Poetry.

"What wilt thou do in the Swelling of Jordan?"

Dark stream of death that is flowing
Between the bright city and me,
That boundest the path I am going—
Oh! how shall I pass over thee?—
When the cold s ormy waters rise over me,
And earth disappears from my sight—
When a cloud rises thickly before me
And veils all my spirits in night?

When the hands I love dearly are wringing,
The eyes all for me wet with tears,
The hearts that surround me stid clinging
And I, all misgivings and fear?—
E'er the warmth of that love be departed
That binds us so closely below,
Could I bear to see these broken-hearted,
Or feel all the stings of their woe?

Oh death! thou last portion of sorrow,
The prospect of heaven is bright,
And fair is the dawn of the morrow,
But stormy and dreadful the night.
Oh! thou who hast broken the power
Of this, the last victor of man;
Be with me in that solemn hour
Oh! grant me deliverance then.

The glory from Calvary streaming,
May shine o'er the cold sable wave,
And the faith that is oftentimes beaming
May shine through the gloom of the grave
And peace may shine cloudless above me
Then I think what my Saviour hath said,—
The Father himself desireth to love me,
And Jesus hath died in my stead!

With the prospect of meeting forever;
With the bright gates of heaven in view
From the dearest on earth, I could sever,
And smile a delightful adieu.
Then to enter the bright gates before me,
Up to Jesus my Saviour I'll go—
And sing with the angels in glory,
The songs that are not sung below.

Miscellany.

"I am so Happy"

Annie was for about four years a scholar in a Sabbath school, at a place called Coolie Bazaar, on the outskirts of Calcutta. Although she was thirteen years of age, you would scarcely have taken her for ten. She was a pale, delicate child; and I often thought, as I looked at her deep attention when divine things were the subject of conversation, that she was ripening for early glory.

Soon after her illness commenced, she said to her mother one day, "Mother, I once read in a tract that a doctor told a dying patient of his, 'I fear, sir, there is no hope.' 'I know, I know,' replied the despairing sinner, 'you say there is no hope for my body, and I feel there is no hope for my soul. No hope! no hope!' But oh mother," continued Annie, "how thankful I should be that, even though my body die, I have hope for my soul. Blessed Jesus through thee I have obtained this hope, and I shall not be ashamed."

Reading the Bible was her great delight; and she became too weak to hold the book she used to beg her friends to read to her, she would often exclaim, "How sweet! how beautiful! I want to see the glorious things that are written in this book."

On another occasion, at night, when the burning fever was so great as to cause excessive thirst, she said, as her mother got up to give her some tea, "Jesus will soon satisfy me with the water of life, of which, if a man drink, he shall never thirst again."

An hour passed, and Annie's mother was again awakened. She heard the most joyous sounds from her afflicted child, though at the time she was racked with bodily pain, "Happy, happy, happ! oh, I am so happy!" exclaimed the dying girl,

Dear young friends, you have heard David's testimony, that God gave him "songs in the night; and was it not so in Annie's experiance?

Her own simple account of God's dealings with her soul was to me very touching. She used to say, "About two years ago, I was much impressed with the necessity of religion by witnessing a solemn baptismal sevice, and I then determined to follow Christ. But soon I left the path he showed me, and followed Satan. Then God made me ill, and once more I seemed to come back to him; the again, when I got well, I wandered. Oh, how wicked I was! Yes, God had to make me ill once more, and to keep me ill, before I would give my heart wholly to him; but now I am his, and soon I shall be with him in glory."

Although Annie was so confident of her Saviour's love, she deeply felt her own sinfulness in the sight of God; so, that she would never allow any one to call her "a good girl;" and when the expression was used in her hearing, she would burst into tears, and exclaim, "Oh, I am so bad, so wicked; do not call me good!"

But I must hasten to the last solemn scene. On the evening before she died, a friend called to see her, and asked her how she did. "Weaker, but happier," was the reply. The night following was spent in restlessness and great bodily pain, and when the morning dawned, it was evident to all that it would not be long before her weary spirit would be at rest. Annie knew it to, and calling her little brother to her, she said, "Henry, here is my beautiful red and gilt Bible for you, which Mrs. B——— gave me last year. I thought that you would read it because of its pretty cover. Do read it, Henry, darling. You must forsake your naughty ways. I know this is difficult; but then, turning to her mother, as if she feared she had hurt her,—so gentle does Christianity make its followers,—by giving away her most costly treasure to another, she said, My old Bible is for you, mother. You don't care about the pretty binding, I am sure; it is more for a child, is it not?" On her mother's assuring her she had acted quite right, she seemed satisfied, and said, "Mother, you will meet me in heaven. Oh how delightful that will be!"

