupt cliffs have more or less a southerly and the slopes a northerly direction. This is principally the case as regards the heart of the Russian position between Bakhshiserai and the north plateau. It is a succession of deep plateaux divided by gorges, through which the Tchernaya, the Belbek, and the Katcha, with all their feeders, find their way to the sea. With the exception of the road leading over Akyar or the Mackenzie heights, all the others follow the river courses. Most of the plateaux are too steep to be scaled by an army, so the defiles must be forced; and this seems the line the Russians have chosen all along for their defence. Our position at Baidar is only a convenient point approaching the Russian position. In that line of plateaux which extends from Bakhshiserai down to the north plateau of Sebastopol, from north-east to south-west, there are five approaches. First the double road leading up from Lukermann, the one straight, near the first Inkermann light, the other through the Trestrena valley, joining the Mackenzie road. The second is the Mackenzie road. The third is the pass of Aitodor and Mangup Kale. The fourth is the passage of the Belbek, by Kutubuk-Storen. The fifth, the defile of the Katcha, by Katchil Kale, and Pitskuk. Then come the rocky heights of Tshifut Kale and the Upper Alma, over which there are no roads except mountain passes to the north. One or more of these positions have to be forced if we wish to turn the Russian position to the north of Sebastopol from our position, unless we begin from the north.

A FRENCHMAN'S ACCOUNT OF THE ASSAULT. The Moniteur publishes a letter, dated from the Camp of Sebastopol, 14th, and written by an eyewitness of what had taken place at and after the assault. We extract from it the following interesting incidents:—

"One of the brave soldiers, in passing before the redoubt in which we were, asked us whether we could give him something to drink. We hastened to him, and were happy in having it in our power to offer him a little brandy. 'Gentlemen,' said he to the officers who stood around him, 'you must also have the kindness to pat it to my mouth, for you see my left arm is broken by the splinter of a shell; the bone will scarcely hold together, and I am compelled to support it with my right hand, and in fact he was holding up his bleeding and mutilated limb with the other hand. When he had drunk, we endeavoured to give him a few words of comfort, to which he replied, 'Oh! I know the end of it: an arm the less is but of little consequence since we have the victory.' He then thanked us and walked on, refusing to have any one to accompany him. This stoical simplicity was evinced by all the soldiers, and the generals and officers set an example of it. General Boubaki, who was wounded by a ball in the breast, was seen returning towards his tent, giving his arm to a wounded soldier; and a short time after we saw General de la Motterre, ex. who had been wounded in the head by the explosion of the curtain which unites Malakoff to the little Redan, arrive at the Lanceter Redoubt with his face covered with blood, accompanied by a colonel and a captain of the Imperial Guard, also wounded. They were walking, and, notwithstanding their severe sufferings, would not allow themselves to be carried. Another fact well worthy of mention took place near the Carreing port. The abutment is situated in the deepest and most abrupt part of the ravine, surrounded and commanded by enormous rocks, in the hollows between which habitations for the surgeons and officers attached to the ambulance had been prepared. A number of wounded soldiers might be slowly seen descending the steep path leading to the ambulance, carrying others of their comrades more severely wounded than themselves. When, in the night, the first explosion was heard from the Russians blowing up the works previously to their retreat, all the wounded who were passing at the time halted on the summit of the plateau to contemplate the view of Sebastopol in flames. Forgetful of their sufferings, they remained there the whole night, looking at the imposing scene. Among them was a sergeant of infantry, who was being conveyed to the ambulance in a litter. He felt assured that his wound was mortal, and although medical assistance might perhaps have prolonged his life for a day or two, he insisted on being set down to die at that spot. He was placed in a sitting position, the upper part of his body supported against a large stone, and his face turned towards the burning town. He contemplated the scene with the utmost delight, and soon after, feeling that his life was fast ebbing away, he rallied his remaining strength, took off his kepi, and waving it in the air, cried, 'Adieu, my friends, Sebastopol is ours! Vive la France! Vive l'Empereur!' and in a few minutes afterwards expired. A fact strikingly characteristic of the good feeling of our troops also took place. On the morning of the fire, a Zouave was seen proceeding towards the ambulance. He had received a ball in his leg, and was limping along, supporting himself by his musket. He was accompanied by two Russians more seriously wounded than himself, and to whom he was paying the utmost attention, and from time to time making them drink from the gourd slung at his back, accompanying the offer with these words, 'Come, drink, my poor fellow; what has happened is not your fault; you have done your duty as soldiers, and you are as brave as ourselves.' Such are the French soldiers; terrible during the fight, but kind and humane after the victory.

