NO CROSS, NO CROWN! BY SEELDON CHAPWICK. "Twas eve, and in a lowly room

A student sat, in sombre gloom, Twirling his fingers in his hair. Like one in reverie or despair. Before him lay an open book ; Sadness was in his languid look ; And as he traced the pages o'er Four golden words his spirit bore-No Cross, no Crown !

Around, in deathlike silence stood The forms of many great and good-Prophets and marturs erucified ; Stern patriots, who for freedom died ; And poets, who died desolate, Scanning the wondrous scroll of fate ; While glory round their foreheads shone, He read upon their lips of stone-No Cross, no Crown !

Hard was the toil, through learning's lore, For one so young and worldly poor, His books were precious though but few : And deathless fire from heaven he drew. Heart-wearied oft, and overwrought, He traced in throbbing lines his thought ; And mid his toil this seemed to be The voice alone of destiny-No Cross, no Crown !

Sametimes his noble spirit turned Towards isme's pillar as it burned; And off he judged his effor s vain, To cross the burning bars of pain. He groaned in agonised distress; Life's cup was dashed with bitterness ; And then he thought of those of old Who carved in brass those words of gold-No Cross, no Crown !

They fought the battle, bore the Cross, That truth might never suffer loss, But, like the tempest-cradled flower, Spring through the storm-the martyr's dower-Souls that while bearoning the free, Sank like a lighthouse in the sea! But from their graves a spirit came, Uttering words of winged flame-No Cross, no Crown !

His soul sometimes would droop her wing. When envious arrows sped the sting ; But like a trumpet's martial strains His country's voice thrilled through his veins ; And heedless of the critic's ire, His heart glowed with immortal fire ; And like a man in earnest, he On Thought's Patmos toiled wearily-

" Jesus can make a dying bed Feel soft as downy pillows are."

Here are some verses I have written on the read them :

HOW EMMA DIED. Friends gathered around the bed of death.

Whereon a lovely and loved one lay : And as fainter grew her faltering breath.

Her angel spirit they strave to stay : But seraphs came from the better land. And beckoned to her with their shining hands,

And heavenly light beamed in her eyes, While her white lips murmared a prayer-" Jesus can make a dying bed

Feel soft as downy pillows are." The death-dew gathered above her brow.

The light in her glating eyes grew dim : The struggle came, she was dving now,
