Poetry.

For the Intelligencer. HEAVEN.

There is a world, eye hath not seen Nor ear hath caught its sounds of joy, Where mortal footsteps ne'er hath been, Nor evil passions found employ.

Amid these scenes of dazzling light, Where chilling winds can never come There God dispels the shades of night, And one eternal day is known.

'Tis there the spotless Lamb of God, Sits on a throne of Heavenly light-The angelic host around him throng, With crowns unutterably bright.

Love reigns in every kindred breast, And peace and joy within them dwell; While rapturous songs of all the blest From the unnumbered host doth swell.

There pleasure never, never ends-The heavenly host in union blend, While o'er the blissful fields they roam

Who would not fight that he might reign In heaven, that hely happy place And that immortal prize to gain, And see his Saviour's smiling face. Studholm, Feb. 2, 1854.

TRUE GOLD. BY BY A BACKWOODS TRACHER, IN HOUGHTON, C. W. counsel thee to buy of me Gold tried in the fire that the mayst be rich.—Rev. 3rd, 13.

Come buy my Gold tried in the fire, Free from all earthly dross; Your thoughts will then to Heaven aspire, And glory in the Cross. 'Twill cleanse from sin's polluted stain,

And make you pure and white; Fit with your King and Priest to reign, In realms of endless light. Its influence given from above, Bids all our discords cease;

And makes us live in peace. 'Twill ease the conscience of its load, And make the burden light; Will lead you in the heavenly road,

Unites us in this world in love,

And keep your armour bright. Then come and buy—'tis cheap indeed,
The price you need not fear;
'Tis only that you feel your need,
And want a Saviour here.

Then turn not from this Gold aside. The great reward is sure-To reign with Christ the crucified, And live forevermore.

DIALOGUE. BETWEEN A FATHER AND HIS TWO SONS, EDWARD

Willie. Dear Father, you are to tell us in this conversation something about the Massacre of St. Bartholomew's Day in France.

Father. Yes, Willie, you may remember that we had reached that point when we stopped in our last conversation. But can you tell me when St. Bartholomew's Day occurs?

Eddie. It is the 24th day of August, and the Massacre, you told us, took place in year 1572wanting only eighteen years of being three centuries ago.

Father. The Massacre commenced about midnight, but lasted all of the 24th, and, indeed, more or less for several days, not only in Paris, but in many places throughout France.

Willie. Is it known how many people were

Father. No, my child-at least, not with certainty. It is not likely that the Government, which alone know anything like the exact number, was very desirous of telling how great it was. It has been estimated variously.