A YOUNG HERO AT THE REDAN. Lieutenant Massy, who only joined the headquarters of the Regiment lately, a chubby faced youth of sixteen years of age, led the Grenadiers of the 19th Regiment into action at the assault upon the Redan of the 8th instant. They came up to the support of the attacking columns. Nothing could exceed the bravery of this young fellow. He went on in front of his men, got across the ditch, and climbed to the parapet on the opposite side. The men fell thickly round him, but he escaped. He was one of the very last who retired. On his return, as he was mounting the counter-scarp, and just at the head of the natural glacis of the hill, some soldier caught hold of his leg to assist himself in mounting up. At that moment, a rifle ball struck young Massy in the left thigh. The bone was broken near the hip joint, and he was unable to extricate himself from his dangerous position. He crawled on a few yards, and there remained. The shot flew like hail around him. Young Massy kept quiet, and continued near to the spot where he had fallen. The afternoon was advancing, and a Russian soldier came to him, opened his coat to find if he had any valuables there, then sought for a watch or other things, but handled him so gently that Massy felt no fear respecting the man taking his life. At last he left him, taking his sword and haversack. This was the only Russian who came to him. Evening was advancing, when suddenly there was a terrific explosion, and there fell a large stone and struck poor Massy on the right thigh, the one not previously wounded. Subsequently he attracted the attention of one of the Highlanders, and after a short time was carried in a loose greatcoat to the trenches. There his wound was examined by an assistant-surgeon, and he was sent up on a stretcher to camp. He is going on favourably, but his wound is of a very dangerous character.

DOMESTIC. SHOCKING OCCURRENCE! TWO ATTENDANTS IN THE INSANE ASYLUM KILLED BY A LUNATIC!

The Executive have set aside the appointment by the Common Council, of J. M. Robinson, Esq., to the Common Clerkship of this City, and have given that office to W. R. M. Curtis, Esq. The office of the Common Clerk of the Peace, for the city and county, is given to the Hon. W. B. Kinnear. It is said that the Executive Government at its last meeting, agreed upon a Railway scheme, which is to be introduced at the next Session of the Legislature. In the mean time the Hon. Mr. Fisher, as delegate from the Government, and the Hon. John Robertson, as delegate from the E. and N. A. Railroad Company, are to proceed to England to arrange with the contractors, and to secure if possible money to build the various lines projected. Body FOUND.—The body of a man named John Mullin, aged 22 years, and belonging to Dipper Harbor, was found on Saturday morning on the beach near Blue Rock, Carleton. The young man had been missing since the 12th inst., and it is supposed that he was drowned on the evening of that day.—New.

Mrs. Vanderbil, No. 185 Suffolk Street, says of Dr. McLANE'S Celebrated Liver Pills. "I feel being unwell, and not know whether it proceeded from derangement of the liver, or mercurial poisoning, I was persuaded to purchase a box of Dr. McLANE'S Celebrated Liver Pills, and before I had used them all, was entirely relieved. I am now enjoying perfect health, and cheerfully recommend Dr. McLANE'S Celebrated Liver Pills to all similar afflicted. New York, March 25, 1852.

P. S. The above valuable remedy, also Dr. McLANE'S Celebrated Vermifuge, can now be had at a respectable Drug Store in this city.

Purchasers will please be careful to ask for, and take none but Dr. McLANE'S Vermifuge. All others, in comparison, are worthless. Sold in St. John by T. Walker & Son, and Chalmer & Hunt.

From the New York National Monitor of Feb. 21. Hygean Vapor. Dr. Curtis has done more to ameliorate the condition of humanity afflicted with Cong. complaint, than any other practitioner of medicine that has struggled with the secrets of the materia medica, for the last century, by the invention and perfection of an instrument that will convey to the lungs a medicine in the shape of a highly Medicated Vapor, which acts directly on the disease, and not, as hitherto, by sympathy. Those who are troubled with diseases arising from disordered lungs, will subserve their interests by giving the Hygean Vapor a trial.

Melancholy Accident. On Tuesday evening last, as Mr. Alexander Founda, stage-driver, was driving through St. Martins, on his return from St. John, just as he arrived at Mosher's Creek, which is crossed by a narrow bridge about nine feet high, without railings, he was met by Mr. Thomas Bradshaw, in a single-horse carriage, accompanied by three ladies (all daughters of Mr. Simon Vaughan, of Quaco), and there not being sufficient space on the bridge for the carriages to pass, Mr. Bradshaw's horse commenced backing, and unfortunately ran the carriage, with all the persons in it, off the bridge, the horse falling entirely over the carriage. One of the ladies, Mrs. Sarah Founda, widow of the late William H. Founda, was so injured in the fall that she died at 4 o'clock on Wednesday morning. None of the other persons were seriously injured. The darkness of the evening prevented the drivers from seeing each other's teams, and no blame is attached to any of the parties in this melancholy occurrence. Mrs. Founda retained her senses during the night, and died in hope of eternal life. She had lately united with the Baptist Church in St. Martins, and leaves a daughter about five years of age to mourn her loss. This sad accident has cast a gloom over a large number of mourning friends. How true, that in the midst of life we are in death.