The stupor of death was fast overpowering her bodily senses; but making one last effort, she threw her arms round the neck of her cousin,—a girl many years older than herself,—and begged and entreated her to be a Christian, saying, "Oh, Maria, 'seek the Lord while he may be found:' he is so precious on a dying bed" She then asked her mother to read her the hymn in which these words occur,

"Nothing in my hands I bring,
Simply to the cross I cling."

When this request had been complied with, the dear child fell back on her pillow, and softly murmured, I am going to sing the new song, 'Worthy is the lamb that was slain' * * * 'When thou passest throug the waters I will be with thee' * * * 'In my Father's house are many mansions.' Oh, my Father, I bless thy name! I thank thee, I thank thee, my Father!" And with these sweet words on her lips, her spirit passed away from earth to worship at the throne of God in heaven.—Juvenile Instructor.

Rum's Doings.

Not long since, writes a minister in Philadelphia, to the Pittsburg Advocate, "just as I was in the application of my sermon, when a deep solemnity seemed to rest upon the congregation, a man entered the door opposite the middle aisle, and, depositing his hat in a pew, walked deliberately into the altar, and taking his position in front of the communion-table, drew a five or six-barrel revolver from beneath his coat! Up to that moment I had continued to speak, though the movements of the intruder had evidently gotten the attention of the people. As he drew the pistol out, some supposed he was going to shoot me, some that he was a madman about to shoot into the congregation, and what others thought it is difficult to tell! Some fell to the floor, to be screened from bullets, some were petrified with fear, many rushed for the doors, and many frightened females and children screamed without stint of lungs. The poor fellow, however, had no intention of injuring any one but himself. As I stood immediately above him, I saw him distinctly turn his pistol and place the muzzle against his left breast! Fortunately for him and others, the cap smashed without exploding, and before he had time to re-arrange for the fulfilment of his suicidal purpose, the deadly weapon was taken from him. Every barrel was loaded, and two of them doubly so! He had been a member of the church, and some fifteen months since had fallen by the power of strong drink! He was the first to report his fall to me, and I did not expose him. For a year he gave evidence of a genuine reformation. He has recently fallen again, and doubtless under a sense of shame and remorse, more than half demented, selected the altar of God on which to immolate himself as a desperate atonement to the church! He is now in a hospital. God be merciful to him and his family."

The advocate of Cincinnati has the following: We met a man on the cars of the Little Miami railroad a few weeks since. He seemed to have a generous soul; his lips poured forth warm words for religion and education, and we got a glow in conversation with him. What were his circumstances? He was owner, by his own confession, of three farms, worth $12,000 a piece, and he had with him at the time, as we know, $5,000 in gold, the result of a successful speculation. How much ought that man to give annually to the support of benevolent and religious enterprises? One per cent of what he is worth, or three, or five or ten? The Bible says a tithe, or a tenth, is the lowest any Christian man should give. One per cent of $41,000 is $410; three per cent of the same is $1,230; five per cent is $2,050; and ten per cent is $4,100; But how much, think you, unsuspecting reader, does that man give annually to the support of the Gospel? By inquiry we found out a week or two after the interview. It was the infinitely mean pittance of $2 a year.

A Gambler.

Among the innumerable anecdotes related of the ruin of persons at play, there is one worth relating which refers to a Mr. Porter, a gentlemen who in the reign of Queen Anne, possessed one of the best estates in the county of Northumberland, and the whole of which he lost in twelve months.

According to the story told of this madman, for we can call him nothing else—when he had just completed the loss of his last acre at a gambling house in London, and was proceeding down the stairs to throw himself in to a carriage to convey him home to his house in town, he resolved upon having one more throw, to try to retrieve his losses, and immediately returned to the room where the play was going on. Nerved for the worst that might happen, he insisted that the person he had been playing with should give him one more chance of recovery or fight with him.

His proposition was this, that his carriage and horses, the trinkets and loose money in his pockets, his town house plate and furniture, in short all he had left in the world—should be valued in a lump at a certain sum, and be thrown in a single cast. No persuasion could prevail on him to depart from his purpose. He threw and lost, then conducting the winner to the door, told the coachman there was his master, and marched forth into the dark and dismal streets without house or home, or any one creditable means.

Thus beggar'd, he retired to an obscure lodging in a cheap part of the town, subsisting partly on charity, sometimes acting as marker at a billiard table, and occasionally as a helper in a livery stable. In this miserable condition, with nakedness and famine staring him in the face, exposed to the taunts and insults of those whom he once supported, he was recognized by an old friend who gave him ten guineas to purchase necessaries.

