EXTRACTS from Letters received from the wife of the Rev. William Croscomb to her son, relative to Dr. Noble's Invigorating Balm for the Hair, prepared by Fellows & Co., St. John, N. B.:

"Nov. 5, 1855.—And now I must tell you about the pot of Dr. Noble's Balm. I have used part of it, and it has really brought the hair on your father s head where it was quite bald, so that if it continues to grow he will soon have a good head of hair, which will add very much to his comfort, for you know he feels the least draft of air so very acutely." "Nov. 23, 1855.—I wish you would forward me by next steamer five pots of Dr. Noble's Baim. I used part of that you left me, on the top of your father's head; and although he was so very bald, it is now covered with hair. Three persons who have witnessed the wonderful effects of the halm, have requested me to send for a pot for each: I'will keep two, for I think it the best preparation I have ever used for children to cleanse and nourish the hair."

The Rev. William Croscomb is an aged and retired Wesleyan Clergyman residing at Windsor, N. S., and notwithstanding he has been confined to the house several years by disease, Dr. Noble's Balm acts no less certainly than on a perfectly healthy person.