He expended five in procuring decent apparel, with the remaining five he repaired to a common gaming house, and increased them to fifty; he then adjourned to one of the higher order of houses, sat down with former associates, and won twenty thousand pounds. Returning the next night he lost it all, and was once more penniless, and after subsisting many years in abject penury, died a beggar at St. Giles.

To Dr. Benjamin Leary,

Dear Sir—I strained my Chest on a raft which I was running from Woodstock to Fredericton, and when I arrived at the latter place I was wholly unable to do any manner of l bour: and was under serious apprehension of not being able to do anything for a long period of time. But being persuaded to try a bottle of your Albion Liniment, I procured one from Smith and Atherton, and did not apply more than one half of it on my chest before I was completely cured. The cure was to quick, and the relief so sensible, that I can recommend it to all who may be in the same condition that I was. Your most obedient servant,

ALWAYS SOMETHING NEW.

Read this—Old and Young.

Professor Wood's Hair Restorative is, no doubt, the most wonderful discovery of this age of progress, for it will restore, permanently, gray hair to its original color, cover the head of the bald with a most luxurious growth, remove at once all dandruff and itching, cure all scrofula, and other cutaneous eruptions, such as scald head, etc. It will cure, as if by magic, nervous or periodical headache; make the hair soft, glossy, and wavy, and preserve the color perfectly, and the hair from falling, to extreme old age. The following is from a distinguished member of the medical profession.

St. Paul, January 1, 1855.

Professor O. J. Wood—Dear Sir,—Unsolicited, I send you this certificate. After being nearly bald for a long time, and having tried all the hair restoratives extant, and having no faith in any, I was induced, on hearing of yours to give it a trial. I placed myself in the hands of a barber, and had my head washed with a good stiff brush, and the Restorative then applied and well rubbed in, till the scalp was aglow. This I repeated every morning, and in three weeks the young hair appeared, and grew rapidly from August last till the present time, and is now thick, black and strong—soft and pleasant to the touch; whereas, before it was harsh and wiry, what little there was of it, and that little was disappearing very rapidly. I still use your Restorative about twice a week, and shall soon have a good and perfect crop of hair. Now, I had read of these things—and who has not? but have not seen hitherto any case where any person's hair was really benefitted by any of the hair tonic, etc. of the day; and it really gives me pleasure to record the result of my experience. I have recommended your preparation to others, and it already has a large and general sale throughout the territory. The people here know its effects, and have confidence in it. The supply you sent us, as wholesale agents for the territory, is nearly exhausted, and daily inquiries are made for it. You deserve credit for your discovery; and I, for one, return you my thanks for the benefit it has done me, for I certainly had despaired long ago of ever effecting any such result.

Yours, hastily, J. W. BOND.

[From the Editor of the Real Estate Advertiser]

Boston, 27 School-street, March 29, 1856.

Dear Sir,—Having become prematurely quite gray, I was induced, some six weeks since, to make a trial of your Restorative. I had used less than two bottles, and the gray hairs have all disappeared; and although my hair is not fully attained its original color, yet the process of change is gradually going on, and I am in great hopes that in a short time my hair will be as dark as formerly. I have also been much gratified at the healthy moisture and vigor of the hair, which before was harsh and dry; and it has ceased to come out as formerly. Respectfully yours,

Professor Wood. D. C. M. RUPP.

Carlyle, Illinois, June 19, 1855.

I have used Professor Wood's Hair Restorative, and have admire its wonderful effect. My hair was becoming, as I thought, prematurely gray, but by the use of his "Restorative," it has resumed its original color, and I have no doubt, permanently so.

Steam Sash and Door Factory,
HARDING STREET.

John R. Stuart & Co. would respectfully inform his friends and the public generally, that they have recently taken the Steam Sash Factory in Harding street lately occupied by Clarke & McAlpine, and formerly by John E. Turnbull, where they have on hand a large stock, and are continually manufacturing all kinds of DOORS, SASHES, and WINDOW Frames, which upon inspection, will be found of a superior quality, and as such they will be warranted, as it is the determination of the Subscribers to furnish their Patrons with such work as will reflect credit upon themselves and the establishment, and do away with the prejudice that exists against Machine Work. Parties contemplating building will find that they can obtain Doors and Sashes of a superior quality at our establishment far cheaper than they can get them made by hand. Joiners doing business in the country can have Sashes glazed or unglazed, packed to order in such a manner as will ensure their safety.

Remember the stand, Harding street, opposite the South-west corner, Queen's square, and give us a call.
